Recycling is efficient

To the Editor:

ELIMINATE 50% OF THE SOLID WASTE STREAM requiring disposal. Sound impossible?

Well, that's what the people of Wilton, New Hampshire and surrounding towns, 9,000 people in New Hampshire's southern tier, are doing now and have been doing for the past several years.

The first part of this amazing story was requiring everyone in the town to recycle. And that's what the Recycling Committee is asking you to support . . mandatory recycling for Cohasset businesses and residents.

Recycling is not just environmentally sound, it makes economic sense . . savings for every taxpayer in the town.

Future cost estimates for disposing of our rubbish once the Cedar Street Landfill is closed are $135/Ton for the 4,000 tons a year we presently bury. The annual disposal cost for those 4,000 tons in the future will be more than a half million dollars a year. If recycling reduced the waste by 50%, the savings would be over a quarter of a million dollars a year. Over a twenty year contract with a resource recovery facility like SEMASS, the savings would be $5 Million.

Even before our trash is taken to a resource recovery facility, mandatory recycling would affect considerable savings for our present landfill operations. The budget for cover material for FY 89 is $100,000. If our waste stream is reduced by 50%, we should see a savings of $50,000 in cover material alone in a single year.

There would, of course, be increased labor costs associated with recycling, but they are minimal compared to the savings. The Committee sees immediate mandatory recycling for the following items: newspaper, corrugated cardboard, glass, aluminum and metals. We already recycle everything but cardboard on a voluntary basis.

Thanks for making race a success

To the Editor,

On behalf of the Rotary Club and The Roadrace Committee I wish to express our most sincere gratitude and appreciation to the residents of Cohasset for their support and warm reception of the Race on Sunday. The efforts of Harold Litchfield, Peter Laugelle, Steve Wigmore, the Animal Control Officer, the Police and Fire Departments create an atmosphere in which we can all take great pride. Special thanks to the Mariner, Steve Hart, Don Harrold, John Muncey, John Sadler and Roy Fitzsimmons, without their planning and participation the event could not take place. Again, our thanks for making Cohasset the special place it has become to so many runners.

Gratefully

Pinewood Derby results

Pack 38 Cub Scouts held their Pinewood Derby Race at the Deer Hill School March 26. Months prior to the race each scout was given a Derby kit so they could carve their cars. With the help of parents, friends and family each scout helped to carve, sand and paint his car. Each car was officially weighed in and registered prior to the big event.

The winners of the race were:

First Grade . . . First Place - Ben Smoat, Second - Todd Bestick, (Tiger Cubs) Third - Brendon Hall.

Second Grade . . . First Place - Andrew Ross, Second -Eric Wenmark, Third - Gabrial Hall.

Third Grade . . . First Place - Matt Conley, Second - Bobby Meehan, Third - Ryan McWilliams.

Fourth Grade . . . First Place - Greg Schultz, Second -Todd Harrington, Third - David Marr.

Fifth Grade . . . First Place - Trevor Cook, Second - Brendon Kinchla, Third - J.C. Parzyk.

The winner over all for grades two through five was Matt Conley.

Each of the winners will be presented with a trophy at the next Pack Meeting, April 27 at the Deer Hill School.

Jeff Forsdick, the Pack 38 Cubmaster, and Earle Bestick, The Webelos Leader, conducted the Race. Carol Bestick and Linda Farrag registered the cars and Richard Towle weighed them. David Farrag, Scott Herzog and Earle Bestick from Troop 28 helped to judge the race. Many thanks to all those who helped make the race fun and successful for the Scouts. Alice McWilliams and her scouts were generous in supplying cookies to the racers.

Sullivan a health board candidate

Michael Sullivan is a candidate for a three-year term on the Board of Health.

As a concerned citizen he has been involved with the technical and legal issues associated with the landfills in Cohasset and their impact on the community.

Sullivan currently manages his own executive search business which he started in 1985. Prior to 1985 he held management positions at Fidelity Investments and Prime Computer. Sullivan also holds a B.S. in Business Administration.

The most significant issues facing the board of health during the next three years will be the protection of our water supply, solid waste, landfills, and sewers (leaching fields and septic systems), he believes.

A coffee was held March 20 at the home of Jack and Sue McNamara. The issues generating the most discussion were our water supply.landfills,solid waste, sewage (septic systems and leaching fields), and the need to have town boards work closer together.

In regard to the town's water supply, Sullivan feels the town should institute more effective monitoring systems to insure there are no dangerous contaminants flowing toward Lilly Pond.

"It is my feeling that town boards should make a concerted effort to work closer together to avoid inconsistencies, contradictions, and or duplication of effort," he said.

Sullivan feels we should explore the possibility of utilizing innovative more cost effective techniques to build and repair septic systems and leaching fields. Current repair expenses can range between $10,000 and $30,000.

As a parent and a taxpayer, Sullivan is committed to protect the environment and maintaining the strong quality of life we all enjoy in Cohasset.

Sullivan, his wife Mary and their three children reside on Fairoaks Lane.

According to the health board candidate, he would provide a business perspective." I hold a Bachelor's of Science in Business Administration and currently manage my own business. Prior to starting my own business I held management positions at Prime Computer and Fidelity Investments," he said.

"Because of my concern for the community, I have become very involved with the technical and legal issues associated with the landfills in town and their respective impact on the community.

"As a parent and a taxpayer I am committed to protecting the environment and maintaining the quality of life in Cohasset," Sullivan added.

According to the candidate, the most significant issues facing the board of health during the next three years are: Protection of our water supply; - Sewage (leaching fields, septic systems); and Landfills, Transfer Station, Recycling.

As a Board member Sullivan said he would focus on the following areas: develop programs to closely monitor the flow of water toward Lilly Pond in order to effectively protect our water supply; work toward finalizing the agreements and plans to transport non-recyclable waste; institute an effectively managed recycling program; explore the possibilities of utilizing innovative more cost effective techniques to build and repair septic systems and leaching fields; work closely with other town boards to ensure decisions are made which will maintain the esthetic and environmental quality of Cohasset.

Pre-school story hours

The spring story hour series for children 3 1/2 to 5 years will begin Thursday April 28 and Friday April 29 at 10 a.m. in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Each of the programs will include several picture book stories, a simple finger play, song or craft, and will last approximately 45 minutes.

Children may register for either the Thursday or Friday sessions which run five weeks, through the end of May. Children must be 3 1/2 years old. Call the library (383-1348) any afternoon to register.

Mrs. Price's 'R' students

Caitlin Stansell ripped the red ribbon off of the red rubbish barrel that her brother Robert gave her, this morning, for her 6th birthday. The class loved wearing the pretty birthday hats Caitlin's mom made for her birthday. Thanks mom.

Andrei Skorupa brought a rook from his very own chess set. We understand Andrei is a terrific chess player.

Ethan Begley enjoyed eating his R words — raisins.

Rockey Racoon was brought to class by his special friend Jessie Zerendow.

We all enjoyed the story Melissa Pyform wrote and read to us about riding her bike 4 miles.

Sean O'Hara had a ratchet to make his red racing car race faster.

Super students share 'S' words

Steven Maynard brought sardines in a can. Steven guessed that there were seven sardines.

Ethan Begley shared the story he wrote of the 3 S Bears — Snoozy, Sneezy and Snazzy.

Liam O'Donnell enjoyed the story he wrote about Se, The Snake.

Aryanna Afshar made a snake puppet from a sock.

Danny Sullivan shared a great ink drawing of a spider spinning his spider web trying to catch Spider Man.

Kristen Devine — wrote a super story about sea shells and Sandy Beach. She even brought in some sea shells for us to see.

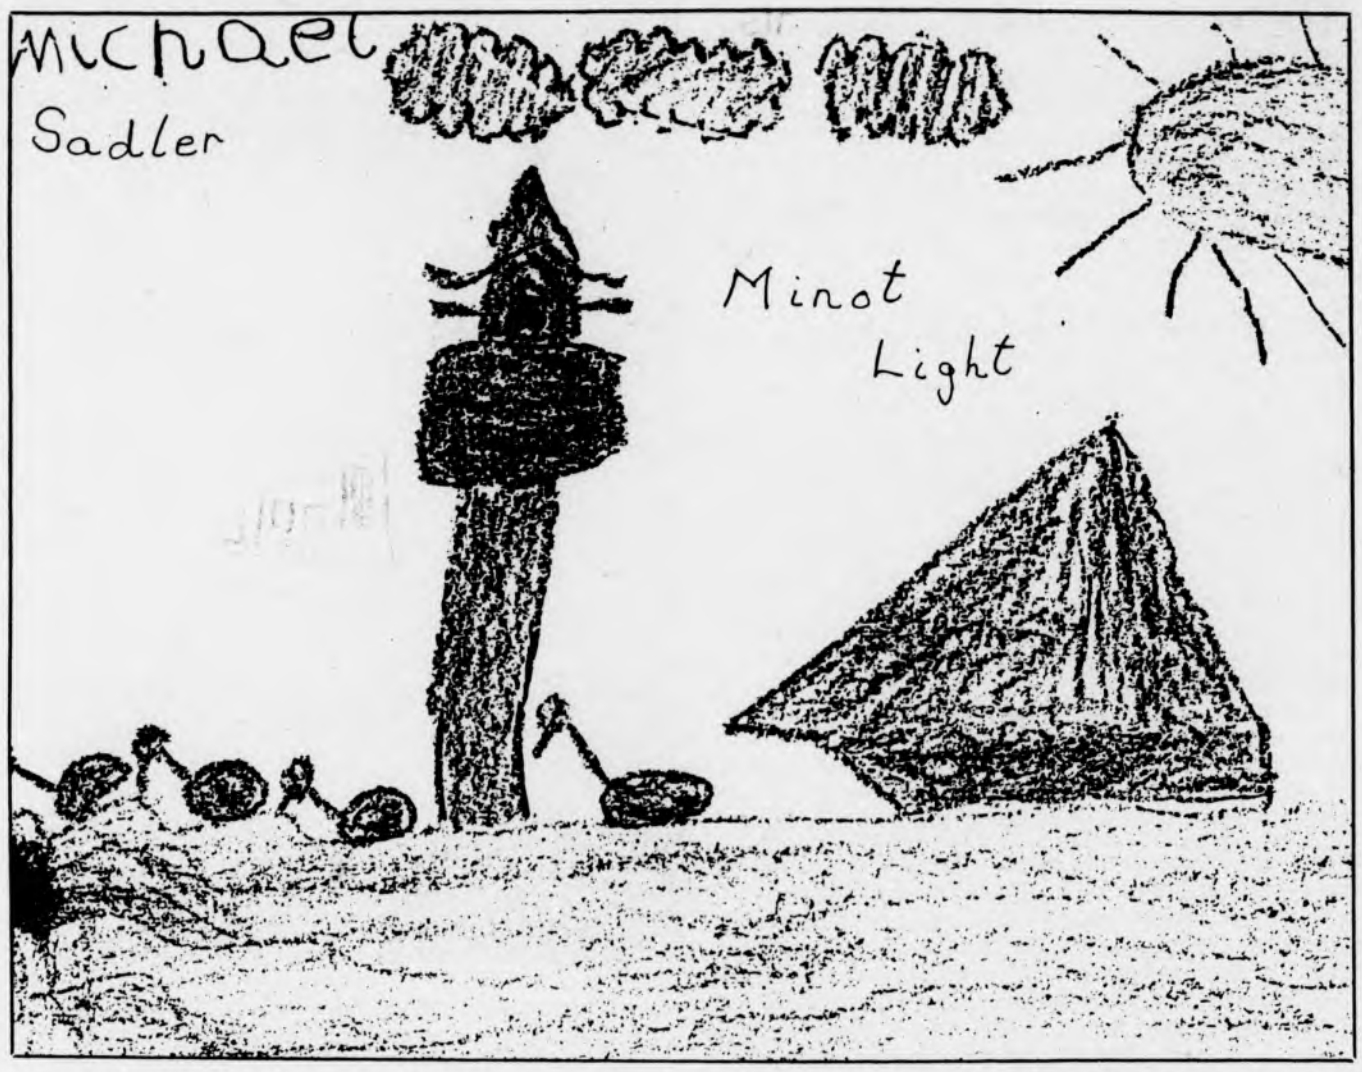
Melissa Pyfrom shared some sea glass she found scattered on the sand.

Andrew McAuliffe shared some shiny star stickers.

Seen around school sporting sparkling S's were: Steven Maynard, Sarah Bertovich, Sean Ian O'Hara.

Peer Helpers' Conference

The following Cohasset High students: Michele Casolaro, Ned Chase, Laurel Collins, Peter Crowley, Erica Ford, Kerry Kirkendall, Jason Marsal, Erin Monaghan, Steve Myers, Leslie, O'Grady, and David Shumaker, Joy Turner, Panelists; and Mary Babaian, Anne Porter, advisors, attended the first annual Massachusetts Peer Helpers' Conference. It was held Wednesday, March 16, at Framingham State College, in Framingham, Massachusetts.



These students are trained in the arts and skills of becoming helping persons. They learn to listen, and to respond with love to their peers, to their teachers, their parents, and to everyone with whom they come in contact. They do one-on-one counseling, they tutor, they do workshops, dialogues, and impromptu skits to deliver messages. They learn in their training that they count as human beings, and that they can have an impact on others by supporting them, by letting them know that they too are worthwhile, they too, count as human beings.

P.S.O. Phone-a-thon set

The Parent School Organization will conduct its annual fund-raising phone-a-thon from 7-9:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 6.

Local realtors have donated the use of their offices and telephones to allow volunteers to call school families.

Last year's phone-a-thon raised funds to provide such extras as Artist of the Month, trips to the Berklee Performing Arts Center, Metco Host Family Programs, teacher grants, Great Books, the school calendar, career lectures for high school students, and much more.

Volunteers, recruited by the P.S.O., assist in the classrooms, libraries, labs, and computer rooms.

Please show your support for the many activities that enrich your child's education by making a generous, tax deductible pledge!

Thanks to Deer Hill Students

A special thank you goes to Jon Ford and Jessie Sammon, two of Deer Hills's sixth graders. They visited a third grade class at Osgood (Mrs. Montouri's) and answered questions regarding the differences between the two schools.

Many of the third graders are anxious about the forthcoming change, but through Jon and Jessie's efforts much of that fear is gone.

Osgood thanks Deer Hill

Liz Deveney, Megan Breens and Mike Riley, three Deer Hill sixth graders, visited Osgood School Wednesday, March 24. The purpose of this visit was help the third graders with their upcoming transition to grade 4.

"What is gym like?" "Will I get stuffed into a locker?" "Are the teachers nice?" "Do you get alot of homework?" are some of the questions the sixth graders answered.

Liz spoke to Mrs. Schallhauser's students while Mike and Megan spoke to Mrs. Alcott's students. The boys and girls of Osgood want to thank these students for helping to prepare them for their new school.

Whispers and Shadows

Look for the third annual edition of Whispers and Shadows to be published this spring. The following are excerpts from the 1987 arts magazine:

One More Piece of Garbage Couldn't Hurt

"Momma, can't I please just have one more sip?" the child croaked.

The mother, looking quickly at the empty flask, gazed at her last child tenderly and answered, "There isn't any left."

"But Momma, there's so much here. Why can't I have any?" she sobbed, her eyes rolling to look at the pond.

The mother also gazed at the pond with it's lifeless brown surface. She, too, longed to take a long drink of it, even though the sight of it repulsed her. It would only make the inevitable more painful and drawn out.

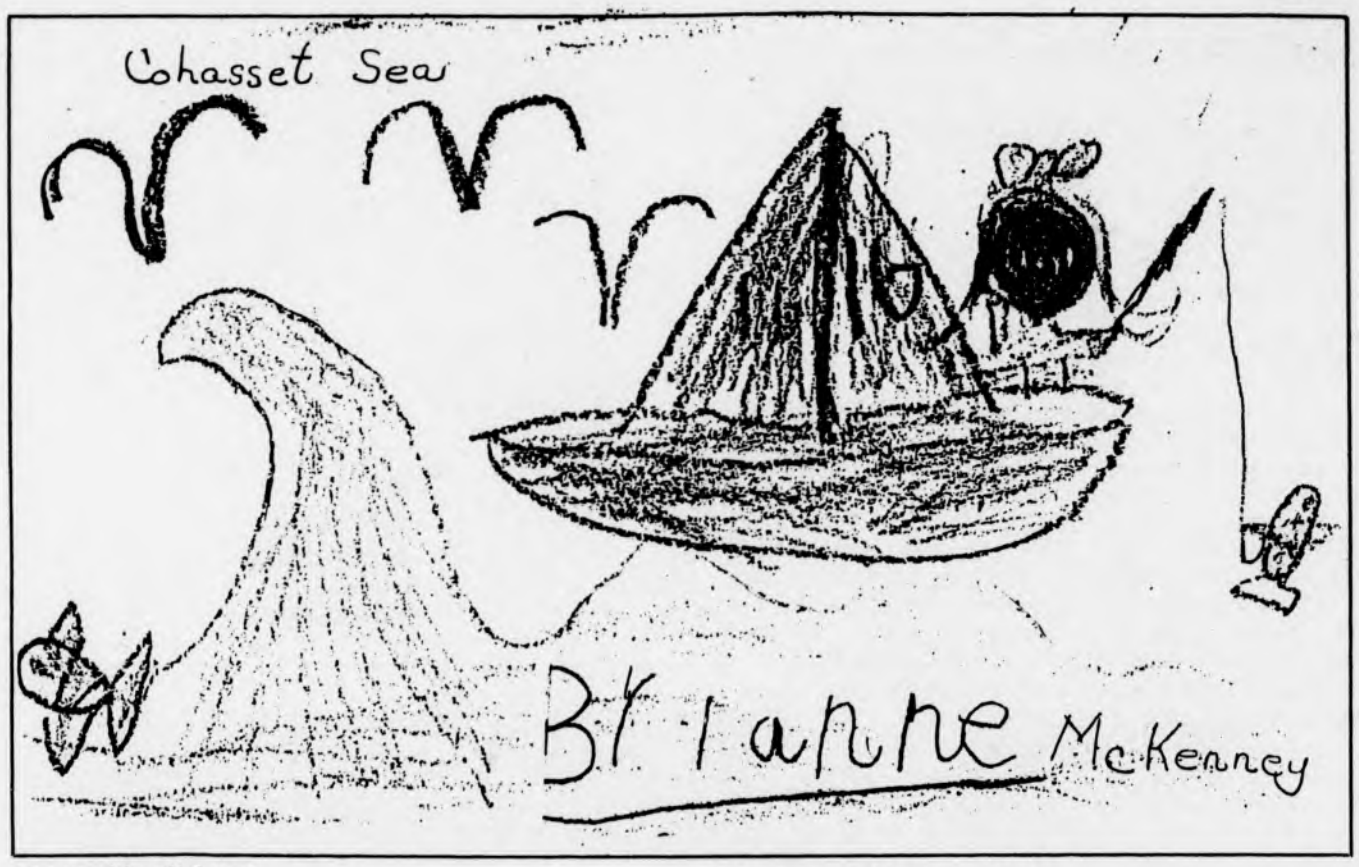
It had not always been this way. She remembered a time when clear, clean water was used not only to drink but to wash dishes and animals, even water lawns. Faceless voices had warned of the coming disaster, but no one heeded them. Generations of apathy had filled the water supplies with everything from garbage to oil to waste chemicals.

For years the attitude had been "One more piece of garbage can't hurt." Even some scientists had said that if it was regulated and put far enough out, garbage could be safely dumped into the ocean. However, when the waterlife began to dwindle, people finally started to realize their mistake. But it was too late. The antiquated purifying plants, which were understaffed and broken down, were not doing their job. Soon people began to die from the poisoned water; not in some third world nation but in the United States of America. This time money could not solve the problem, for time had run out for the necessary technology to be developed.

Eventually most of the plants and animals died. Those that had survived were grotesquely deformed with tumors and mutations they had adapted for their survival. These mutations made the food supply practically inedible so the human race slowly died out. Hindsight is twenty-twenty. . .

"Shhh. . ." the mother soothed the child, rocking the alabaster angel in her own emaciated arms and praying for sweet death to take them both away soon.

Mary McElroy



Don't Step On Me

i have come to face the fact That i will never be tall.
i realize that i am doomed to be forever small.
someday someone will step on me and i won't be small-i'll be very tiny.
i'll be ignored forever by giants of five foot five the world will forget that i'm alive.
so i thought i'd warn you to tread very carefully-and whatever you do,
don't step on me.
i know i'm hard to see but i'm down here nonetheless and i would prefer my height not to become even less.
i never complain when your shadow blocks the light or when you take up too much space-but keep it up, and i might.
so leave my height alone-
and let me just repeat,
"when you know that i'm around watch where you put your feet!"

Alison Crehan

Dreams

of romantic walks along the beach and sandcastles that have been,
of endless nights under the stars and the deep gazes into your eyes

I dream a continuous dream.
The dream that will never be seen through the handful of romances and the sweet embraces through the caring eyes and loving word

I dream a continuous dream.
The dream that will never be seen and all the searching, the hoping and the waiting

I still have not found the one the one that will end my dream.
And as I stare out the clouded window.

I dream a continuous dream,
the dream that will never be seen

The Wild

There it went,
A long low howl of death.
There goes another and another;
These comrades come together in chorus.
Sounds like a pack of them
Rejoicing over the freshly killed meat.
Wild they are.
Wild for centuries of running free
Over terrain with no boundaries.
Killed they are.
Shot for their pelts,
And trapped by man and his boundaries.

Dinosaur stories

Children in Mrs. Moody's class have been learning about dinosaurs this month. The following stories are examples of creative writing on a kindergarten level.

DINOSAUR FINDS A TREASURE CHEST

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He carefully walks down the path. As he walked along he found a treasure chest inside a big, spooky cave. While exploring the chest he began to hear scary noises. It was too dark to see inside the chest, so he carried it back down the secret path to his house. The chest had a big lock so the dinosaur smashed open the chest with his tail. He was so happy to find the chest was full of gold! He decided to save the gold until he needed it. He hid it in his closet on the shelf where it would be safe until he really needed it.

DINOSAUR'S BIRTHDAY

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As she passed by a tall building she saw a secret path. As she ran down the path she found a door. She opened the door and saw all the dinosaurs having a party. They shout "Surprise and Happy Birthday" to her. Cindy, the dinosaur had forgotten it was her birthday. She sits down and they share cake and ice cream. They play games and she opens presents. Her best present was a little baby dinosaur. She brought the baby a real crib and took care of him forever, with help from her dinosaur friends.

THE DINOSAUR AND THE TREE

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He decided to go down the path. He saw a delicious pine tree and took a bite of a branch. The tree came alive and was mad. The tree chases the dinosaur down the hill and tries to bite his tail. The dinosaur apologizes to the tree. The tree says "all right." They become friends and walk to the store together and eat all the food in the store.

THE LIFE OF ANKYLOSAURUS

One day Ankylosaurus was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He carefully walked down the path keeping his eye on all the doors for Tyrannosaurus Rex. As he walked by a big door with a rock blocking it a Sabre-Tooth Tiger jumped out at him. Ankylosaurus used his clubbed tail to knock out the tiger's two teeth. Ankylosaurus ran until a Brontosaurus and a Pteranodon jumped out at him. Again Ankylosaurus won the battle. Ankylosaurus leaves the secret path and returns to Dinosaur land where Triceratops damages him and he loses the battle. Ankylosaurus crawls off toward the dark trees of Dinosaur land and dies.

DINOSAUR MAKES NEW FRIENDS

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. The dinosaur skipped down the path very fast. Along the way he meets three new dinosaurs playing beside a building. He introduces himself and they become friends. They played games together all morning. At lunch time all the dinosaur friends went home for lunch. They made plans to meet on the secret path after lunch. Dinosaur ran all the way home to tell his mother all about the new friends he met on the secret path.

THE MYSTERY OF THE MISSING JEWELRY

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As she passed by a tall building she saw a secret path. She slowly walked down the secret path. As she walks down the path she finds some jewelry. She stops and tries it on. She likes it and decides to keep it. She walks further down the secret path until she finds another path. She follows the next path and finds it leads to her home. She ran up the stairs and into the house where she shows her parents the jewelry. She happily keeps the jewelry forever.

Thanks for your attention. We simply want to tell you about dirty chimneys. In one year more than 60,000 chimney fires burned in the United States with deaths from these fires increasing at a rate of 69%.

Dirty chimneys can burn — and take human lives. That's why you should give us a call for an inspection of your solid fuel heating system. The inspection could reveal a dangerous chimney.

If it does, we'll sweep that chimney with precise brushes and our powerful "SootSweeper" Dust Collector. Cleanliness guaranteed!

Jerry Williams at Chamber

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has a limited number of tickets on sale for its "Jerry Williams" night, which will take place at Hugo's Lighthouse, Wednesday, April 13.

Williams, a noted radio personality and a Marshfield resident, has a real grasp of South Shore issues and will be sure to hit lots of nails on the head.

To ensure yourself and your friends a seat, mail a check for $5.00 to The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 336, Cohasset 02025. Or make your reservation at Cards and Shards. The evening will begin at 7:30 p.m. Light refreshments will be served.

This will be an excellent occasion for Cohasset residents to meet members of business groups and town officials from Hingham, Scituate and Hull.

Quilters welcome to join

Quilting help is offered at the Cohasset Community Center Thursday mornings from 10:15 to 12:15.

Beginners learn the basics on a project of their choice. Others work on quilts, pillows, hangings. All enjoy the sharing and stimulation of working in this friendly helpful group.

Everyone is invited to join, regardless of town. A new session begins Thursday, April 7.

Call Kathy Bryanton, COA Director at 383-9112, or drop by the Center for information and registration.

Workshop for women

A workshop, "Women At Midlife: A Kaleidoscope of New Directions," will be held Monday, April 11 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church. It is open to all South Shore women.

The image of the kaleidoscope is an appropriate one for the workshop geared for women at midlife who may feel confused about their changing roles as they move beyond the child-rearing stage of their lives.

The workshop involves written exercises with short presentations and group discussions, all designed to enable women to examine their lives and make decisions about the future. The written exercises will help individuals to focus on themselves and learn where they are now and what their options may be.

The topics will include issues facing women at midlife (empty nest syndrome, caring for aging parents, sexuality, the aging process, career moves and changes), women's developmental stages, the search for identity, philosophical and spiritual needs and the challenges and opportunities in planning for the future.

Three clinical social workers will lead the program. They are: Amy Arman Cohen, a gradute of Simmons College School of Social Work, who works with women dealing with midlife issues and with couples who have marital problems. Ellen Gillis, A graduate of Boston University School of School Work, who specializes in counseling for depression, anxiety, separation, loss and grief. Pam Marino, a graduate of Boston College School of Social Work and Andover Newton Theological Seminary, who is on the faculty of several colleges working with continuing education programs.

The workshop is sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset.

Reservations are on a first come-first serve basis and may be made by sending a check for $10 to the Social Service League, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, 02025. Coffee and dessert will be served. Participants may bring their own sandwich. Additional information may be obtained by calling 383-0771.

A geographer's view of the world

Geography studies the world as the home of humans.

When you close your eyes can you visualize the beauty of spring on the South Shore? The maples, even during the winter, keep a hint of red and the birch family hold their yellow leaves. Those relieve the greys and browns.

Then the red buds come along, the very delicate greens, the yellows of the willows, the early white of the pussy willows, and then the startling yellows of forsythia. By then, greens of a whole range of shades and intensities appear, and within a week or two there are cherry whites and pinks, maple florets, and of course, the yellow jonquils setting off the green of the renewed lawns.

As a startling display, the candelabra of the horse chestnut put a marker on the progress toward summer. Even when all the trees are green, there are subtle differences among them, along with striking contrasts between the dark evergreens and the lighter deciduous trees. (Had you noticed that even the larch) — which is a conifer like the white pines, but loses its needles in winter — is a lighter green than the other evergreens?

I won't even try to suggest the color changes that come with late summer and fall. There are other parts of the world that have a special beauty, but world travelers tell us that New England's seasonal leafing and losing is unmatched. When that is associated with the salt marshes, beach grass and roses, and the pallet full of blues, greens, greys, creams, and even blacks of the ocean, the South Shore is in a superbly beautiful spot.

There are many of us who have tried to live away from New England, or even away from the ocean, and have found their way back. I wonder how many painters, photographers, composers and authors find inspiration just being in places like the coastal Massachusetts?

Pardon me for being crass, but we know that our ocean and estuaries attract vacationers; that our harbors serve shell- and fin-fishermen; and that our schools and town governments are good.

Warm weather greeted Race By The Sea

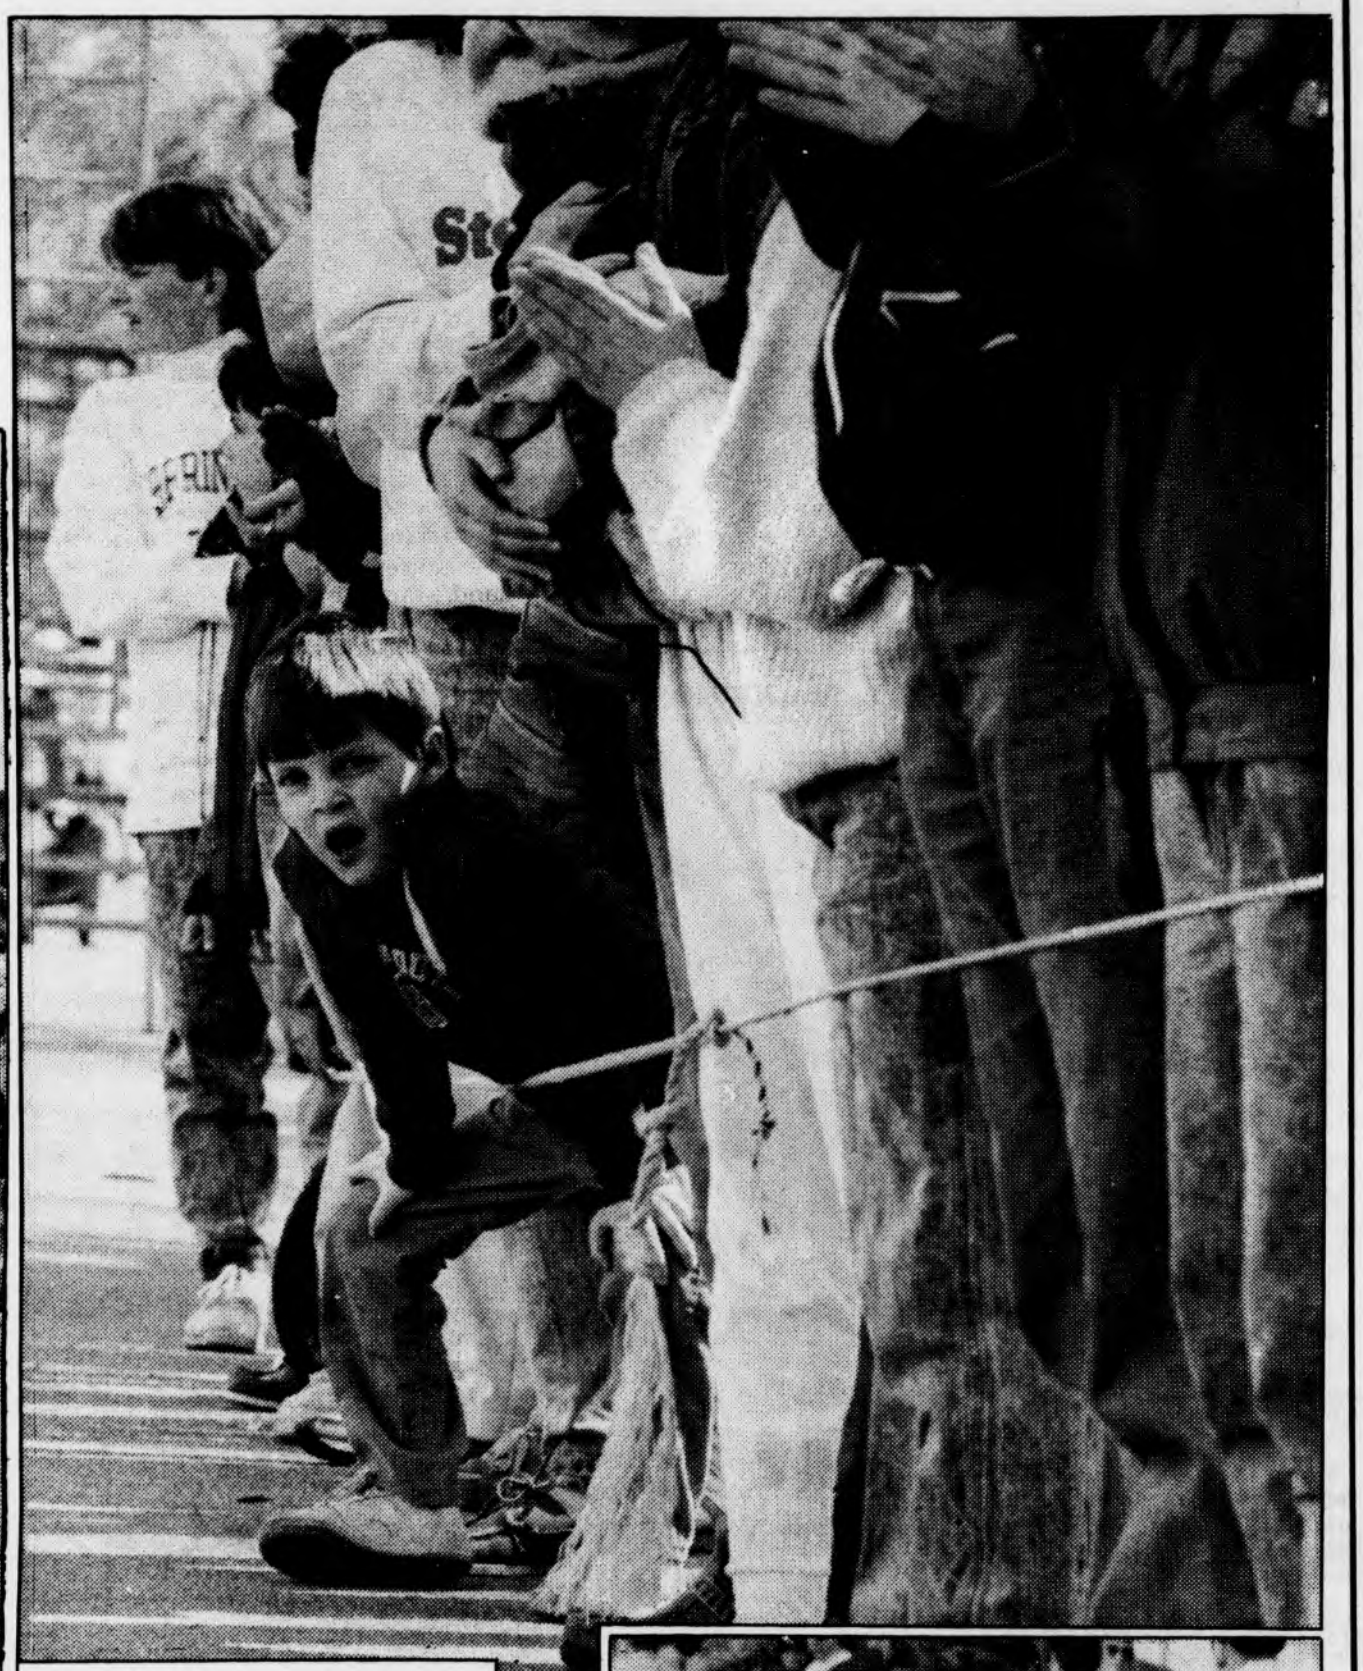
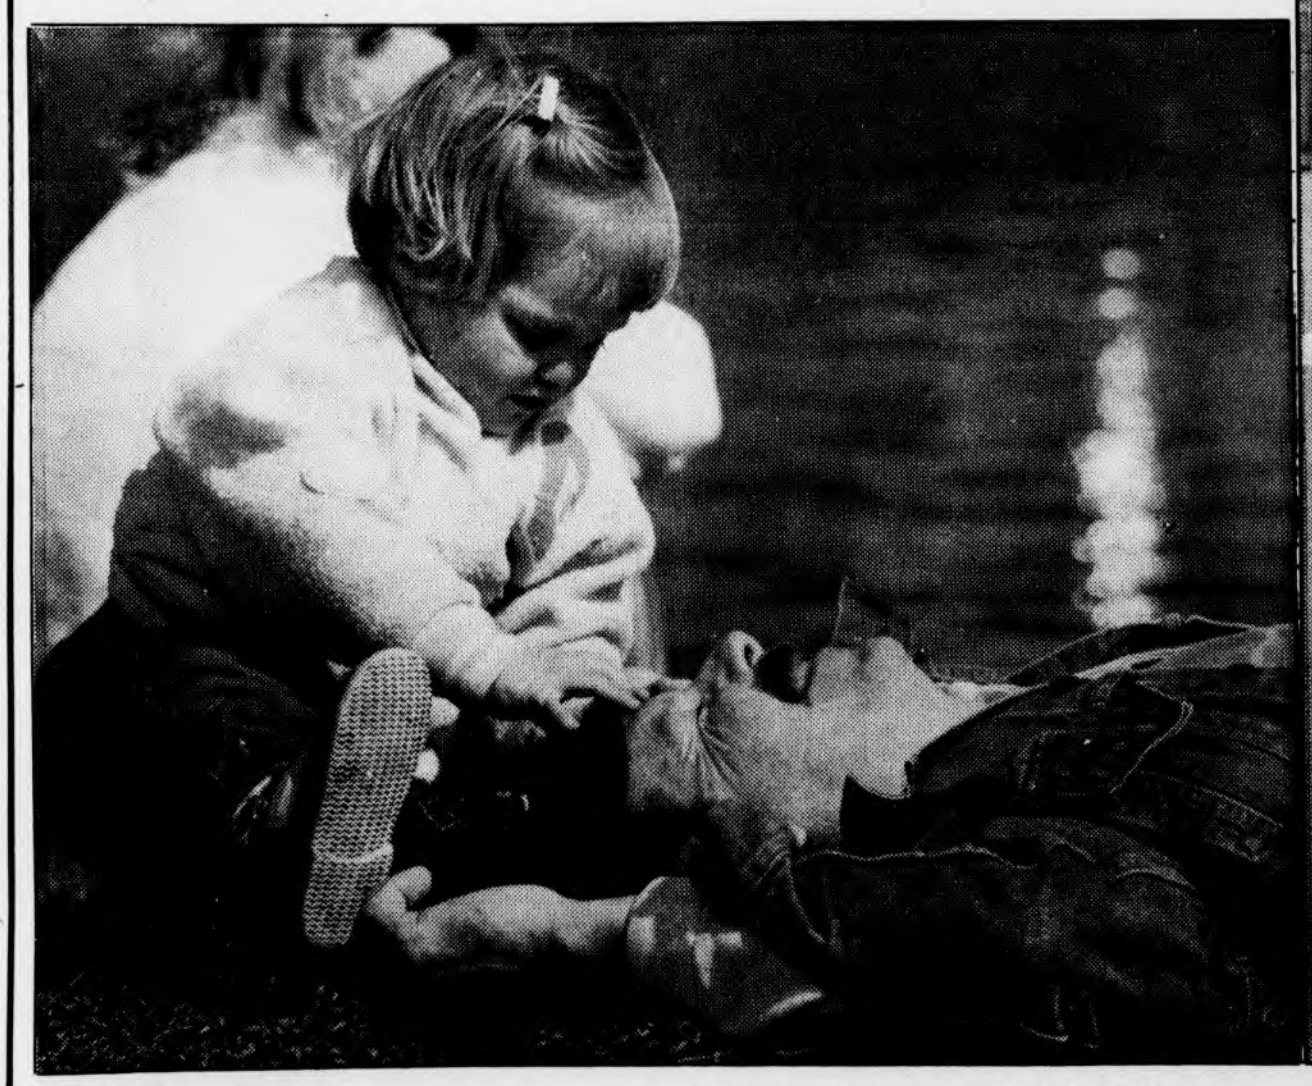
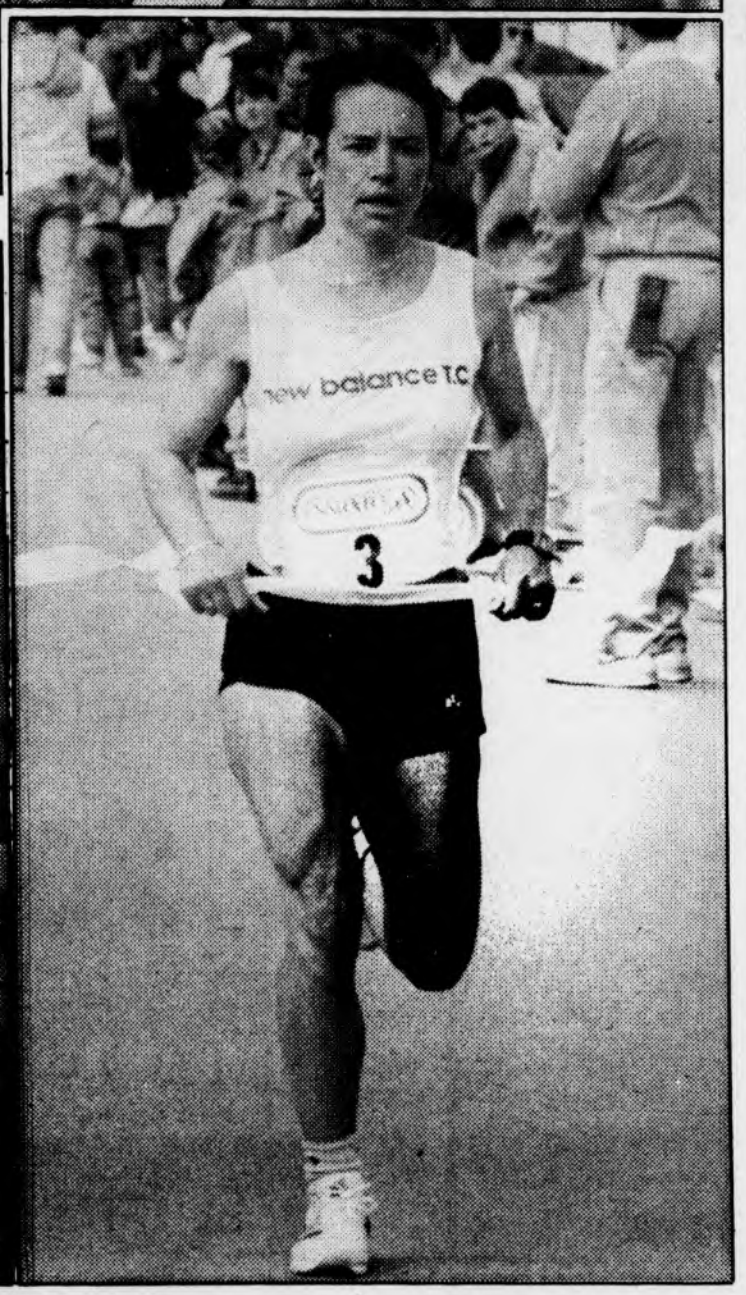
10-K winner, John Fitzgerald of Brighton



Five year-old Evan Cutler yawns despite the energy surrounding him at the 12th annual Roadrace By The Sea.



Meghan Mark, 2, is oblivious to the action along Main Street as she covorts with dad, Matthew at the Cohasset duck pond.



The women's overall winner was Liz Miller of Vermont who finished the race in 35:08.

How much money do the less tangible amenities bring in? How many people buy homes (bringing commissions to realtors and employment to builders) because of the beauty, as well as because of the access to jobs? How about film, art supplies, year-round restaurant meals, and rainwear that are sold? Our house lots are more valuable because of scenery. We have had friends from as little as 20 miles closer to Boston to marvel at the open nature of the landscape, at those very winding roads that we sometimes wish were easier to navigate.

Tied in with the attractiveness and the economic benefits, and with the breadth of mind that the ocean, fields, and woods can bring, comes the necessity for the care for those elements.

Our water supply is ample, but precarious, our swimming and fishing ponds and rivers are changeable, our fields and woods can be poorly developed, and our roads can be overcrowded.

Actually, we are in pretty good shape. Most builders have an eye for the landscape: the town boards do a good job of guiding growth; the bottle bill has made Rid Litter Days less necessary; town meetings have supported conservation commissions pretty well in their land acquisitions, and most of us are aware of the problem of hazardous wastes.

At the moment, it seems, the necessary balance is being maintained between growth and the attractive character (however you define that) of the South Shore. As pressure builds though, as the available lots are fewer, hillier, have less frontage, are wetter, then the decisions become harder, and the consequences more noticeable. Each added family or business means that we have to look more carefully at the way the town dump is managed, for instance, or at the age of the water pipes.

We make our own landscapes in more ways than we usually realize. The decision to allow cable TV meant more wire along the streets and more susceptibility to ice storms. A move away from cable toward satellite TV receivers might bring more large disk antennae into view. Maybe, though, more TV links and more home computers will allow more people to work at home and reduce the number of commuters and lighten the traffic on the roads. We are part of a network, and whatever we decide affects other areas of each town and of the region.

The improved consciousness of environmental problems that brought about the rather simplistic "Earth Day" of some years ago has not disappeared. Even people who looked askance at the "all development is bad" extremists are aware of the reality of carcinogens in insecticides, of the North River pollution and the difficulty of making a left turn onto Ocean and Plain Streets in Marshfield. That is one sign that the environmental ideas have become part of everyday thinking.

In addition, the concept of private conservation ownership of land, started by the Massachusetts Trustees or Reservations in the 1800s has become widespread. In Marshfield, the Dwyer Farm Committee comes most quickly to mind, but just in this state there are more than 50 other land trusts.

Nationwide, the number is upwards of 1,000. Most of those aim at education about the ecological network we live in and at the preservation of the natural diversity which makes an area so attractive a place to live. That very diversity is, in fact, essential to the health of the whole network.

We may fret under restrictions on our right to do what we will with our land, but we realize that we have no right to use that land so that it hurts others. As we create a landscape on our property, we set the view for years to come, not just for ourselves, but for the community. It's a major responsibility that we each have, as managers of a unit of a "townscape."

—Reed F. Stewart

El Salvador revisited

Seven persons from the second workcamp of the United Church of Christ, Norwell to El Salvador will share their experiences and show slides at the church on Thursday, April 7, from 8 to 9 p.m. The church is at 460 Main St., Norwell.

The work of Dr. Vicky Guzman in the mountain region of western El Salvador is rapidly developing and gaining international recognition. In substantial ways, the congregation of Norwell is participating in this exciting program via collections of medical supplies, toothbrushes, clothing and shoes.

The Women's Fellowship of U.C.C. Norwell raised money for the purchase of sewing machines and fabric supplies to be used in the classes in rural Santa Ana. New remote areas are now being opened up, and the South Shore has an opportunity to become part of this important experience.

Members of the last workcamp to El Salvador were: Eloise Clawson, Clinical Nurse Specialist, from Hanover; Alan Gruber, Medical Psychologist, from Cohasset; Helen Gruber, Neuropsychological Technician, from Cohasset; Judy McCullough, Associate Pastor UCC, from Norwell; Tom McCullough, Executive Director, United Way, from Norwell; Bob Zeller, Obstetrician, from Hingham; Rena Zeller, Occupational Therapist, from Hingham.

The public is cordially invited to attend this informational session.

Stop and Shop to close

At a recent meeting of the Zoning Board of Appeals several flaws were discovered in Cohasset Super Stop and Shop's building and design. Members unanimously voted to close Stop and Shop until such time as flaws are rectified.

The zoning board found the following:

(1) According to Cohasset bylaws, the building is too large by a quarter. Members advise that the deli, green grocer, fruit and fish must go. Additionally, the book section in the middle of the store must be sliced out somehow. Bouncey Brook used to run through the Barnes and Noble section, Appeals members said.

(2) There can be no access from Rte. 3A. Instead, Stop and Shop must construct a road off Sohier Street, preferably across the street from Fairoaks Lane and on you know who's property.

Appeals members said if Super Shop and Stop does not make these changes, Fire department personnel will have to be doubled and four new fire stations will have to be built.

More Chinese restaurants

The Cohasset League of Women Voters met briefly last week to discuss the quality of life in both towns, as evaluated by Boston Magazine (March '88) issue.

In that issue suburban towns were rated on a scale of 1-10 (ten being ideal) on the number of their Chinese restaurants. Having only one Chinese restaurant, Cohasset rated two.

League members will officially address their respective town officials on the advisability of seeking grants to construct additional Chinese restaurants in Cohasset.

League members noted that while Cohasset had one of the highest library expenditures of suburban towns, this was a category Boston Magazine did not weigh. League members were shocked over their low ratings; their joint consensus was that they would work diligently to bring more Chinese restaurants to their respective towns.

The Cohasset league is currently pledged to forming a joint study committee to research the quality of life. This will be a 10-year study.

A fire station anyone?

Officials have held lengthy debate over the legality understandability of a fire station article placed on the warrant by petitioners.

The article says because of confusion of the last vote on this article the $1 million and fire station article should be voted again. After much legal research, the Mariner has determined what will happen if you vote yes, no or postpone the article:

(1) If the article is voted favorably a second time, two fire stations will be renovated/built.

(2) If voters say nay, only one fire station will be renovated/built.

(3) Should voters postpone action on this article, the town will build four fire stations.

There will be sacrifices

Cohasset officials said recently there will be appropriate punishments delivered at its upcoming town meeting over the $1 million budget overrun.

An unreliable source said: "Voters expect human sacrifices, and they will get human sacrifices, on the stage, at the upcoming special or annual.

The Cohasset Finance Committee has unofficially been put in charge of sacrifices to be made. Current plans call for at least one human sacrifice from every Town department.

Happy April Fools

The second meeting (Saturday, April 16, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.) entails a visit to the new Plimoth Plantation greenhouses and restructured original garden which was designed by the famed Olmstead brothers. There you will learn about herb propagation, seeding and cutting. Pre-paid registration required (members/$11; non-members/$14 for both sessons). Call 659-2559 for more information.

Return of ravenous Robins!

Have you spotted a robin yet this spring? Many migrating birds have already arrived from the south and must replenish the body fat that they lost during their flight north. Great flocks of red-winged blackbirds and common grackles have been spotted. These returnees are very hungry and are looking for a good food supply. People who have fed the birds all winter and thought that they had a good supply of seed are finding it rapidly dwindling!

Why not take advantage of South Shore Natural Science Center's bird seed supply and keep the birds happy? Along with the robins (who don t need bird feeder seeds), the South Shore area is seeing the return of migrating song sparrows and soon the chipping sparrows. These varieties enjoy mixed seed and cracked corn which can be tossed on the ground.

Many more people are feeding year round and enjoying new species every day.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Hanover/Route 3 interchange (Exit 13). The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. Trails, exhibits, store, library. Free admission.

meeting will be held in the high school gymnasium - to accomodate up to 1,100 residents. Cable television will telecast the meeting live.

Goedecke noted that voters should be aware a $517,000 deficit would mean severe budget cuts, including elimination of town personnel. The advisory committee has voted in favor of an override.

Candidates

School committee candidate Barbara Bliss warned voters Tuesday night that the school budget would be disastrously affected by defeat of a Prop. 2 1/2 override.

"The major concern of the school committee," the incumbent stated, "is failure of an override which would seriously impact the schools. it would mean serious cuts - probably a teacher at every level and larger class sizes and less individualized attention."

Bliss urged the Parent Teacher Organization to become involved in educating the public about the override. "We have simply hit the wall," she explained. "Lots of other communities have had overrides. It's not something to be ashamed of."

J. Russell Reidy, a candidate for a second three-year term on the board, did not attend the Tuesday night candidates' forum sponsored by the league of Women Voters.

The two sewer commission candidates, Raimond G. Vanderweil and Lot. W. Bates, generated much interest among the audience.

Bates noted that rebuilding and repairing on-site septic systems are not the answer to Cohasset's problems. "The sewer commission thinks we can fix on-lot systems. I don't think so," he told the audience. "Cohasset is either ledge or clay. That will not allow sewage to go through. At the end of ten years, we'll have to fix them again. This town needs to be sewered."

He stated that commercial areas on Rte. 3A, including Cushing Plaza and a professional building, are experiencing failing septic systems. Bates said the current commission has notified the health board they do not intend to sewer Rte. 3A under the Ward Plan.

In answer to a question, Bates confirmed that the Ward Plan will require a large "costly" tank in the front of all sewered homes in order to filter the sewage from each house to the small diameter sewer pipe stretching along the streets.

Candidate Vanderweil assured the audience the board of health, the sewer commission, the state and federal environmental agencies agree septic systems can be repaired successfully. Most failures, he said, are caused by improper design or construction.

"Septic systems are a good way of handling sewerage," he stated. "They are here to stay."

The Ward Plan will provide maximum sewering for the most people at the least cost, he said. "It's very important we go forward with the plan. If not, by Sept. 30, the ninety percent funding program for Cohasset will be dead," he added.

In answer to a question, Vanderweil stated that if the intermunicipal agreement with Hull is rejected by Hull town meeting, Cohasset will resort to expanding and improving the current wastewater treatment plant. If this is the route Cohasset must follow, Vanderweil said he will fight to ensure the treatment plant outfall will not negatively impact the local lobster industry.

The candidate also noted that the commercial area along Rte. 3A has been allocated a sewer reserve area under the Ward Plan. "That means it will be sewered in the future," he stated.

Michael Sullivan, a candidate for a three-year

Town meeting articles to decide deficit

The school committee voted last week to support this budget and to present those numbers to town meeting. If an override vote fails in May, Supt. Stephen Hart predicted the school budget would have to be cut by almost $400,000. That would would result in the elimination of some services and teachers, he predicted last week.

The advisory committee is supporting a $116,000 request from the health board to purchase a chipper/shredder for the Cedar Street landfill. The machine will be used to shred materials into compost, which board members feel will add some lifetime to the municipal landfill.

The health board will also request an additional $50,000 for legal services and $37,000 for engineering surveys "to conduct investigations and a public health risk assessment" relating to Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill. The advisory committee voted to support the request.

The school department is sponsoring several capital outlay requests which all have the support of the school committee. But the advisory committee will recommend that town meeting reduce those requests.

The school department is requesting $140,000 to renovate four science labs at the high school. The advisory committee will recommend that number be pared down to $70,000, with the remaining renovations postponed until next year. The advisory committee will also recommend that a $90,000 repair project to the window walls in the rear of the high school be postponed.

The committee is supporting the school department's request for a $16,000 stake body truck which is used to transport trash from the schools to the landfill; and a $20,000 request to repair the slate roof at the Osgood School.

Among the other town meeting requests which carry a large price tag are a $70,000 real estate revaluation which must be completed every three years by the assessors; $50,000 for a new highway department truck to replace a 19 year-old vehicle that no longer operates; and $4,800 for an engineering survey of Milliken Field.

The fire department is requesting $40,000 to renovate the aerial ladder truck. This article is not supported by the advisory committee. That committee will also not support $10,000 to renovate the forestry fire truck, or $8,8000 for more Jaws of Life equipment for the fire department. A $15,000 request for Cohasset's share in purchasing a five-town mutual aid ambulance has gained the support of the advisory committee.

There are many other articles in this year's warrant that will not cost the town money but may generate some controversy at town meeting. There is a proposal to mandate recycling of all bulky materials, glass, newspapers, cardboard, yard waste and household hazardous waste at the town town's landfill.

The planning board is proposing the formation of a municipal housing authority which will have administrative authority over all affordable housing units under the control of the town. The board has also proposed a zoning bylaw change to include an increased density regulation for qualified housing. This will give the board the power to grant a special permit to allow a ten percent increase in the number of proposed dwellings in a residential cluster district. That additional ten percent must be used for low and moderate income housing. the municipal housing authority will have jurisdiction over those housing units.

There is a citizens' petition article requesting that the vote taken at the October special town meeting appropriating $1.1 million for renovations to the police and fire station be reconsidered. The residents have questioned the legality of the first vote, and plan to reintroduce the proposal at the annual town meeting.

Selectmen are proposing a ban on all hunting within the town, excluding coastal hunting of birds which is allowed by law. And the disposal area study committee will request that town meeting authorize selectmen to negotiate a five-year contract with an Orrington, Maine resource recovery plant. This will be an interim disposal solution for the town until the second phase of SEMASS is completed, about 1991. It is estimated the Penobscot Energy Recovery Co. will cost the town about $500,000 per year.

The owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. has offered to take the town's refuse for "little or no cost" if the town will halt all litigation against the commercial landfill. Town officials have been advised not to consider the offer.

Override and candidates . . .

term on the board of health, attended the forum Tuesday night. His opponent, Hugh Morgan, did not attend.

Sullivan cited his extensive business background as an asset to his candidacy. Since moving to Cohasset, he has become involved with the health board regarding odor control along Rte. 3A, and investigating possible pollution from the nearby commercial landfill. The major issues of his campaign have been the continual monitoring of the town's two landfills, and the need to plan for future solid waste disposal needs for the town.

Robert Sturdy is a candidate for a five-year seat on the planning board. The incumbent is challenged by Stephen Bjorklund, who did not attend the candidates' forum.

Sturdy talked about the warrant articles sponsored by the planning board in the annual town meeting. The articles request the formation of a municipal housing authority. The second article would amend a zoning bylaw to increase density in a residential cluster development in order to encourage developers to create lower than fair market housing. the municipal housing authority would have jurisdiction over those affordable housing units.

That authority, he said, would be more flexible and less dependent on the state legislature than the current Cohasset Housing Authority which is under the jurisdiction of the state.

The board recently received a state grant to study the possibility of converting the former Cox Estate property for town use, Sturdy stated.

In answer to a question from the audience, Sturdy noted that the southern end of Rte. 3A is in slow development period. The board is working with land owners such as Tedeschi to help generate tenants to their properties.

James Sheerin is only candidate running for a seat on the board of water commissioners. He talked about his background as a former employee of the Cohasset Water Department and fire department. He is now a self-employed equipment operator in Boston. Sheerin said as water commissioner his ultimate goal would be to provide quality drinking water to residents, and to make the operation self-sufficient. Any excess revenue would go back into the community or would be used to reduce the water useage rate to consumers.

Others who presented their views during the candidates' forum were three candidates for the Paul Pratt Library: Agnes McCann, Sigrid Carey and Katherine Sturtevant. Candidate Elizabeth Eaton did not attend.

Sixth grade writing samples from Deer Hill

My Mom

The reason why I'm writing about my mom is because I really admire her. The reason why I admire her is because she works and travels a lot. But still comes home and most of the time cooks dinner. My mom and I are really close and I like that a lot. I love my mom more than anything in the world, because she raised me and cares about me. When I grow up I want to be tall like her.

My mom is tall, nice, pretty, has brownish hair, and brown eyes. She works for Offshore Magazine in Needham MA. She sells advertising. She likes to go to The Museum of Fine Art and The Science Museum. She likes art a lot. When I was seven or eight she made a tapestry. The tapestry is for the town hall in Weymouth. On it-it says "Remember the Ladies." This quote was said by Abigail Adams to her husband John Adams, when he went to write the Constitution. The reason my mom chose this quote was because Abigail was the firwt supporter of women's rights. My mother admired her courage.

Snow White and the Seven College Students

Once there was a girl named Snow White (but all her friends call her Snow.) Her step-mother hates her so one day she sends Snow on an errand to the dry-cleaners. But before she left her step-mother showed her a shortcut through the back allies. Soon Snow found herself lost among the garbage cans when suddenly she heard King Crimson (the group) coming out of the window above her. She raced up the fire escape and found seven rather obnoxious college students drinking Meister Brau and eating take-out pizza. Snow White smiled gently at each of the dirty, grimy students. She soon realized that they had not taken showers or lived civily for quite a few days by the smell and look of the room. They stopped drinking beer and belching and looked at her in awe.

"Well, it looks like this place needs some cleaning," said Snow, putting her hands on her hips. "I'm Snow, Snow White," she announced. One of them got up and started walking toward her.

"I'm Grumpy, this is Dumpy, he said, pointing toward a grim looking individual, "that's Sleezy, this is Druggy, Cheap Shot, Guz and Eugene."

"I'm glad to meet you all," she said, while picking up scattered clothing.

"What are you doing here?" asked Cheap Shot.

'Oh, I got lost. By the way, do any of you know how I can get pack to Park Ave?" she asked as she piled empty beer cans into a box.

"That's way out of my league," said Druggy.

"You can stay with us for a while," said Guz, as he dragged his heavy body into the small bathroom.

"Well, I gotta go to the library," said Dumpy.

"Yeah, me too, I think," said Eugene, fixing his glasses and lifting his skinny body up.

"Hey, Sleezy, Guz, wanna go play some lacrosse?" said Cheap Shot.

"Sure," said Sleezy.

"O.K." said Guz, as he came out of the bathroom.

"Bye, Snow," they said in unison.

"Well, Grumpy and I have a frat party to go to but make yourself at home. O.K? asked Druggy, as he and Grumpy stumbled out the door.

"O.K." said Snow, as she waved goodbye.

Snow began picking up the dirty clothes that were scattered all over the room. Next she cleaned all the dresser and desk drawers and tabletops. She then proceeded to clean up any papers, tapes, and pictures on the floor. She made all three sets of bunkbeds and the pull-out couch. She finished up by scrubbing all the food and beer stains off the carpets, tile floors and walls. Snow White got all of their beer cans and dirty laundry together and carried her big bundle down the creaky staircase. She put the laundry in two different washers and poured a cup of detergent in each one. She then walked slowly out of the basement carrying her heavy load of beer cans. Snow white was looking for a liquor store for well over a half and hour. She finally came upon a small package store which happened to take beer cans. She received $25.00 for the large sum of cans she donated. Feeling very pleased with herself, Snow bought 3 or 4 plants for the room. She returned to the room with not much difficulty at all and shortly there after 7 men arrived. She was greeted by very flattering compliments and they all pitched in for dinner.

Soon all 8 of them were scrunched up in the orange "78" V.W. on their way to Burger King.

They all walked in and ordered quickly before the dinner crowd. It was very easy finding and pushing together 3 or 4 tables because of the small number of people in the fast-food place which included a very handsome, well-dressed man who Snow White was admiring. While she was looking at the man the others were busy stuffing ashtrays, salt and pepper shakers, and napkin holders into their pockets.

Suddenly Snow White began to cough and choke and then slipped lazily into Druggy's arms.

"She fainted," Grumpy said, sitting up, altertedly. The handsome man rushed over and looked at her. "It's food poisoning. She needs mouth to mouth," he said. He continued with his procedure and so Snow White was revived and smiling shyly at him. They walked out together, hand in hand and got into an airy Cadillac and as they drove away Snow White waved goodbye to her seven friends!

Moldy Locks And The Three Bears

Once upon a time there were three bears, Norman, Linda and Ralph and thats the bear facts. It was not long ago when Moldy Locks visited the bears house and got chased away . . . Now Moldy Locks is returning for revenge . . .

She was walking through the woods in a tight black mini-skirt, and a shimmel shirt and bright pink pumps. She had an ugly look on her face!

Meanwhile, the bears were sitting around watching the Super Bowl. Linda was making nachos for the game.

Norman said "My nachos are too hot!"

Linda said "My nachos are too hot too!"

Ralph said, "Hey dude, my nachos are way too hot!"

Norman said "It's half time, lets go out and let them cool."

Ralph said "Let's blow this place, but I want to be back for the second half."

Shortly after they left Moldy Locks showed up! She found the door locked so she got mad and kicked it in. She was wicked hungry so when she saw the nachos, hot or not, she gobbled them up like she had never eaten before.

She was carrying a huge bag loaded with spray paint and toilet paper! She tore apart the couch and spray painted the T.V!

After that, she was so tired so she went upstairs to take a nap. She cut the beds with a saw and fell asleep on the floor.

Then the bears came home! They saw the mess and gave a terrible roar and then chased Moldy Locks away . . . again.

The bears missed the game but they had plenty of toilet paper to wipe the T.V. screen.

Spring

In the season called Spring,
It is the time when birds sing.
It is the time when children play,
It is the time you play all day.
It's the time when flowers bloom.
It's the time cars go zoom!
It's the season you ride your bike,
It's the season that I like.
This season is here to stay,
There's nothing you can do or say.
So just join in and have some fun,
Before this wonderful season is done.

Little Gold Riding Hood

Little Gold Riding Hood was walking in New York City to her Grandmother's apartment. She was sent by her mother because her Grandmother was sick and needed to be nursed back to health. On her way she heard someone walking behind her. She turned around but nobody was there. So she skipped along and heard it again. But this time she saw a great, big scary man. The man came up to and almost grabbed her. But luckily Little Gold Riding Hood was a fast runner and slipped through his fingers. She hid in an alley until she thought it was safe. So she came out of the alley and continued her journey to her Grandmother's apartment. When she was almost there she saw the same awful man. But this time all he did was look at her and run away. So she trotted along until she got into apartment 3-D. The door was open so she just decided to walk in.

"Grandmother, Grandmother it's me Little Gold Riding Hood. I have come to bring you some food," said Little Gold riding Hood.

"Oh, come right in deary," said Grandmother.

"Grandmother you should take some cough drops your voice is hoarse," said Little Gold Riding Hood walking in her bedroom. "Your eyes, they're so large," said Little Gold Riding Hood.

"They're better to see you with," said Grandmother.

"Your arms, they're quite long," said Little Gold Riding Hood.

"They're better to hug you with," said Grandmother.

"Grandmother I'm going to put this food in the kitchen," said Little Gold Riding Hood.

"Ahh, no, don't look in there!" yelled her grandmother.

But as Little Gold Riding Hood opened the door she saw her real Grandmother tied up in a chair.

"Hey, you're not my Grandmother," shrieked Little Gold Riding Hood.

"That's right, and this ain't no piece of candy either!" he said pulling out a knife.

Little Gold Riding Hood untied her grandmother and ran outside. The man was close behind them all the way to the police station. When they got there they set a trap for him and caught him. He was arrested and put in a jail for 20 years, and Little Gold Riding Hood lived happily ever after.

School food: is it good?

sults aren't in yet."

A registered dietitian's analysis of two typical lunches served in South Shore schools revealed that, though they meet the basic guidelines for nutrition, the meals are above the fat level recommended by the American Heart Association. The fat content ranged from 37 percent to 44 percent. The American Heart Association is urging Americans to reduce this to 30 percent, the equivalent of 9-1/2 pats of butter.

Registered dietitian Carole McCorry of Plymouth, after her analysis of the menus, said, "These meals are very typically American. Forty to 45 percent fat is a typical American meal."

She noted, however, that the meals were nutritionally balanced. The meals contained from 700 to 900 calories. School-age children require from 1,700 to 2,800 calories per day, depending on age and sex. Boys require more calories than girls, generally. And older children require more calories than younger children.

Ms. Geller says the state Bureau of School Nutrition Services is working with the American Heart Association to reduce fat consumption. The bureau is trying to get the food processors who supply schools to lower the fat and salt contents in their products.

"It's going to be a long time coming," Ms. Geller says.

Right now, the food processing companies use the least expensive fat on the market, not often the best nutritionally speaking, to increase their profit margins.

Says Ms. Geller, "With the present product on the market, it is extremely hard to get meals down to 30 percent fat, and when you do, you take away a lot of the flavor and you take away the satiety."

She cautions about adhering too strictly to dietary guidelines that have been established for the normal American adult.

"They have never been established for a growing child, and this is where I get a little defensive about school lunch."

She says its OK to put margarine on a child's green beans, and it's OK for a child to have dessert, especially if it's nutritious, like a peanut butter or an oatmeal-raisin cookie.

Ms. Geller says, "We are also trying desperately to educate our food service directors and get them to implement the dietary guidelines."

Overall, she gives food service directors good grades for the menus they plan.

Out of 357 cities and towns in the state, only about a dozen have registered dietitians working within their school department. According to the state Bu-

Politicus

by David A. Mittell Jr.

Racism is greatly exaggerated

A recent issue of South Look contained four articles discussing race and racism in the 212th year of the American Republic. The lead article was entitled White-out — a secretarial analogy implying that minorities in Southeastern Massachusetts have been rendered invisible like so many little black typos.

Commentary

That a regional publication serving a mainly white readership would turn an issue over to the questions of race and racism is commendable, for simple neglect is the progenitor of many sins. We who are white cannot take for ourselves privileges and comforts which we countenance being denied to any of our fellow citizens. That is basic, for it is the Golden Rule, and if the product of the region's strivings in this affluent decade shall amount to nothing more than luxury homes with fake Palladian windows, we will be judged as trivial people. It is we who will be "whited-out" by history.

Nevertheless, it seems to me that two important and mitigating points did not emerge. The first is the simple truth that the overwhelming majority of our people are not bigots. The majority may be too preoccupied with the toil of life to be social activists, but as Justice William O. Douglas observed near the end of his life, "The heart of America is good."

That is extremely important because it means that in the main the problem of integration is not spiritual, as some would assert. With the exception of the pathological (i.e., those whose psychological conflicts are expressed in racial animosity) and the misguided (i.e., those who have learned bigotry by imitation), the majority of our people both black and white are disposed to understanding.

The pathological and misguided always have the power to make their presence felt out of proportion to their numbers, and acts of public bigotry ought never be condoned. But the assertion that contemporary America is welling in racist bigotry is false; in fact I think it can be said that in a sense "racism" is the racism of the liberals. By that I mean that liberals sometimes use poorly-documented accusations of racism to express the same hostile tribal instinct the bigot expresses through racism.

In any event, if the problem of integration is no longer primarily one of altering attitudes, as I believe, then it is practical and economic. How to keep the prosperity while getting some affordable housing for the rising minority middle class — not to mention for our teachers, our firemen, and the children of those who bought $25,000 homes at 4½% interest hereabouts a quarter of a century ago?

A large order that. But if we are serious about equal opportunity we had better address the housing issue in all its ramifications. If we are serious, the economics of housing should be of far greater concern than the fact, reported in South Look, that blacks can't purchase unflavored grits in these precincts. (The German-American Mittell can't find wiener schnitzel either; on the whole he'd rather be able to buy the house he grew up in.)

The housing issue is a mighty, practical problem for all who found themselves on the outside when, with the passage of Proposition 2½ in 1980, the real estate

Jail overcrowding

Inmate population at the Plymouth County House of Corrections has reached 375, or about twice the number of the jail was built for. Sheriff Peter Flynn intends to add so-called modular units for 75 inmates to solve part of the problem and eventually to expand the jail. He noted that a storage room is now being used to house 20 people. Double bunking began in 1982 in cells meant for one person. Mr. Flynn said jail population has increased tremendously in the past two years because of tougher drinking/driving laws. At the close of 1987, 27 percent of the inmates were in for driving under the influence, he said.

Braintree

Buckley: I'm innocent

William E. Buckley, 34, of Holbrook has pleaded innocent in Norfolk Superior Court to charges that he stabbed and strangled Braintree convenience store owner Lois Damon. The 31-year-old mother of two was murdered early one Sunday morning, Dec. 14, 1986, shortly after she opened the Dairy Mart Store at 29 Hayward St. Mr. Buckley is charged with first-degree murder, armed robbery and assault with attempt to rape.

Canton

Matthews' parents talk

The parents of 15-year-old convicted murderer Rod Matthews said in an exclusive interview last week with the Canton Journal that no one ever advised them to seek counseling for their son or to have him evaluated. The interview was a blistering indictment of the human and social service systems. Janice and Kenneth Matthews said their son was tested only once — in kindergarten — during his school career in Canton and was identified as having a language problem. In 1981, Dr. Theodore Goodman, a Canton pediatrician, put the Matthews boy on Ritalin, a controversial drug prescribed to children with behavioral problems. On March 10 of this year, Rod was convicted by a Norfolk County Superior Court jury of second-degree murder for the Nov. 20 beating death of a classmate, Shaun Ouillette, 14.

Carver

Financial flap

Carver's town accountant resigned during a recent flap over the finance committee's asking him to update the books. Finance committee members said the books had not been updated since Sept. 30, 1987 and discrepancies amounting to about $20,000 were discovered. Town Accountant Walter Correa, who also threatened legal action against the town, has now agreed to work with the finance committee to get through the upcoming town meeting.

Cohasset

Basketball champs

The girls' basketball team of Cohasset High School won the state championship last week at the Worcester Centrum. The girls prevailed over Frontier Regional of South Deerfield, 54-44, to capture their first state title.

Cohasset is widely recognized as a top basketball school. Of all the high schools in the state, only Cohasset's sent both a boys and girls team to the championship games. The boys lost to St. Joseph's of Pittsfield, 77-58.

Duxbury

Edison offer accepted

The town that first rejected Boston Edison's offer to pay for civil defense services, which would be called upon during an emergency at the company's Pilgrim nuclear power plant in Plymouth, has now accepted the offer. The controversial issue of whether or not to accept financial assistance from the owner of the troubled nuclear power plant was the subject of heated debate last fall, when voters at special town meeting rejected the utility's offers of assistance. At town meeting this month, voters decided the town could not afford to pay for such emergency services with taxpayers' dollars; so selectmen voted to accept Edison's offer of up to $750,000. Duxbury was the last town of five in the 10-mile emergency evacuation zone to accept funding assistance from Edison.

Hanover

$2m to close dump

Closing the Hanover dump behind the transfer station could cost up to $2 million, the board of health learned last week. SEA Consultants of Cambridge outlined the procedure for closing the landfill. The process could take up to a year.

Hingham

Senior clashes

The director of Hingham's senior center and one member of the Council on Aging resigned last week because of a clash with the council president. Sandra Kent, who has been director of the Hersey House senior center for 11 years, said she had been unnecessarily harassed. Council member Donald Strong also resigned.

Holbrook

Town chief-less

The Holbrook police chief's position is still in limbo. Officer John Cordaro was sworn in recently as interim chief, but he served only 24 hours — until attorneys for John White, police chief for four years, obtained a restraining order preventing selectmen from appointing a new selectmen until a dispute over his contract is heard in state appeals court.

Kingston

Bonwood ups and downs

The two-year-old Bonwood condominium project off Brewster Street ran into new snags after the appeals board heard planner Susan Farrell and about 20 residents claim the 74 units on 12 acres would be intolerably dense. The current plan is in its third incarnation and qualifies for a state building permit because 19 of the units will qualify as affordable housing. The state action supersedes local bylaws. Planners have recommended a 55-unit maximum with 20 units listed as affordable housing.

Marshfield

Guard dog flap

Three German shepherd dogs guarding the town sewer plant are being taunted, according to manager Karl Nordin. Complaints from neighbors about barking brought the dogs to the attention of the public works board last week. Town officials concluded, though, that the barking was inspired by teasing and taunting and that the dogs' potential bites were more valuable than their barks. Mr. Nordin asked residents to leave the dogs alone because they perform a valuable service.

40 new homes

Developers have asked planners to consider a 40-home project on 90 acres that run from Old Oaken Bucket to First Parish roads. The plans were submitted by Laurelwood Realty Trust which has a mailing address of 209 Old Oaken Bucket Road, the home address of Robert Margro. Access to the property would be near Margro's property.

Pembroke

Kindergarten

Parents whose children will be 5 years old by Sept. 1, 1988, may now make appointments to register for kindergarten. Children who will not be 5 until between then and Dec. 31, 1988, will be considered for early admissions upon request only if parents provide a letter of recommendation from the child's pediatrician and records and recommendations from any formal pre-kindergarten program attended. Furthermore, early applicants must undergo intelligence and maturity evaluations which include interviews with the parents.

Plymouth

Two new employees

The town finance committee has approved $26,000 to pay for a full-time assistant assessor and a part-time clerk for the treasurer's office. The new allocation was made possible, according to committee members, by revenue generated by new growth in town.

Randolph

Parking ban

Alternate parking on North Main Street, from Depot Street to Route 128, will be enforced seven days a week during morning and afternoon rush hours. The ban will be in effect on the east side of the street between 7 and 9 a.m., and on the west side between 4 and 6 p.m.. The regulations began April 25 and last for 30 days. Meanwhile, last week's ruling governing one-hour parking on both sides of the street remains in effect for most of the day.

Scituate

Driftway food

The wandering Driftway may soon be home to a pizza parlor and a breakfast-lunch shop. Developers of the just-built Herring Brook Mall have were given approval March 1 to lease space to a dry cleaning establishment and March 22 received narrow approval for the food emporiums. Planners, however, have restricted restau ant space to 3,200 square feet, or 10 percent of the mall space. Traffic still worries planners who have asked developers to widen the mall entrance, to provide a left turn lane and a flashing yellow light.

Weymouth

Hat Rack II

Town counsel Daniel Bailey Jr. has advised selectman not to take action against Hat Rack II, a bar in East Weymouth, until indictments have been handed down in a drug trafficking case that, at least peripherally, involves the problem tavern. Four of the 11 people arrested on drug charges were on the premises of Hat Rack II when they were arrested. Since last summer, the bar's liquor license has been suspended twice for allowing open bottles of beer to be taken from the building, and the bar has been on notice since March 7 to start serving food or else. Mr. Bailey told selectmen the district attorney's office intends to indict within the next two weeks.

New crops for the Closet Farmer

Who says the American farmer is a dying breed?

Information has just crossed my desk which indicates to me that the American farmer is thriving.

It's just that he has moved to the city and he's growing vegetables, flowers, etc., indoors. Etc., it appears, is the crop of choice.

Have you ever heard of The Closet Farmer?

An outfit called Urban Plantation of Fairfax, California, will sell you one for as cheap as $455. The deluxe modal is $785. Visa and Mastercharge accepted.

"Not everyone has an acre of green these days," croons the Urban Plantation ad. "Yet urban, rural and apartment dwellers are still anxious to exercise that green thumb.

"Like you, they are searching for innovative, sophisticated ways to bring their garden indoors without building a greenhouse or closing off an entire room.

"What sets the Closet Farmer apart is that it is completely contained in a sleek, stylish piece of furniture. A free standing closet that will enhance any room — without a hint of the high tech growing system that lies within."

The pictured Closet Farmer is indeed a sturdy, attractive piece of furniture, resembling a hutch. Its interior is lined with mirrors and contains a 400 watt Halide bulb aglow with up to 32,000 lumens.

It's packed with growing goodies. There are daisies, lilies and hydrangeas, brimming with artificial health. There may even be some carrots, radishes or tomatoes.

But what's that green plant in the middle, the one with the long, thin, serrated leaves. It looks familiar. Could it be . . . ? No, it couldn't. But, yes, it is. It's marijuana!

Marijuana obviously is the reason for the existence of the Closet Farmer and the Urban Plantation ad is obviously the reason for the existence of a magazine called High Times.

High Times is available on local newsstands although most of us tend not to see it in our rush to buy Soldier of Fortune, Gun Digest and Penthouse. It is to the committed pot smoker what Popular Mechanics is to the home handyman.

Possession of marijuana may be a misdemeanor in most states and dealing can put you in the slam but pot production appears to be a cottage industry of growing importance as the price of Skunk #1 nears $200 an ounce, according to "Trans-High Market Quotations."

Energy Savers Unlimited, Inc., of Torrance, Calif., will sell you a Mini-Might Grow Light, a 16,000 lumens high pressure sodium lamp that costs only 15 cents a day to operate; a steal at $99, Visa, Mastercharge and American Express accepted.

The High Times Bookstore has the basic "Marijuana Grower's Guide" for beginning farmers for $5.95 and if you're already into it and have a problem there's always a letter to the advice column, Ask Ed.

"I was wondering, if I misted my outdoor crop on a regular basis with carbonated water, would the plants absorb any of the CO2?" asks an anxious grower from Hinton, W. Virginia.

"The carbonated water would promote growth," advises Ed, "but it is an expensive way to provide the gas. Spraying the plants would be most cost effective during the seedling and small plant stage."

So the next time you read about a Colombian freighter captured with tons of mary jane aboard, have no fear.

There'll never be a shortage with High Times to dispense advice and a Closet Farmer in every home.

market went through the stratosphere. But even with the impediments to minorities and others seeking to enter the suburban real estate market, minority numbers are increasing — an important racial fact.

Although the percentage of minorities in most south suburban towns remains in the small single digits, the hard numbers are moving in the right direction. As the Patriot Ledger clearly documented a couple of years ago, the number of minorities has slowly but steadily been increasing since 1970 in virtually every community in the region.

The trend is not as strong as those of us who believe in equal opportunity would like. But if it continues, which if we can keep the prosperity it will, I think there is reason to be optimistic that, in a relatively few years,

Restaurant review

Payola, but it's really all right

By Thelma O'Brien
South Look staff

I was invited last week by the management to have lunch at Gables, the brand new restaurant at the brand new Hilton in Dedham and, while words like Hilton and Dedham are not immediately associated with high class food and decoration, this time they are and everything is terribly nice there, like the marble bathrooms and the fresh flowers everywhere and an exceptionally well-thought out menu, with food to match.

Later on in the week I was sent half a ham by the president of the Original HoneyBaked Ham Company of the East, Inc. in Massachusetts. He wanted to spread the good word about his product before Easter and it was a smart thing for him to do. Well worth the $4.39 per pound. More about that later.

First Gables, a light and airy room, all pinks and blues and windows and skylights and tables on different levels and pretty dishes and glassware.

To begin the lunch, four of us had deep fried brie with an avocado dip ($6), mushroom tortellini with cream and sun-dried tomatoes ($5), and black bean soup ($3), each one better than the next, especially the soup. Then came sauteed salmon with oysters, scallops and dill fettucine ($9), medallions of veal with lemon pistachio cream ($9), calves liver sauteed with vermouth, onions and bacon ($8) and baked scrod with herb butter ($7). I tasted everything but the scrod and, what can I say? Everything was delicious, done with great care, beautifully served, etc., etc.

Meanwhile, desserts were steamed chocolate pudding with pistachio ice cream, lemon mousseline, walnut raspberry torte and cranberry creme caramel with ginger snaps, thin wafers, really, all $5.

There's no fooling around here and if the cooks can keep up all this quality, Gables will be classed as a first-rate restaurant, and all the corporate giants on Route 128 can ease out of their giant corporate offices into well-deserved power lunches. Actually, the prices, as long as you don't have all the courses, make it possible for even second level executives to eat at Gables fairly regularly, and for the rest of us to make the meal a special occasion.

My power lunch was coordinated by the management and served by caring hands. I assume regular paying guests are fed the same food and served with same attention.

There was lots more on the lunch menu and the dinner menu, as you might imagine, is splendid, all poached fish and elephant garlic and roulades of capon and venison with cranberry cassis, not to mention rib eye steak with horseradish sour cream.

There's a fine wine list.

A good deal of care has been paid to details at Gables, and, I expect at the hotel, as well. John Van London, the general manager, with whom I had lunch, studied his trade in Holland, where he comes from, and has worked in a number of established hotels on the east coast. He certainly seems in command of the operation in Dedham. Also at the table was Patricia Webster, assistant general manager, who had been at the Boston and Seasons and is, in part, responsible for the terrific menu.

The head chef is Steven Sharad who, most recently, was at the Pillar House in Newton.

More power to Gables.

THE EASTER HAM

Back to honey baked hams.

The joint was placed on a kitchen table at the Mariner offices at 4 p.m. on a Friday afternoon and that was it. Twenty minutes later, there was only enough meat left on the bone for a watery pea soup.

These are good hams. The meat is tender and not filled with water; the salt content seems about right. The come spirally-sliced and the crust is very crisp and sweet.

Although this ham is not cured or smoked the way hams traditionally are cured in the South – the ones that you order for New Year's and you have to soak first overnight in the bathtub, thus causing a certain disbelief on the part of your New Year's Eve guests – they are soaked in brine and smoked up to 30 hours, so there is a mild smoky flavor.

President Stephen McHugh points out that these hams come ready to serve, a great blessing for the busy family.

The South Shore can buy the hams at 587 Washington St. (Route 53), Weymouth. Call if you have questions, 331-2500.

Book Report

By Elizabeth Moura

Unorthodox

STRAIGHT ON TILL MORNING. The biography of Beryl Markham. By Mary S. Lovell. St. Martin's Press. $16.95. 408 pages.

Beryl Markham is gaining fame two years after her death because of her unorthodox lifestyle and fortitude. A topnotch if thrill-seeking pilot and an excellent trainer of race horses, Mrs. Markham would've blinded the world in the 1930's if she had lived in a place more public than British East Africa.

Mary S. Lovell captures much of the aura of Beryl Markham. This is a chatty biography, and Ms. Lovell takes as many opportunities to mention Beryl Markham's love life as her feats as pilot and trainer. "In the very short space of time between his safaris, Beryl and Denys (Finch-Hatton) became lovers," writes Ms. Lovell. "It was a brief, prematurely ended, but infinitely sweet interlude for Beryl. Denys filled the role of lover, brother, mentor, friend. He took her flying, which she loved, though unlike Tania (Deny's wife) she saw it was an adventure with a practical side to it."

Ms. Lovell has an uncanny ability for presenting the white Africa of the 1920s and 1930s as a haven for eccentric men and women such as Finch-Hatton, Bror and Karen Blixen and Beryl Markham's father, Charles Clutterbuck, a ne'er do well horse trainer. She is especially deft at capturing the child who became the woman: "The absence of her mother and brother undoubtedly had an influence on Beryl's character; indeed the strength and independence she was to show later almost certainly had their roots in this deprivation. Her lifelong habit of going barefoot whenever possible stemmed from these years, and her necessary intimacy with the African families who lived in squatter villages on the farm caused her to become almost more African than European in her thinking and attitudes."

Beryl Markham's flight west across the Atlantic, done on a dare, was covered by the media of the day with the flourish reserved for reports on film stars. She crash landed in Cape Breton, bloodied but unbowed as she told two fishermen, "I'm Mrs. Markham. I've just flown from England." It was vintage Markhamese, succinct and cool.

The best of Beryl Markham was yet to come: West with the Night," along with Antoine de Saint-Exupery's Wind, Sand and Start" the best personal account of flying. Ms. Lovell doesn't dwell on the book, and in fact she only notes its critical acclaim, lack of sales, and the dispute over whether Beryl's third husband, Raoul Schumacher, ghostwrote it.

This is a pity, because the book was so good that when it was reprinted in 1983 it was the passport which brought the aged and ill Beryl Markham back into the world, and allowed her to live in a little comfort in her beloved Kenya. Too bad Ms. Lovell didn't edit our details of Beryl Markham's affairs in order to include lengthy comments on the book Ernest Hemingway enjoyed so much he said "she can write rings around all of us who consider ourselves as writers."

Racism

today's minorities will achieve the same critical population mass that yesterday's minorities — the Irish, the Italians, etc. — achieved when they moved into the theretofore undisputed kingdom of summer folk and swamp Yankees.

If we are serious about equal opportunity we must encourage that trend. We must despise the ugly head of bigotry whenever it shall surface. As to the vestiges of institutional racism such as the small but persistent number of real estate agents who will not obey the law, it is not too strong to say that these must be crushed.

But if we are serious about equal opportunity we must take care that intimations of bigotry comport with the facts. We must be fair because being unfair is never useful to a cause based on right.

School food: is it good?

reau of School Nutrition Services, most are concentrated within the Boston public school system. But the bureau maintains that you don't have to be a registered dietitian to be knowledgeable about nutrition.

The federal government has established guidelines to help food service directors develop a healthful school lunch menu. The guidelines require the following offerings: a meat or meat alternative, two offerings of either fruit or vegetables, a bread or bread alternative and milk. For example, it is recommended that students in grades 7-12 have 3 ounces of meat or meat alternative, three-quarters of a cup of vegetable and/or fruit, 10 servings of bread or bread alternate per week (the equivalent of two slices of bread a day) and a half-pint of milk.

A 'PARADOX'

School lunches in this state run the gamut from excellent to unsatisfactory, according to the state Bureau of Nutrition Services. But school food service is a paradox, Ms. Geller says. With limited income, schools are expected to feed hundreds of children nutritious, delicious, yet affordable, meals.

"You have little to work with. You have someone like me saying, 'Thou shalt follow the dietary guidelines.' You have a child who comes to you at age 5 or 6 who may not have experienced wise food choices for five or six years."

A visit to the Marshfield High School cafeteria last week revealed that many students share unhealthy eating habits. Though the meal offered was a nutritionally balanced lunch of juice, pizza, raw vegetables and a peanut butter cookie, rows of students sat before small boats of french fries smothered with catsup. This was lunch, they announced.

Marshfield schools serve 2,100 lunches a day. Between 60 and 65 percent of the students buy the regular lunch. About 1,000 students more buy a la carte items. The $500,000 program is largely self-sustaining. Lunches cost 85 cents at the high school and 75 cents in the elementary school. The taxpayers fund only $4,000 of the cost.

Marshfield High School junior Jen Roderick says she eats a slice of pizza, french fries and milk every day. The cafeteria offers a fast-food section with pizza, hamburger, cheeseburger and french fries, in addition to the meal listed in the newspaper. Also, the school offers a salad bar.

Her classmate Deli Flipp says she really likes the school's stuffed shells, but she wouldn't buy the grilled cheese. "Those are awesome. The turkey dinners are awesome. The hamburgers are gross."

If McDonald's set up shop in Marshfield High School, Deli Flipp says she would buy her lunch there.

Student Michelle Johnson says the school lunches are "good when you're hungry."

"Sometimes after you eat," says Amy Schucharu as she bites into a slice of cheese pizza, "you feel like it's just sitting there."

Junior Pat Sullivan says lasagna is his favorite school lunch. He also likes the grilled cheese, but he advises staying away from the hamburgers. A member of the track team, Pat Sullivan says it's possible to get a healthful meal at school if you want one.

TASTE DICTATES

Margaret McGee, supervisor of the school lunch program in Marshfield for 13 years, says kids' tastes have necessitated changes in school lunches. The popularity of fast food has prompted school cafeterias to offer hamburgers and cheeseburgers, pizza, french fries and chicken and fish nuggets. Pizza is the best seller at Marshfield High School. Chocolate milk is the preferred beverage.

Ms. McGee, like other lunch coordinators on the South Shore, tries to provide kids with a nutritionally balanced meal that they like. Gone are the days of the roast beef, gravy, mashed potato, green beans and frosted chocolate cake with jimmies. The roast beef has been replaced by the hamburger and the mashed potato with french fries.

"It's like banging your head against the wall," says Ms. McGee. "And you're going to spend money to put something on the table they're not going to eat?"

Because of all the food that was being discovered in school cafeteria trash bins, the federal government developed an "offer versus serve" philosophy in the early 1980s. The federal regulation states that each school shall offer its students all five food items of lunch, but students must be permitted to decline up to two items. The federal regulation also encourages school food authorities to provide a selection of foods and beverages. The idea is, you can't force kids to eat something they don't want or like.

"We're only talking about 20 minutes we have with these youngsters," Ms. McGee points out, "and they're getting more from home. I think we give them an excellent lunch."

Pat Tuohy, lunch coordinator for Holbrook Junior-Senior High School, agrees that finger foods are most popular with the kids: chicken nuggets, pizza, hot dogs. Holbrook offers the basic meal plus a salad bar and an a la carte section where students can buy milk and juice, packaged cookies and brownies and potato chips. About half the students at the school buy lunch. The school serves about 300 lunches per day at 80 cents apiece. Total cost of the program is just over $192,000.

"If we see them not eating, we ask why," Ms. Tuohy says of the students. "We try to make sure they eat. All the ladies here are grandmothers; so they notice if they don't eat."

Ms. Tuohy is a mother of four and a grandmother. She knows teenagers can be finicky eaters.

"Kids will tell us what they like. We tried a seafood bisque once that the teachers loved, but the kids wouldn't even look at it."

Ms. McGee had a similar experience in Marshfield. The cafeteria cooks tried what they call a "taste buddy" — a market sampling of a new food — they thought would be a success. The ambrosia dessert, made with yogurt and fresh grapefruit, orange and coconut, failed miserably.

"It was not sweet enough for them," she says.

On the other hand, the school tried calzones made with bread dough, cheese and cold cuts, which students loved.

Nutritionists and food service directors agree that good eating habits are formed at home. Ms. Geller says you have to educate the client.

"I'm not as concerned about what the food service coordinator is doing as I am with the parent who brings bad food choices into the home."

In the home of two working parents, fast food has become an easy and often-relied-upon alternative to cooking nutritious meals. It simply becomes too much effort to broil a piece of fish and steam some vegetables.

"At least in school food service I've seen nice changes," Ms. Geller says.

Close-Up

Broadcast soft news

By Thelma O'Brien
South Look staff

Life imitates art once again.

Nancy Alspaugh, executive producer of WBZ's "Evening Magazine" concedes that the movie "Broadcast News" came a little bit too close for comfort.

She thinks, though, she's pretty much gone beyond the professionally obsessed stage portrayed by Holly Hunter in that charming movie about the idiocies of television production.

But, even though she does seem calmer and consideraby more well-rounded than the movie character, like she plays polo and does triathalons, Ms. Alspaugh has one or two of the outward signs.

She is young (32) and quick and pretty and the boss of 18-plus employees, including "EM" stars Sarah Edwards and Brian Nolan. She also is the queen of the "EM" wing of the WBZ building on Soldier's Field Road in Brighton.

The wing actually is a complex of cubicles and hallways all stuffed with people and monitors doing whatever it is that television production people do, like edit.

Ms. Edwards and Mr. Nolan have little tiny cubicles and little tiny desks. Irony guides the communication.

"Has anyone seen star Barry Nolan? Where is star Barry Nolan? We want to take his picture. Oh, wait, nevermind. Here's star Sarah Edwards, we can take her picture." And, as usual, Ms. Edwards is much prettier in person and very warm and funny and someone you might actually like to hang out with for a while, not the all-things-to-all-people person she is on the show.

Anyway, after you make your way through the production maze, you're funnelled to Ms. Alspaugh's office, a slightly larger cubicle with a desk and even a window. On a wall is a framed birthday message from her staff. Barry Nolan's says he's never had a boss before who wore leather skirts and fishnet hose. The messages all are affectionate and admiring and Ms. Alspaugh is proud of them.

She is sorting out expense vouchers as the interview begins.

Where does she live?

She says in a 200-year-old house in Canton.

How did she choose Canton?

That begins a revelation of her personal life, intimate but not self-indulgent. She was married to Matt Lauer, also a television producer. He was doing "PM Magazine" in Providence. They chose a place to live half way between here and there. She had horses and a golden retreiver. They wanted country. He's in New York now but she's kept the Canton house.

What exactly is the job of an executive producer?

"I'm basically responsible for the show, for the stories we do," Ms. Alspaugh said, with perfect straightforwardness, no bragging. Her job is to think of the ideas and implement them, period the end, and she must be doing a good job since she wins all these awards and has a huge budget and very high ratings.

"Evening Magazine" is Channel 4's 7:30 to 8 p.m. remedy to the network news, the time, Ms. Alspaugh says, that viewing America wants the soft touch, the non-controversial, escapist programming perfected by shows like "EM."

She says among the favorites are the outdoor/adventure and local travel programs, "the crunchy-crackly shows," she calls them.

Thelma O'Brien photos

Nancy Alspaugh in her office

Coming up are special programs on Bali and Java, during which fans may observe stars Nolan and Edwards observing local customs. Eight people, including Ms. Alspaugh will travel to Indonesia. Although the budgets are huge for such extravaganzas, she said trading off with hotels and airlines, a la 'Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous,' reduces the cash output.

"'Evening Magazine' was number one in the ratings for 10 years," Ms. Alspaugh said, until "Jeopardy" came along in that time slot. The game show now is at the top.

Also coming up are pieces on Wade Boggs, who will appear March 31 in a "Cheers" episode and one this summer on Carl Yastrzemski, who will be inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame. The program has borrowed sportscaster Bob Lobel for that spot.

Ms. Alspaugh was born n Winston-Salem, North Carolina, and was raised and educated in Richmond, Virginia, majoring in English and communications in a local college. She began in TV as a camerawoman right after college, wound up in production a short time later, met Mr. Lauer in Richmond and came up here with him. She began freelancing as a producer in Boston, was hired five-plus years ago at "EM" as associate producer and became executive producer about three years ago. She loves her job, works about a 10-hour day, regrets she's at her desk more than she used be but is glad still to go out on in the field from time to time, like to Indonesia. She seems to love her staff and vice versa.

Meanwhile, she also considers her job a kind of metaphor for her life – or maybe the other way around. She's produced several award-winning specials on subjects such as Outward Bound and organ transplants and would like to do more.

"I would like to do a show that's very inspirational to women," she said. "I'm 32 and I feel as though my life is just beginning and I feel that many women have many more choices than they even know about. I am discovering untapped strengths in myself. Things happen when a marriage disintegrates. You have to get over that pain and reestablish yourself. What I did was take the anger and rage and train for the Marathon which I ran in four hours, which is pretty good for a first time. You can make changes in your life and accommodate them by setting goals. You can find different paths to whoever you are. I would like to do a program that talks about those choices, that shows women they do have the power to do what they want.

Ms. Alspaugh also admits to a certain wanderlust, says he's still sort of obsessive, but more about her personal life than at work. She's planning soon to do some sport fishing in the Florida Keys and to play polo in Palm Beach for the Myopia Celebrity Tournament.

A Stone's Throw

By Paul Steven Stone

For all the Lovely People

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized there was only beauty and happiness in the world. Everybody had a home and two Mercedes and a signed Christmas card from the Reagans.

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized I didn't have to wait to go to heaven.

This is for all the lovely people,
This is for those with the Midas Touch,
This is for all the ones
Who never leave
Till they have too much,
I love all the lovely people.

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized there was no hunger in the world, and that poverty only existed in old newsreels and fiction. Everybody had quiche for breakfast and an American Express card for emergencies.

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized I was no longer just a man, I was a member of the club. And that membership had its privileges.

This is for all the lovely people,
This is for summers at the shore,
This is for Donald Trump
Who never stops
Working at the pump,
God Bless all the lovely people.

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized there was nobody in the world that needed my help. Everybody had more than enough love and every child knew just what he wanted for Christmas.

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized there was no reason to wait for the second coming. It couldn't get any better than this.

This is for all the lovely people,
This is for People Magazine,
This is for all the ones
Whose private jets
Are always kept clean,
God loves all the lovely people.

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized there was nothing I had to do for anybody. Everybody had gotten exactly what they deserved from life and only I deserved to get more.

☐ Yesterday I looked around and realized I was the center of the universe.

☐ Yesterday was a day like any other.

Last sermon

On April 4, 1968 I was driving between Nashville and Franklin, Tennessee. I was taking a break from my classes at college with two friends. The Top 40 radio station interrupted the music to tell us Martin Luther King Jr. had been shot in Memphis.

Our first reaction was shock, numbness, but I can't say we were surprised. We had seen the hatred, even among some of our classmates when Dr. King had spoken on campus the previous year. Our reaction was not surprise that he had been killed, but that it had not come sooner.

We were too young to feel the depth of loss at the time. I mourn for his death more now, twenty years later, than I was able to at the time. The years have taught me what he meant for our nation, and the incredible courage of the movement he articulated.

One month later The Poor People's March on Washington began, under the leadership of the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, substituting for Dr. King.

Two months later Robert Kennedy was killed.

By the fall Hubert Humphrey and Richard Nixon were contesting the White House and I saw no place for me in the mainline political process.

Some people my age went to the Democratic Convention in Chicago to protest and get beat up. That didn't seem very productive to me.

It was like a depressing cloud fell over the political landscape that has yet to be lifted.

Dr. King's last sermon was given the day before he died, twenty years ago this Easter, at the Bishop Charles Mason Temple in Memphis, the headquarters of the largest African American pentecostal denomination in the United States.

He said, "Men, for years now, have been talking about war and peace. But now, no longer can they just talk about it. It is no longer a choice between violence and nonviolence in this world; it's nonviolence or nonexistence.

"That is where we are today. And also in the human rights revolution, if something isn't done, and in a hurry, to bring the colored peoples of the world out of their long years of poverty, their long years of hurt and neglect, the whole world is doomed."

There is also a most remarkable sense of personal mortality in his last speech. He concludes be relating the time he was stabbed and almost died. He says he is thankful he recovered because he would have missed the great stories toward equality which the years since had brought. Though sadly prophetic, his last public words were, as always, clear, precise and inspiring.

"And then I got to Memphis. And some began to say the threats, or talk about the threats that were out. What would happen to me from some of our sick white brothers?

"Well, I don't know what will happen now. We've got some difficult days ahead. But that doesn't matter with me, now. Because I've been to the mountaintop. And I don't mind. Like anybody, I would like to live a long life. Longevity has its place. But I'm not concerned about that now. I just want to do God's will. And He's allowed me to go up to the mountain. And I've looked over. And I've seen the promised land. I may not get there with you. But I want you to know tonight, that we, as a people will get to the promised land. And I'm happy, tonight. I'm not worried about anything. I'm not fearing any man. My eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord."

wait [wāt] v.
Many times, recovering from hospitalization is a lot more than just bed rest. It is therapy, help in moving about your home, or the monitoring of changing conditions. In home care, no one should have to wait for services that their doctor says they need. Waiting is more than frustrating. It slows down the healing process. If you or a family member is hospitalized, you can control the waiting process. Please think of us when you select home care services. You can choose to wait or not to wait. The choice is yours.

Horoscope

Rejoice, all you astrophobes out there. It's Spring. Spring, when a man and a woman's fancy lightly turn to thoughts of — gardening. But, oh, the decisions. Should one plant on the new moon or the dark of the moon? When the moon is in Taurus, the universal symbol for fertilizer? Or in Virgo, represented by a maiden bearing a sheaf of wheat? Most of all, what should one plant? Does the same sunflower that blooms gaily for the Leo shine as warmly on the Capricorn? Of course not.

So I shlepped on over to Madam Zolar's chic little ashram on Third Cliff and procured the following spring planting guide for the astrologically aware.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Zucchini. Definitely plant zucchini. People in your family won't be any more enthusiastic over the prospect of zucchini than anyone else, but Aries are the only ones aggressive enough to make them eat it. If necessary, you will bring baskets of zucchini to Boston Common and, at gunpoint, force people to take it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Taurus, as we all know, is the Bull. So with all that fertilizer, anything you plant should grow beautifully. How about a nice grape arbor? The vines can be woven into really neat baskets, which will give you something to do while you're sitting at the table stubbornly telling an Aries that you don't want any zucchini.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Geminis no sooner do one thing than they change their minds and wish they had done something else. Plant orchids. They're just about impossible to grow in this climate. Just about the time you get tired of them they should be about ready to die, and you can plant something else.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It isn't so much what Cancers plant as how they plant it. Wear loose, comfortable clothing; add a wide-brimmed hat to protect your complexion from the sun; have a tall, cool drink close at hand. Then go outdoors and show the man where to dig.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Leos favor small, tasteful gardens and are particularly prone to planting groupings of 6 foot tall peonies or reproducing the Hanging Gardens of Babylon on their patios. Way to go, Leo. Have a go at it!

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): Virgos don't care that they plant so long as it can be grown in incredibly neat rows, is good for you, and tastes just awful. Parsnips, perhaps?

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): White. Plant lots of white flowers. White gladiolas. White lilies. Lilies of the valley. White roses. Then if anyone should happen to propose marriage you'll have the flowers ready. Or maybe flax, so you can macrame some darling little baskets to carry the flowers in. Or on the other hand . . .

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): If you are a Scorpio who also happens to be a presidential candidate, you may want to concentrate on next year's garden. How about tomato plants on the front lawn of the White House? Right next to that fountain for convenient watering.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Dear Sagittarius. There's so much advice we could give you. But we know that no matter what we say you'll wind up sowing your wild oats. Again.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): You expect an unusually fruitful harvest. While everyone else is occupied scratching in the dirt, you'll be in the office stealing their jobs. Then you'll be able to buy all the fruits and vegetables you want.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): Please, Aquarius, control that impulse. Grow something legal, for heaven's sake. May we suggest something that will express your political persuasion? Like enough bleeding hearts to keep Morton Downey Jr. at bay?

PISCES (February 19-March 20): Sweet Pisces. Doubtless your property has an extremely high water table — Pisceans just can't seem to get enough of the stuff. So why not a willow tree? The two of you can enjoy many glorious years weeping together.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Pay no attention to a Sun Sign astrologer who writes for a local newspaper. She's only trying to earn enough money to cover her yard with bleeding hearts.

Easter brunch

Parents may groan at the thought of waking up at 5 a.m., but when it's Easter morning and you're a child, it's never too early to sneak out of bed to search for colored eggs, marshmallow chicks, jelly beans, creme-filled candy eggs and, hopefully, a sinfully rich chocolate Easter bunny. Whether one observes Easter at a sunrise service, or a more traditional church service, coming home to a brunch will be easy and pleasant if you have planned ahead by preparing Betty Barry's

CEREAL BANANA BREAD

1½ cups all-purpose flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup mashed ripe bananas
2/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/3 cup orange juice
1 egg, slightly beaten
1/3 cup margarine or butter, melted and slightly cooled
2 cups fortified oat flakes
¼ cup coarsely chopped pecans

Mix and sift first three ingredients. Add next five ingredients and blend until flour is dampened. Add remaining two ingredients. Pour into well-greased 9x5x3" loaf pan. Bake at 350 for approximately 50 minutes, or until cake tester comes out clean. Cool in pan approximately 10 minutes; remove and finish cooling on rack. For easier slicing, wrap and store overnight.

They're fun to paint and hunt, but inevitably, one is faced with left-over hard boiled eggs. The traditional ham presents no problem, for it lends itself easily to sandwiches and casseroles and what is more welcome than pea soup made from the ham bone? If properly stored, a favorite, quick Sunday night supper is a cream sauce combined with mushrooms and egg slices served on toast.

And, of course, nothing can compare with stuffed eggs served as an appetizer. Eggs are a comparatively inexpensive way to serve one's family protein and it's unfortunate so many people must forfeit them to a cholesterol diet, but for those who blithely include them in their menu if only once a week, here is a dish called

SCALLOPED EGGS

Add more protein by mixing wheat germ with the crumbs.

¾ to 1 cup cooked ham, chicken, veal or fish
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
2 cups cream sauce
¾ cup buttered fine bread crumbs

Butter casserole and sprinkle with crumbs. Cover with half the eggs, then half the sauce and half the meat or fish. Repeat and cover with remaining crumbs and bake at 375 until crumbs are brown. NOTE: peas, asparagus, sliced cooked potatoes may be added with more sauce or milk to feed six.

It comes as no surprise to our South Look staff to learn that Brenda Covini spent a few precious hours of a recent weekend in her kitchen trying out another new recipe. We all know she's a terrific cook and you can judge for yourself when you read how she delighted her family by adding a few of her own touches to this

ASPARAGUS-CASHEW STIR-FRY

3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1½ cup water or vegetable stock
1 tablespoon minced ginger root (Brenda substituted ginger)
1 teaspoon sesame oil, preferably toasted sesame oil
¼ teaspoon dry crushed red pepper, or to taste, dash of white pepper
2 tablespoons safflower oil
1 pound fresh asparagus, tender-part cut into 3" lengths
4 scallions, chopped
1 each small sweet red pepper, chopped, clove garlic, minced
1 cup cashews, dry roasted, unsalted, or raw.

In small bowl, combine soy sauce and cornstarch. Stir in remaining sauce ingredients. Set aside. In wok or large skillet, heat oil. Stir-fry veggies until crisp-tender. Stir sauce mixture. Pour over the vegetables and stir until it is thickened and bubbly. Reduce heat. Fold in cashews. Cover and cook for 1 minute, until cashews are heated through and top with garnish of mandarin orange sections and toasted sesame seeds, optional. Serve over pasta or rice.

NOTE: Brenda added two breasts of chicken, cut in 1 inch slices and cooked in the juices, using chicken stock instead of water. Broccoli florets may be substituted for asparagus, or sliced mushrooms, or thinly sliced carrots.

For yet another variation, with the cashews, gently stir in 1 pound firm tofu cut into half-inch cubes.

Opening skirmish in battle for roads

The temperature was in the high 60s the other day when my trusty '73 Buick and I rounded a turn on Jerusalem Road to be confronted by that most hazardous of all early harbingers of spring — a jogger.

I swerved to avoid him — or her, for they all look the same in their spiffy designer unisex jogging suits.

I spoke of his ancestry at some length. He responded with four-letter Anglo-Saxon functional verbs.

It was like the opening skirmish between patrols of two armies that are not yet at all-out war but know that, as certain as death and taxes, they will meet again and again on highways and byways all over New England.

Jerusalem Road is in the home turf of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and if you've ever driven it, particularly in a '73 Buick, you'll know how difficult it is for two cars to pass, even with waxed fenders.

In fact, if I recall right, Mary Jeanette once filed a bill in the state legislature that would ban or otherwise restrict the use of public roads by joggers or other pedestrians traveling at speeds greater than a brisk walk.

Even Mary Jeanette was taken aback by the howls of outrage, possibly from the designers of jogging suits and shoes, that followed and the bill was withdrawn.

It's going to get worse before it gets better.

Boston Running News, the joggers' Bible, has announced that its is co-sponsoring the first New England Road Race Directors' workshop June 11 in New Bedford to turn out new and better road race directors.

It is axiomatic that wherever there is a road race director there will be a road race and wherever there is a road race there will be road racers, as organized joggers like to call themselves.

The mind-boggling total of 7,100 of them turned out in the heat and humidity one day last summer to huff and puff their way through 3.5 miles of Boston streets, winding up in a party on Boston Common.

Jogging aficionados will immediately recognize that as a 5.63255K race since no one talks of miles or even kilometers anymore. It's 5K or 10K or you don't belong.

The Boston race, known as the Manufacturers Hanover Corporate Challenge, represented an alarming development in jogging — corporate running teams.

It seems that companies are now sponsoring groups of runners bent on challenging motor vehicles on the public avenues while wearing the corporate logo more or less proudly on their heaving chests.

It won't be long now before rival companies, like college football factories, will be in competition to recruit the best runners to sweep out the office, jog with the boss and run a marathon for good old Raytheon U on Saturday for $100,000 a year with options.

And what happens when the president of Ford in his '88 Lincoln Continental confronts a struggling jogger with the General Motors logo on his chest on a turn in Jerusalem Road?

Even a '73 Buick would drive a long way to see that one.

South Look welcomes letters to the editor.

Music review

Vivaldi concert a sellout

by Merilyn de Vos
South Look staff

Last Sunday's Candlelight Concert achieved a new, and well-deserved, milestone. Now in its tenth season, the March 20, all-Vivaldi concert was the first mid-season sellout.

The four-concert series has been, thus far, entirely commendable. Director Edwin Swanborn has high musical standards and a network of professional associates who complement his musical vision.

The concerts are held in the acoustic marvel of the First Parish Church in Duxbury, the quality of which inspired Mr. Swanborn to start the series; lighting is entirely produced by eight dozen candles set in five-foot high holders.

The atmosphere is warm and comfortable. Memories of any hushed and rarefied chamber concerts you may have attended may be shelved.

Of course, the program on March 20th, Vivaldi's "Four Seasons" plus three violin concerti, could be relied upon to loosen the stiffist upper lip.The music was terrific and the playing of violin soloist Joseph Genualdi was like the voice of an angel. Mr. Genualdi plays a Stradivarius and you know what that means 10 seconds after hearing it. All the other fiddles, though more than competently played, sounded dull, flat, much less bright in tone.

Mr. Genualdi and his Stradivarius deserve one another and most of the audience is anxious to hear them again in the last concert of this year's series, an all-Brahms program, scheduled for May 15, 7 p.m. Tickets are $9 general admission, $6 students and seniors.

Candlelight concert

Information at 934-2378.

A word must be added about the post-concert receptions. These extravaganzas are done entirely by Mr. Swanborn's mother, Jean. One really cannot appreciate, without having seen it, the labor (of love) involved. Surely, the moment one concert ends, she must begin preparing for the next.

There are four beverages : wine, punch, coffee or tea. And there are cheese spreads and dips and, best known, thousand and thousands of the dantiest and most delicious cookies on the planet. Throughout the reception you can hear otherwise restrained people raving over their quantity and quality.

The Candlelight Concert Series is paid for largely through ticket sales, and supplemented by a small Massachusetts Arts Council grant. Perhaps Jean Swanborn could have a selection of her recipes printed and sold as a fund raiser at the receptions. It seems a sure bet to sell well.

Theater review

Macbeth too fragmented

By Judith Montminy
South Look correspondent

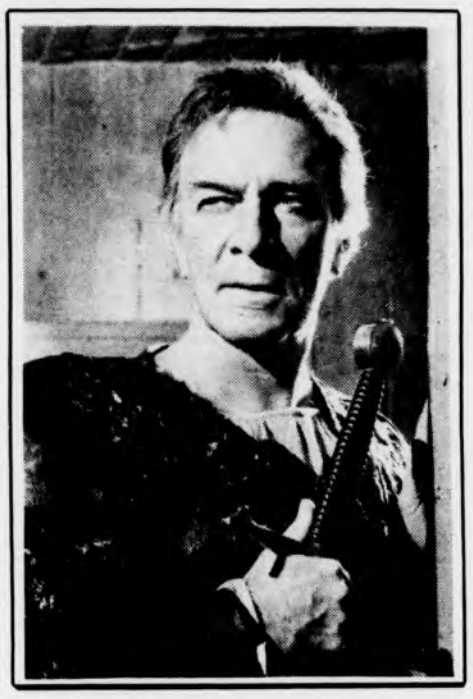
Even if you haven't read or seen Shakespeare's "Macbeth" since high school, chances are good that you remember the bloody murder scenes and the witches with their curious predictions for the Thane of Glamis. High on the list of lasting impressions, sits the central character's tragic flaw — his blinding ambition quickened by his partner in crime, Lady Macbeth.

If you ordered your tickets in advance (only obstructed view seats are available now) for the production of "Macbeth" that is having its pre-Broadway tryout at Boston's Colonial Theatre, you will find the two stars, Christopher Plummer and Glenda Jackson, playing the leads in a tame version of Shakespeare's great tragedy. (Keep in mind, though, a matinee last week was cancelled so the cast could continue to rehearse the play.)

What is missing, then, from the latest production of Shakespeare's tale of ambition, passion and fate vs. free will? A unifying vision, a director's strong hand and attention to details.

Director Robin Phillips has yet to integrate the lead actors' styles. Plummer and Jackson, reputed to be strong personalities, dominate center stage, spinning in their own orbits during their soliloquies. But they haven't made the connection with each other that is crucial to the play. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth are supposed to be the perfect example of synergistic energy — the power of the two combined should add up to more than one plus one. That doesn't happen there.

Jackson's visceral Lady Macbeth, complete with her stylized vocal delivery of her "unsex me" speech as she clings to her breasts and loins, is out of sync with Plummer's cool, cerebral Macbeth. The chemistry between the two is missing.



Christopher Plummer in 'Macbeth'

During Lady Macbeth's sleepwalking scene, as she tries to wipe out the blood stains on her conscience, Jackson becomes a troubled, small Lady Macbeth, not a woman of tragic proportions. She's fallen into a disturbed states, but her distraction befits an ordinary, distressed person. The change is inconsistent with the powerful character she has created in earlier scenes.

Paul Shenar is an able Banquo, who hears the witches predict that Macbeth will become Thane of Cawdor, then king. Macbeth fears that Banquo will realize that he and his wife have murdered Duncan, King of Scotland, to help the witches' prediction come true. Banquo must be killed. Plummer's Macbeth orders Banquo's murder without the driving sense of inevitability and conflict one expects from the newly crowned king.

The first true note of unspeakable horror is not sounded until Macduff (Stephen Markle) learns Macbeth is responsible for the murders of Lady Macduff and her children. Something has to be off-kilter in the production if it takes this long for the treachery to be felt.

Also off the mark are the Three Witches, who appear less as supernatural mediums and more as "bag ladies." Their doubling in other roles adds to the confusion since their costume changes are not distinct. If Phillips is making a point about the everpresent quality of the witches, then that point needs to be made clearly.

"Macbeth" has a reputation in theatrical circles of being a "jinxed" play, replete with production problems and unforeseen troubles. With work, adjusted performances and a determination to let the director's ("free") will triumph over fate, the current production of "Macbeth" still has a chance to disprove the infamous Scot's famous line: "What's done cannot be undone."

"Macbeth" is scheduled to open on Broadway on April 13. (As fate would have it, April 13 is NOT a Friday!)

Film Clips Film

VICE VERSA. A Columbia release. Directed by Brian Gilbert. Written by Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais. With Judge Reinhold and Fred Savage. At area theaters.

The bad news about the new film "Vice Versa" is that it uses the same premise as last year's atrocious Dudley Moore-Kirk Cameron comedy, "Like Father, Like Son."

However, there is some good news. "Vice Versa" is much better than "Like Father, Like Son." "Vice Versa," unlike "Like Father, Like Son," has some amusing moments and generally good performances.

The always amiable Judge Reinhold plays Marshall Seymour, a Chicago department-store executive who is such a workaholic he has little time to spend with his 11-year-old son Charlie (well played by Fred Savage, whom you may remember as Peter Falk's grandson in "The Princess Bride.")

Thanks to a mystical skull Marshall innocently acquires after a business trip to Bangkok, Marshall and Charlie switch bodies and, predictably, grow closer because of the experience. (Marshall is reminded of the agonies of elementary school, and Charlie appreciates for the first time how hard his father works to earn a comfortable living.)

You can hardly give director Brian Gilbert and writers Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais high marks for originality, but with the exception of some dumb gags (Charlie's frog getting loose in an elegant restaurant, Marshall inflicting a painful injury on Charlie's hockey coach), "Vice Versa" reaches its inevitable conclusion briskly and inoffensively.

Judge Reinhold (right) and Fred Savage (left) play father and son who have switched bodies in 'Vice Versa.'

It's a shame that talented performers like Swoosie Kurtz (as a smuggler) and Jane Kaczmarek (as Marshall's ex-wife) have so little to do, but why complain? At least one can watch "Vice Versa" without groaning. ("Vice Versa" is rated PG because of strong language.)

Also Playing

OFF LIMITS (R) — Set in Saigon in 1968, this mediocre thriller stars Willem Dafoe and Gregory Hines as Army cops who are investigating a series of murders. Although Mr. Dafoe and Mr. Hines give convincing performances, key elements of the plot don't add up, and Christopher Crowe's direction is frequently crude.

MOVING (R) - Director Alan Metter, whose last film was the delightful "Back to School," stumbles badly with this unfunny comedy of catastrophes. Richard Pryor (as a harried engineer trying to move his family from New Jersey to Idaho), Dave Thomas, Randy Quaid, and Dana Carvey are victimized by a poor script.

HOPE AND GLORY (PG-13) - Writer/director John Boorman's autobiographical comedy-drama about growing up in England during World War II is well-acted (especially by Sarah Miles and Ian Bannen) and charming, but it's puzzling that it has been nominated for the Best Picture Oscar. To me, "Hope and Glory" is a good film, not an outstanding one.

Video Spotlight:

In "Stakeout," Richard Dreyfuss and Emilio Estevez play Seattle detectives who are assigned to watch the home of a beautiful woman (Madeleine Stowe) whose ex-boyfriend (Aidan Quinn) just escaped from prison. Mr. Dreyfuss then jeopardizes his career by falling in love with Ms. Stowe.

This is one of director John Badham's best films. "Stakeout" succeeds both as a comedy and as a thriller. Mr. Estevez gives his best performance to date, Mr. Dreyfuss is even better than he was in "Tin Men," and Mr. Quinn makes a terrifying villain.

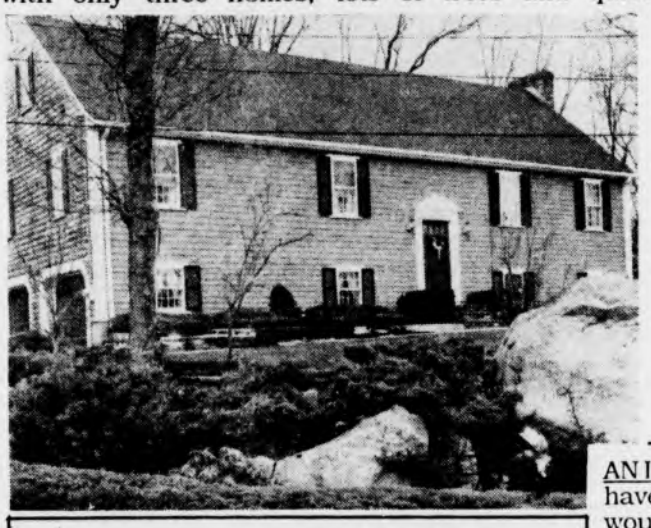
For those who can't decide if they want to live in the city or the suburbs this nifty eight year old house in Braintree may offer the perfect compromise.

Located about two minutes from the Route 3 Union Street exit, near the intersection with Route 128, you can be on your way to wherever in no time. But when you are home, on Hazel Court, you are on a cul-de-sac with only three homes, lots of trees and quiet privacy galore.



Braintree house in suburbs offers best of two worlds: country and city.

This nine-room house has four bedrooms and three full bathrooms on two floors. It is in immaculate condition.

From the front door's flagstone foyer there are stairs up and down. Upstairs is an L-shaped living and dining room with a Franklin stove in the fireplace. Off the dining room is the kitchen and down a few stairs from that is what the owners call the morning room, a sunny spot someone else might call a den.

Also upstairs are three bedrooms and two bathrooms. There are lots of closets and cupboards.

Downstairs you have a family room with another fireplace, the fourth bedroom, a laundry room with a door to the back yard and a two-car garage you enter from a corridor.

The house is naturally weathered cedar shingles except in the front which has been painted blue. Windows are 12s over 12s with black shutters. There is a matching storage shed in the backyard.

The gas heat runs off four zones. Extra storage in the attic and lower level.

The lot is rectangular, about 25,000 square feet, and two-thirds of it charmingly landscaped The backyard is a sea of pink rhododendron. Beds of mature plantings have been sculpted out of every nook and cranny of space.

An eight-foot cedar fence gives privacy to the backyard and there are decks with built-in benches. You just might find yourself sitting on one in smug appreciation of your coup. After all, you'll be able to enjoy the lushness resulting from eight years' gardening without the effort.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. X, No. 28 | Thursday, April 7, 1988 | Tel. 383-6731 | 40 cents

When Cohasset Talks . . . is anyone listening? More than 300 voters did during the first session of town meeting last Saturday. Selectmen conferred several times with Town Counsel Richard Henderson as voters approved a $515,000 budget deficit. Voters approve deficit budget

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

After a two and a-half hour debate, and a real-life civics lesson on the mechanics of a Proposition 2 1/2 override, voters at Saturday's session of town meeting approved an $11 million operating budget.

Approval of that article placed the town $515,000 in the hole, which now requires a Proposition 2 1/2 override at a special election the end of April.

"This begins a new era for the towns in Massachusetts," advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke told the 350 persons who attended Saturday's opening session. Proposition 2 1/2 overrides are becoming commonplace in many communities and will be seen again in future years, she predicted.

Approving the Fiscal 1989 budget, she explained, will result in a $515,000 deficit. That will raise the tax rate by 72 cents to $13.70 per $1,000 valuation (an allowed increase of 2 1/2 percent would raise the tax rate by 34 cents).

She warned voters that if they approve additional town meeting warrant items such as mandatory property revaluations at $70,000; mosquito control spraying for $2,000; payment to environmental legal counsel for $50,000;

Four contests highlight Saturday's local election

Saturday's election won't be a record-breaker.

Although there are four contests, a large turnout is not expected for Saturday's local election.

Town Clerk Frances Marks predicted a low voter turnout for the annual election, saying the lack of contested offices may keep Cohasset voters from the polls.

There are races for a three-year seat on the board of health; a five-year term on the planning board; and three seats on the library board of trustees.

One hotly-contested race is for a three-year seat on the board of sewer commissioners. Incumbent Raimund G. Vanderweil is facing opposition from Lot W. Bates. Bates was the challenger in last year's contest against commissioner Edward Guild.

Incumbent Rocco Laugelle will face no opposition in his bid for re-election to the board of selectmen. He is running for a three-year seat on the board.

School committee member Barbara Bliss will not be challenged for her re-election bid. J. Russell Reidy is running for a three-year term vacated by incumbent Joseph Nedrow. The current school committee chairman is not seeking re-election.

In the past few years, voter turnout has been fairly high, according to the town clerk. In 1987, 45 percent of the 4,580 registered voters cast a ballot. In 1986, when there were contested races for the board of selectmen, 51 percent of the local voters went to the polls.

Marks predicted a voter turnout of 30 percent for Saturday's election. "There's no race for selectman," she said, "so I think it will be very low."

Among the contested offices is a three-year seat on the board of health. Michael Sullivan is running for that seat along with Hugh Morgan. Incumbent planning board chairman Robert Sturdy is being challenged for a five-year term by J. Stephen Bjorklund. There are four candidates for three seats on the board of trustees of the Paul Pratt Library. They are Elizabeth Easton, Agnes

Frugal crowd rejects fire/police station repairs

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

No additional money was added to the tax rate during Tuesday night's town meeting session.

Rather, voters decided to reverse their positions on articles approved at previous town meetings. A proposal to renovate the police and fire station was shot down after reconsideration this week, and last year's first-in-the-state bylaw requiring sprinkler systems for new homes was rejected after a second look by voters.

Following the conclusion of Tuesday night's meeting, advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke noted that although no appropriations through taxation were approved Tuesday night, the current town meeting has voted to borrow several items. That will affect the fiscal year 1990 tax rate, she said, by about $50,000 in principal and interest costs. That amount does not include about $98,000 for the landfill transfer station in fiscal year 1990.

The highlight of Tuesday night's session was not the expenditure of money, but the impassioned, philosophic speeches by voters.

Although voters at the October special town meeting narrowly approved $1.1 million in renovations to the police and fire station, they rejected the same proposal at this town meeting.

The article was reintroduced by several citizens who argued that an incorrect procedure was followed at the October town meeting, and they requested a revote on the appropriation.

Raymond Kasperowicz, one of the residents who signed the petition article, said although many were not against the need for the project, the price appeared too steep for the proposed work. The advisory committee suggested the previous vote be rescinded, "purely on a financial ground."

Selectmen voted 3-2 not to rescind the previous vote, but the capital budget committee was in favor of rescinding the original project approval.

Chief Brock noted that state legislation is pending which would grant the town up to 75 percent of the construction costs. Approved plans need to be shown so the town will be eligible for the funds, should they be made available, he said.

But South Main Street resident Francis Collins, argued that the expenditure was "grossly in excess of needs."

Emmet Holt of Highland Avenue said many residents considered the outcome of this proposal as a "benchmark on how they will vote at the ballot box (for a general override). If we rescind this vote, I think a lot of people will vote for an override. I hate to see this article get in the way of conducting business. I believe we should rescind it, but take it in the future when our house is in better order."

A hand count of voters determined 135 in favor of rescinding the original approval, and 76 against the motion.

Despite arguments by Chief Brock to require residential sprinkler systems in new homes, town meeting rejected his appeal this year. At last year's town meeting, voters overwhelmingly approved the regulation, but it was turned down after review by the attorney general. Chief Brock explained the new proposal would direct

Tax rate rises

Advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke warned voters Tuesday night that the town's fiscal year 1989 tax rate was now up to $14.12 per $1,000 valuation.

For a home assessed at $200,000, the current taxes are $2,600. With the increased tax rate, she stated, the taxes will be $2,824.

The increase thus far in the tax rate was caused by appropriations approved by town meeting for mosquito control, purchase of a five-town ambulance, $80,000 for the operation of the transfer station, purchase of a dozer/grader, and rescue equipment for the fire department.

Those appropriations totalling $117,800 were added to the operating budget deficit of $515,00 for a total deficit of $682,800.

If voters approve a Proposition 2 1/2 override for that amount, it will add $1.14 to next year's tax rate, she explained.

Cohasset's week . . .

Town clerk not to blame

The delayed posting of the warrant for the special town meeting, which caused a postponement of that meeting, was the responsibility of selectmen and not the town clerk.

Town Clerk Frances Marks noted last week that selectmen are responsible for publically posting the warrant 14 days in advance of the special town meeting. Because of a three-day delay, the special town meeting which was scheduled April 2 along with the annual town meeting, had to be postponed until May 2. The annual town meeting, which requires advanced posting of only seven days, began April 2 as scheduled.

Marks stated, "It has come to the attention of the town clerk that it was my responsibility for the posting of the warrant for the special town meeting that was to be held April 2, 1988 and will now be held on May 2, 1988 because of the delayed posting. Attested copes of the warrant shall be posted at least fourteen days before a special town meeting and not less than seven days before an annual town meeting.

"As the town clerk, I would like to clarify this further by bringing to your attention in the general bylaws, Article III Elected Town Officers Sect. 2. Selectmen (C) 'The Selectmen shall cause to be compiled, printed, posted and distributed the warrant for each annual and special town meeting in accordance with the provisions of Article II of these bylaws.'

Under Article II Town Meeting, Sect. 2 Special Town Meeting (B) 'The Selectmen shall give notice of every special town meeting by causing a constable to post attested copies of the warrant for the meeting at the post office in the town, and in not less than five other public places in the town, not less than fourteen days before the day appointed for the meeting. In addition thereto, a copy of the warrant printed in some convenient form shall be sent by mail or delivered to each registered voter of the town, at least 14 days before the day appointed for the meeting.'

According to Town Clerk Marks, "The responsibility lies with the selectmen for the posting of the warrant for a special town meeting and an annual town meeting."

Saturday resolutions

Before the start of Saturday's town meeting, several resolutions were accepted by voters.

Joseph Nedrow, chairman of the school committee, offered a resolution honoring the members of the girls' state championship basketball team, the boys' state finalist basketball team, the Division III South Sectional championship hockey team, the boys' soccer team which was a finalist in the state championship, the wrestling team which was invited to the state wrestling tournament, the high school drama workshop which came in third at the recent state competition, and to the three CHS artists who won honors at a recent art competition.

Town meeting voters greeted representatives of these teams with a standing ovation, as the resolution was resoundingly approved.

Later in the meeting, the school committee offered a resolution honoring Nedrow for his nine years of dedicated service to the committee. And the Board of Health presented a resolution thanking chairman John Burns for his exceptional service to that board.

AFS on cable show

Leo X. Dwyer Jr. of Jerusalem Road will be the guest on the April 13 edition of "Person to Pierson", on Cohasset cable channel 3.

Dwyer is co-president of the Cohasset chapter of the American Field Service program. He will appear on the cable program along with Steven Sont of the Netherlands, and CHS senior Sarah Hamilton, two AFS participants.

The program will air on channel 3 at 7:30 p.m.

COOP-6 brunch

The next monthly brunch of COOP 6 will be held in Cohasset at Kimball's by the Sea Sunday April 10, at 10 a.m., according to Paula Buckley of the Marshfield Democratic Town Committee.

COOP 6 is a joint effort of the Democratic town committees in Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Marshfield and Scituate.

The most popular program sponsored by COOP 6 has been the monthly brunch program, reasonably priced, featuring distinguished speakers of local, state or national acclaim.

The guest speaker for the April 10 brunch will be Dean Finn, former director of the Kennedy Library, whose topic will be "The Development of a Presidential Staff."

Tickets for this or any brunch should be purchased in advance by contacting Paula Buckley at 837-2177. The cost is $10.

The April brunch is hosted by the Scituate Democratic Town Commitee.

Lot E. Bates honored

Longtime water commissioner Lot E. Bates was honored by town meeting Monday night.

Bates, who has served three terms as water commissioner, was honored with a resolution. William Montuori initiated a motion at town meeting to thank Bates for his decade of service as a member and chairman of the commission.

"We express our gratitude and wish you a happy retirement from public service," the resolution stated.

Town meeting resoundingly approved the resolution.

Town meeting supports truce with hunters

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Although selectman James Gallagher sought to make peace with the hunters of Cohasset, one resident remained strongly opposed to a truce.

Selectman Gallagher had proposed a ban on all hunting, except the hunting of coastal birds. His proposal was unpopular with many duck hunters in town who repeatedly stated there were never any complaints to justify the ban.

At town meeting Tuesday night, Selectman Gallagher said since he proposed the ban, he had received "a lot of flak" from residents. Rather than an outright ban, he suggested a seven-member committee, consisting of a duck hunter, a small game hunter, one archer, the police chief, a conservation commission member, and two other members, be formed to present a report to next year's annual town meeting.

Hunter Thomas Burke of Windy Hill Road praised the concept, saying a total ban would deprive the youth of an enjoyable form of recreation.

But opposition to Gallagher's resolution was raised by Geraldine Farwell of 393 Beechwood St. In an emotional speech to town meeting, Farwell explained how hunters have threatened her several times her, barraging her home with bullets, and swearing at her. Repeatedly they have come as close as 125 feet to her home, despite the 500-foot limit. "It's terrifying," she said, urging residents to instead consider a total ban on hunting.

Neighbor Lot W. Bates agreed, adding "after dark, it sounds like World War III. They may be hunters, but they're not very good shots."

Despite their arguments to enforce a ban, town meeting voted to adopt the resolution offered by Selectman Gallagher.

In other town meeting business Tuesday night, voters decided to endorse mandatory recycling at the landfill. Health board member William Baird noted that recycling could reduce the amount of trash in the transfer station by 30 or 40 percent. He explained that when the process begins, the health board plans to "gently" enforce the recycling of glass, newspapers, corregated cardboard and yard waste. No new personnel will be hired at the start, and no additional bins will be purchased until the program is in effect and is strengthened.

One possibility may be to purchase a container for household hazardous waste, including paints, solvents and motor oil. "We're just going to move on this as it makes sense," he cautioned.

In the future, if the landfill purchases a chipper, yard wood and building debris will be welcomed as part of the proposed composting facility planned for the landfill. As Baird noted, the health board will proceed slowly, and gear its programs and regulations acoordingly.

Voters rejected article 31 which would have authorized a land bank for the town. Although the article was approved last year, the state legislation giving local control to the proposal was eliminated.

Jerusalem Road resident Julie Guild spoke in opposition to the one percent of $100,000 "discriminatory tax" which would be imposed when a resident sells his property. The advisory committee noted the state must include other multiple uses for the land before the proposal is approved.

According to the Cohasset proposal, the land purchased through the program may be used as open space, ennvironmental protection, or for the site of affordable housing.

Ron Goodwin of Pond Street, Dan Cotton of King Street, and Francis Collins of South Main Street spoke in favor of the proposal, agreeing that open space is becoming a scare commodity in Cohasset. But town meeting defeated the article by a voice vote.

Voters approved a proposal by the planning board to create a municipal revolving account. Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy explained it was a more efficient accounting procedure which would allow the town to put into a separate escrow account the deposits required by developers while their proposals are reviewed by town boards. The deposits are used to supply needed engineering or legal assistance for the town during review of the developer's plans. Any excess amount is returned to the developer.

Town meeting resumed action until 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Voters want to study new agency

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A proposal to create a municipal housing authority was defeated by town meeting Saturday. A related article that would allow increased development of affordable housing in a residential district was not even considered after the defeat of the first article.

The planning board sponsored the two articles, according to chairman Robert Sturdy, as a way to create opportunities for below market housing in the town. He explained the municipal housing authority would not take the place of the current Cohasset Housing Authority, but it would have broader powers "where the housing needs of this town could be more specifically addressed."

He envisioned the same members could serve on both boards, managing town-owned properties such as the Government Island housing and perhaps the Curtis Estate in the future.

But John O'Donnell, a member of the Government Structure Study Committee, said they were not aware of this proposal until it appeared in the town meeting warrant. The committee voted to postpone any action on the proposal until it could be more thoroughly investigated.

Mary Klein, a proponent of affordable housing in Cohasset, said this proposal would be a positive step in developing higher standards of living for low and middle income families.

But a member of the housing authority said they have not been able to sufficiently research the proposal. "It is unclear where the areas of responsibilities would be," Fred Koed stated. "I would like to know what state regulations the planning board is worried about."

Sturdy noted that the state has set $100,000 as an affordable housing price. But the entry level purchase price of a home in Cohasset is $175,000, Sturdy said. "If this is going to be considered broadly, we have to consider what applies to this town." He also noted the state requires open applications for housing, so no preference can be given to Cohasset residents.

But Chartis Langmaid, Cohasset's representative to the South Shore Coalition's housing task force, agreed it would be best to postpone debate on the issue "until we understand the specific effect it would have on the community." Meanwhile, the Coalition is working to obtain a consultant who would create a system establishing ten percent of developments as affordable housing.

Town meeting followed that advice and defeated the article by a voice vote.

In other action Saturday, voters supported a change in the personnel bylaws that would allow employee evaluations to be submitted to the personnel committee for review.

The article was approved despite arguments by two members of the library board of trustees not to support the change in the classification and compensation plan.

Committee member Charles Duggan said the change was needed to ensure that all department heads fill out the employee evaluation forms fairly and completely before the board approves step raise requests.

But library trustee Barbara Power disagreed, saying the only persons who should be allowed to view the evaluations is the department head and the employee. The contents of the form, she said, should be kept confidential. "The content is of no particular interest to the personnel committee," she stated.

Trustee Rev. Edward Atkinson said allowing the personnel committee to view the confidential forms "is an open invitation to a huge amount of red tape. If their only concern is that it was filled out completely, we would happy to assure them in writing that they are filled out," he stated.

But personnel committee chairman Jan Daggett said the committee's only concern is that all town employees are treated equitably and that the evaluation forms are filled out completely and accurately. Some departments, she noted, have filed incomplete, defective evaluations that were discovered only upon review by the personnel committee. An evaluation is considered complete when both the employer and employee have signed the form. Review of the form by the personnel committee is the only way to ensure the procedure has been properly followed.

Town meeting also approved a $15,000 appropriation as Cohasset's proportionate share in the purchase of a five-town ambulance. That money will be added onto the $515,000 budget deficit.

The ambulance is part of a five-town agreement with Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate.

New programs add to town's rising rate

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Voters were in a generous mood at Monday night's town meeting as they added more than a dollar to their tax bills for a transfer station at the landfill, a contract with a Maine disposal facility, and new hydraulic equipment for the fire department.

The $550,000 needed for construction of the transfer station at the Cedar Street landfill will require a separate debt exclusion override. That question will appear as a separate ballot in the special election the end of April. If approved, it could cost about ten cents on the tax rate for a total of ten years, but it will not affect the tax base once the debt is retired.

A dozer/grader for the landfill was approved through a five-year lease/purchase plan. The equipment will cost the town about $12,000 per year. That appropriation will be added to the general override amount.

Advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke explained that for every $10,000 appropriated through taxation by town meeting, it will add 1.8 cents to the tax rate. A $100,000 appropriation will add 18 cents, she explained.

Two other items were purchased by borrowing the money, and will not affect next year's tax rate. They include a $50,000 front end loader for the highway department, and $32,000 for the purchase of a school bus.

Despite warnings of higher tax bills, town meeting approved every purchase request at Monday night's session.

The longest discussion of the night centered on the proposal to construct a transfer station at the landfill, and a subsequent article to begin disposing the town's trash at a Maine resource recovery facility in January, 1989.

Despite an offer from the owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. to take the town's trash at no cost, voters opted for the Maine alternative.

Disposal Area Study Committee member Donald DeMichele noted that although they welcomed the offer from Paul Barry, the committee favored a contract at this time with Penobscot Energy Recovery Co. "It in no way excludes us from continuing with negotiations with CHL," DeMichele stated.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) must give approval to an additional two and a-half acres to CHL before they have enough room to accomodate Cohasset's trash. Another hitch in the deal, according to water commissioner Ron Goodwin, is that the appeals court recently ruled against CHL accepting general refuse into the landfill.

Goodwin noted that although the commercial landfill is not presently polluting nearby Lily Pond, "we need to look into the future. Does it make sense not to ship (trash) to Maine, and pay for a new water system in the future?"

DeMichele explained that although the town has signed a contract with SEMASS, the trash-to-energy facility in Rochester, Cohasset will not begin participation until the second phase is constructed in late 1990. But because the town landfill is quickly filling up, there needs to be a more immediate solution.

Both alternatives require the town to construct a transfer station at the Cedar Street landfill. DeMichele estimated that with site preparation, construction and new equipment, it will cost about $550,000 for the new facility.

SEA consulting engineer Mark Gould said the facility will be able to handle 20 tons of trash per day. The station will be a three-sided, open-ended building located aside a steep grade where the trailer will be situated. Cars will back-up directly into the station where trash will be unloaded into the roofless trailer. Located next to the building will be three large bins for disposal of recycled materials.

A hydraulic crane will be used to compact the material so that the trailer will actually haul away between 15 and 17 tons of trash.

The construction of the transfer station, along with all site preparation work, will require a separate debt exclusion override on the special election ballot, according to advisory committee chairman Goedecke. If this requires a ten-year borrowing note, she explained, it will add about ten cents to the tax rate for ten years.

Some residents questioned whether there should be a user fee at the station. But health board chairman John Burns noted that if a fee was charged, "we'd have trash everywhere but in the dump."

Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood Street urged voters to postpone the appropriation because "it can be done cheaper and done later."

But DeMichele noted there are only three to five years remaining at the landfill. It is crucial, he said, to leave some space at the Cedar Street dump because SEMASS will not accept all general household refuse. "By electing not to do anything until SEMASS, it is locking us into that. There is no guarantee SEMASS will get financing. This (the Maine alternative and a transfer station) gives us a five-year solution and then we can look around for other alternatives," he said.

CHL owner Barry urged voters to reconsider any expenditure. "We could work something out. We could accept your trash at CHL without going through the permitting process or a sophisticated transfer station," he stated.

Town meeting also approved the related article which will allow Cohasset to ship its trash from the transfer station to a Penobscot resource recovery facility. DeMichele estimated it would cost the town about $508 for a round trip carrying 20 tons, at an annual average of 4,000 tons. It will cost the town about $75,000 for the second half of 1989 when the transport of trash to Maine should begin, he said. That will mean an extra 14 cents on the tax rate for next year.

DeMichele said the disposal committee has reviewed several other alternatives, including curbside trash pickup for $600,000 but there is no other viable alternative at this time, he said.

The owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. made a second plea to town meeting during this article.

"I'm not here to suggest the town let up on policing the Heights," he stated. "We welcome the monitoring to keep the site environmentally sound.

"But this has been the most costly and longest issue for the town," he added, noting that a groundwater treatment facility is being designed, and an odor control device will be installed.

"The alternative to going to Maine - at no cost (CHL will accept) 12 tons of household refuse five days a week in exchange for permitting acreage so we can give the town 15 or 20 years."

Barry also noted that if the landfill is ever closed for environmental violations, there is will be alternative site provided at no cost for 120 days.

Town meeting subsequently voted in favor of a contract with Penobscot Energy Recovery Co.

Additional warrant articles

Town meeting approved a $8,800 appropriation for a new hydraulic "Jaws of Life" for the fire department.

The advisory committee did not recommend the expenditure, noting that every department's budget was one of maintenance which does not include increased equipment.

But Fire Chief Daniel Brock explained that the previous equipment, which is used to extricate victims from an automobile accident, is

Advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke advises town meeting about the rising tax rate. (Kym Marcella photo)

□ Last week we reported on the birth of Marissa Anne Evans, the brand new daughter of Darilynn and Larry and sister of Corey who is two years old. There will be a constant companion for Marissa, her cousin Grace Pearl Evans. Grace was born to Frank and Lisa Evans on March 26th (which is also her sister Sarah's birthday, who is two years old). Won't they have a lot of fun at family gatherings! Speaking of which, that makes the total number of grandchildren for Anne and Frank Evans fourteen...

□ Henry (Sonny) Lance was in town last week. Henry is living in Tennessee now, and is thinking of moving back to the area. He reports that all is well, and he certainly was happy to be back in his home town, even if it was only for a little while.

□ Don't forget to tune into ESPN Saturday at 1:30, where you can catch Bryan Edwards playing in the McDonalds Hall of Fame Classic. Bryan sure will have a full week, including meeting President Reagan on Tuesday. Be sure to watch as he puts our little town on the map.

□ It was nice to see the Yellow Daffodil, the flower of hope, in such great display around town last week. This was the result of the American Cancer Society's Seventh Annual Daffodil Day, which is one of its annual fund raising activities. Principal contributors to the success of this drive, and the distribution of these flowers to their customers included the Cohasset Savings Bank, Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, Beechwood Medical Center and the Rockland Trust Bank. The American Cancer Society thanks these institutions for their support, as well as those who supported the drive by purchasing daffodils for their own pleasure and distribution to their friends and neighbors. The next Community American Cancer Society Fund Drive will be the house-to-house campaign which will be conducted on April 16th to April 26th.

□ Robert Pattison and Vicky Kelley were certainly two happy students last week. They were accepted at Boston College and cannot wait for next Fall to begin their college careers.

□ Have you heard a familiar ring around town lately? You can thank Fran Collins for it. The town clock had some electrical problems that our resident clock genius couldn't figure out (Noel Ripley that is), so Noel called on Fran and it is now striking, after being silent for about a year. It was a long time in fixing, but it sure was well worth all of your time and efforts, Fran. We thank you!

□ South Shore Vo-Tech is accepting applications for next Fall, from students who are enrolled in grades 8 or 9. For an application and pamphlet regarding specific details of the various details of the courses available, call the Guidance Office at 871-4153.

□ Carla Lucas makes the news again, she has been named to the Wheaton NCAA Division III softball team. Carla, a junior at Wheaton College is the daughter of Thomas J. Lucas of Bourne Rock. Last year the Wheaton softball team finished the season with a record of 10-4, making them eligible for the NIAC Tournament, with Carla's help natch! Continued success this season Carla.

□ Scott A. Patrolia, son of Michael and Ellen Patrolia of Cushing Road, has been promoted to the rank of specialist four in the US Army. Scott is a missle crewmember in West Germany with the 9th Field Artillery.

□ Congratulations to the CHS Drama Club. They were chosen as the State Alternate during the finals competition of the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival for their production of "Fortress". Also, hats off to Michele Casolaro and Joe Mazza, who were selected as members of an All-star cast for their individual outstanding performances. The 16 students who played an ensemble in "Fortress" also received a special ensemble award.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has a limited number of tickets on sale for its Jerry Williams night, which will be on April 13th at Hugo's Lighthouse. Either mail a check for $5.00 to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, PO Box 336 or make your reservations at Cards and Shards. This event begins at 7:30, with light refreshments available.

□ Achievement awards were presented to associates of the Jack Conway Company's Cohasset office for the months of December, 1987 and January, 1988.

During December, Debbie Dulka of Scituate negotiated the most sales; and Mary Ellen Neagle of Cohasset listed the most property through the Cohasset office. In January, Norwell resident Mary Pecce negotiated the most sales, and Peter Breen of Minot listed the most property.

outmoded. The new unit, he said, is lighter and "enhances our ability to save lives."

Capt. Robert Silvia asked voters to support the purchase, saying, "less than two cents on the tax rate - that's a small price to pay for a life."

The expenditure will add about 1.6 cents per $1,000 valuation to the tax rate.

Town meeting voters sided with town officials and defeated an article requiring automatic sprinkler systems in all lodging houses. Daniel Leahy, general manager of the Kimball's By The Sea, and Fran Coffey, owner of the Red Lion Inn, both expressed their objections to the proposal made by Chief Brock.

Coffey said the cost of installing a system would force him out of the lodging business. The owners detailed the number of fire safety features in the two establishments. Town meeting supported their objections to the article.

A number of typographical errors were enumerated by Town Counsel Richard Henderson as he presented the town bylaws for town meeting approval. He explained there were no substantive changes made to the bylaws. The procedure, Henderson said, is to simply vote in the bylaws that exist. In previous years, there has been some confusion about what articles approved by town meeting actually received approval from the state attorney general as required by law.

Highland Avenue resident Emmet Holt suggested the article be considered at Tuesday night's session to include language requiring the attendance of the town accountant at every advisory committee meeting. Town meeting approved the suggestion to reconsider the article.

Women's Center services

The South Shore Women's Center is a non-profit, abuse prevention agency, located in Plymouth, which provides services to victims of domestic violence in a 10-town area.

Another vote needed

As of Tuesday night, it appeared the town was looking at a budget deficit of $632,800.

As the advisory committee chairman explained, that will mean an extra $1.14 on the tax rate for next year.

But before we start moaning about the added cost of living in Cohasset, there's one more important step. The override.

That's a crucial step to remember. We can vote for all the new equipment and costly expenditures we want. But without that override approval we will have nothing - in fact, less than nothing.

It is vital that everyone who saw the urgency in voting to approve expenditures that added to the budget budget, cast a ballot at the special election later this month and approve an override.

Without that Proposition 2 1/2 override, we will be back to square one. We have a budget that is now about $632,800 in the hole, thanks to an operating budget deficit and some additional appropriations endorsed by town meeting.

But voters must also agree to override if that deficit is to be erased. That is an imperative step. It would be hypocritical, nevermind disastrous, not to vote for an override when you previously voted to add to the town's deficit spending.

The secret ballot election will take place by the end of April. The general override will include all items to be raised by taxation. A simple majority of voters is needed to approve the override proposal.

The construction of a transfer station at the landfill will require a debt exclusion override for $550,000. That will require a majority vote by voters at the special election. But unlike the general override, it will not affect the tax base and once the debt is retired, the expenditure will not affect the tax rate.

We hope everyone understands the seriousness and importance of voting in the special election. If the override is not approved, it will mean either another special election or huge cuts into town services and departments. There truly is no choice.

Don't be confused with the special election the end of April and the annual local election Saturday, April 9. It is certainly just as important to cast a ballot for our local elected officials, as it is to decide an override.

There are a few contests in this year's election, including a race for sewer commission, health board, planning board and the library trustees. The candidates have offered their time to serve this community. The least we can do in return is to vote.

Don't forget to cast your ballot in Saturday's election

Teens invited to April 10 festivities

By Sheila Casey
Mariner correspondent

Teenagers are invited to the up coming festivities sponsored by the Townwide Youth Ministry Task Force. The event will take place on the Town Common, April 10 from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m.

The event will include a make-your-own sundae bar, music, volleyball, frisbee and other non competitive sports. There will also be a discussion of what Cohasset teenagers feel their needs are regarding youth-oriented programs in town.

The Townwide Youth Ministry Task Force is an association of churches which include the Second Congregational Church, St. Stevens, St. Anthony's, the First Parish Unitarian, and the Vendanta Center. Their goal is to establish a teen program for the town of Cohasset that teenagers really desire.

In order to accomplish this, Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, said "We must have input from the kids. We all know that adult run programs laid on the kids don't usually work, so we are seeking feed back from the teenagers, we are hoping for an open discussion of what they see their needs to be."

Rev. Ritts explained although each church has its own youth program, they thought that by banding together and forming a townwide youth organization, more could be accomplished.

"More spirit can be generated in a large group," he pointed out. "And we are considering the possibility of hiring a youth activity director for the town."

There is concern about a lack of activities for teenagers in Cohasset. Rev. Ritts made the connection between this and the problem of teenage drinking which plagues many communities.

"They either have too much time on their hands to just hang around, or they are over schedulized. So if mom isn't driving them all over they don't know how to entertain themselves. It is the goal of the Task Force to help the youth of the town build their own self esteem and respect for others," he continued. "We are hoping to accomplish that through our programs. They need strong self esteem to say no to drugs and drinking, they need to know that God loves us all, and that all our lives are valuable," he noted.

Rev. Ritts said his own family has been involved in a program which brings teenage groups to Appalachia to repair and build homes for the poor. There is a similar program in Maine, he added, and this summer members of the Congregational Church Youth Group will participate in the program.

"There is no financial reward for these kids," he continued. "But what they do gain is much more rewarding. These people are poor, but they are not angry or resentful about it.

"They are not envious of the kids with the $50 name brand sneakers, because they don't need them, they would rather go bare foot. The material things are not important to them, but there is a strong family closeness, and a great love for God's Country, as they call it." I think it is a very good things for kids who are raised in an affluent society to be exposed to this way of life, to get to know the people and their culture," Rev. Ritts added.

The Task Force would like to expand similar programs that the teenagers themselves would introduce. All of the town's teenage population, regardless of religious preference are urged to attend. All input is welcome.

In case of rain, the festivities will be held in Bates Hall of the Second Congregational Church, which is next to town hall.

Young artists exhibit at art center

Young artists from the Rockland School System will exhibit their work in a special exhibit in the South Shore Art Center's Dillon Members' Gallery during the month of April.

Each year, the Center at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, invites the school children from a South Shore community to participate in an exhibit in one of the Center's galleries. This gives the students in grades kindergarten through twelve an opportunity to exhibit the work they have created during the year.

This year's young artist exhibit will open with a reception Sunday, April 10 from 4 to 6 p.m. and the exhibit will continue through April 23. The Center opens its gallery as an opportunity to encourage and support the arts education in the schools.

Parents and friends are invited to come to the Center for the young artist exhibit. Viewing hours are Monday through Friday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Programs of the Center are supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency, and the young artist programs are funded in part by the Joseph Drown Foundation. For further information on the exhibit or other programs at the South Shore Art Center, call 383-9548.

Nationally known artist to show works

The large-scale colorful abstract canvases of nationally recognized artist Linda Dumont will hang in the South Shore Art Center's Bancroft Invitational Gallery during the month of April.

Dumont returns to the Center, at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, for a second invitational exhibit within four years. Currently a Texas resident, Dumont returns to the Boston area for her first major exhibit since leaving the area in 1984.

A formal reception for Dumont will be held at the Center Sunday, April 10 from 4 to 6 p.m. The exhibit runs through April 23 and is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

END OF BALLOT

The polls open Saturday, April 9 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Town Hall

The facts about a Proposition 2½ override

These facts were provided by the advisory committee.

WHAT IS PROPOSITION 2½? This is the popular name for the legislation (Chapter 580 of the Acts of 1980) which imposes four limits, beginning in fiscal 1982, upon the tax levies of cities and towns. The law permits these limits to be exceeded by an "override" vote on a secret ballot question in an election (not by town meetings). One limit is that property taxes cannot be increased, at town meeting, more than 2½% above the previous year's taxes. Another limit is that property taxes may not exceed 2½% of the full and fair value of the property.

WHAT IS AN OVERRIDE? The laws designed to restrain increased spending, not to prevent it. Spending in excess of the limits must be recommended by the Board of Selectmen, and must be approved by majority vote on a ballot question. The law provides for six kinds of override. The most common are: to exceed the limit on the tax levy (majority vote); to exclude debt from the limit (majority vote); and to exclude capital outlay expenditures from the limit (requires majority vote on a ballot).

Between 1982 and 1986, 68% of towns passed at least one override or exclusion. Votes to exclude debt or capital expenditures succeed about 75% of the time. Votes to override the levy limit fail about 60% of the time.

WHAT IF TOWN MEETING APPROVES A BUDGET AND THE OVERRIDE FAILS ON THE BALLOT? Town officials would have to decide either to cut services and call another town meeting to approve a reduced budget, or to call another ballot and again urge the voters to approve an override. Since the next fiscal year begins July 1, 1988, a final resolution of the town's choice must be achieved by town meetings or special ballots before June 30.

HOW DO OUR TAXES COMPARE WITH OTHER MASSACHUSETTS TOWNS? Statewide, the amount raised in property tax in 1987 was $1,313 per capita, on property valued at $40,807 per capita (3.2%). In Cohasset, the tax was $1,625 per capita on property valued at $76,839 per capita (2.1%). (Data from the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation.)

Small towns have higher costs per capita. However, Cohasset real estate is currently assessed at about 60% of full and fair market value.

WHAT IS THE TAX SITUATION FOR THE STATE AS A WHOLE? In fiscal 1987, property taxes in Massachusetts were 3.5% of personal income, compared with the national average of 3.3%. In 1978, property taxes statewide were 62% of municipal revenue. In 1987, property taxes were 46% of revenue. Local aid grew from 17% in 1978 to 31% of municipal revenue in 1987. State and local per capita expenditures in Massachusetts in fiscal 1984 were $2,233. The U.S. average of state and local expenditures was $2,131.

Advisory committee report to town meeting

The major task of the Advisory Committee is to recommend a town operating budget that serves the needs of Cohasset while still maintaining fiscal restraint. While our Committee feels it has achieved both those goals, the budget being presented for fiscal 1989 is not within the limits of Proposition 2½ and will require a favorable override ballot in order to be funded.

The budget for fiscal 1989 of $10,438,683.75 (net of the self-supporting Water Department) includes an increase of $793,449.03 or 8% over the current year.

Our budget review process was through and detailed. The budget we recommend does not enlarge or improve town services in any way. It merely maintains the current level of service in the face of escalating fixed costs, contractual obligations and insurance premiums. Insurance costs alone will increase $228,000. The school budget increased 6.9% with most of the additional going to cover a pending teacher contract.

Reduction of the operating budget to a level fundable within the limits of Proposition 2½ would result in significant reduction in town services.

Voters must keep in mind that approval of Article 4 at Town Meeting is not sufficient in itself to fund the budget. The town must have a secret ballot on the question in order to authorize an override. Please remember that the override is an integral part of the original Proposition 2½ legislation, devised in order to keep control of a town's financial decision-making in the hands of the people. It is not an attempt to get around the law. It is inevitable that in a society where costs are rising at a rate of 5 or 6% a year at least, a limit of only 2½% plus new growth in increased taxes will eventually create a situation such as Cohasset faces today.

The other money articles in this warrant, not including those likely to be funded from borrowing or Water Department revenues, total about $368,000, all of which would have to be funded through an increase in the override.

Respectfully submitted,
Jane O. Goedecke, Chair
Arne K. Gjesteby, Vice-Chair
Martin G. Corry, Jr.

selectmen to petition the state building commission to approve a change in the local building codes which would include the requirement.

Both selectmen and the advisory committee did not support the article, saying it should be up to the discretion of the individual homeowner.

Beechwood Street resident Wayne Sawchuk said after reviewing the sprinkler system manual, it was evident that lengthy upkeep of the system is necessary, and there is a clear danger that the system could accidentally leak.

Despite the chief's persistance that their information was inaccurate, voters soundly defeated the proposal this year.

The fire chief did not fare well with town meeting regarding the refurbishing of an aearial truck for $26,500.

Once again, selectmen and the advisory committee did not support the article, despite the reduction of his original $40,000 estimate. The ten year-old 100-foot aerial truck is showing signs of stress, the chief stated, noting that if the truck is not repaired within two years, the town will have to replace it. At today's price, that would cost the town $250,000, he said. Selectmen suggested he come back with the request to refurbish the truck at next year's town meeting.

purchase of a leachate control system at the landfill for $68,290, it will inflate that deficit to $706,000. That will mean a 7.8 percent increase in the tax rate, or $14.00 per $1,000 valuation.

Other articles, if approved, will further inflate that deficit. Only those appropriations to be raised by taxation will have an immediate effect on next year's budget.

There are at least two items awaiting a possible debt exclusion override. The May 2 special town meeting will include an override request for the design and construction of the Ward Plan sewer service project. The annual town meeting will be asked to finance $600,000 for a transfer station at the landfill. A debt exclusion override will require a majority vote in a special election. Unlike the general override, however, the debt exclusion override will not affect the tax base after the 1989 fiscal year.

An override, Goedecke stated, "is not a sign of failure. It is an integral part of the legislation to keep spending in control of the people. Many towns in Massachusetts are facing the same problem. Salary increases are higher than 2 1/2 percent. Overall budget hikes are between five and eight percent. It was inevitable Cohasset would reach this point. The question was when would we arrive."

Noting that Cohasset officials predicted this budget deficit only a few weeks before town meeting, Goedecke admitted, "this is the worst possible way to handle (an override). But I want you to know we would still be in this boat, but maybe we would have had a paddle."

She predicted that town meeting voters will be pondering Prop. 2 1/2 overrides in the future.

Several times during the course of the long debate, the 1989 budget was referred to as a "maintenance budget." That is, the approved $11 million (of which $7.1 million will be raised through taxation) contains no new personnel or additional services to the town. The eight percent increase is caused by higher salaries , equipment purchases and cost-of-living increases.

Robert Sturdy of Jerusalem Road labeled the town pernurious, and said the school system is not able to deal with the requirements of its students within its current budget.

He chastized the town for "almost ignoring' its municipal buildings, saying the school department "is one of the largest consumers of roof patch in eastern Massachusetts."

If this town was actually assessed for the full limit under Proposition 2 1/2, the tax rate would be about $25 per $1,000, he calculated. "I offer to buy any house in this town right now for its assessed valuation," which Sturdy noted is well below market value.

"We are really at one-quarter of Proposition 2 1/2. It's a dream to think you can raise taxes by 2 1/2 percent when increases in salaries are between five and eight percent each year. How would you like no plowing of your streets? Too few on the fire department, or no police force? The quality of this town affects your real estate. Let us accept the responsibility and not deteriorate the quality of town in the future," he said. His statements were met with loud applause.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew explained in detail the reasons why Cohasset is facing a general override of Proposition 2 1/2. "The bubble finally broke," he stated, adding that decreased state aid, no federal aid, less local revenue and fixed municipal costs such as $65,105 in insurance and $43,408 in pensions have resulted in the deficit budget picture.

"The town needs revenue, we need to control these fixed costs and our tax base needs to grow. A state aid increase does not look good," he said, explaining that the money is now given back to individual citizens via tax returns. "The day we have dreaded has come. And the future outlook is not good unless there is legislative relief."

Emmet Holt, a member of the advisory committee from 1968 to 1975, recalled the town accountant was a regular attendee at every advisory committee meeting during that time. Regular financial updates and reports were submitted by the accountant to the committee.

"Somewhere the financial reporting of this town was de-railed," he stated, noting that since that time, persons employed as town accountant have never regularly attended advisory committee meetings.

He said rather than "crippling education in Cohasset, we have no choice but to override. But it is distasteful to be shotgunned into this situation."

Both Andrew and Goedecke were unaware of the town accountant's past practice of attending committee meetings. They agreed it should be reinstituted.

Another former advisory committee member,

Vacation art classes

School children looking for a creative outlet during the April vacation are invited to participate in the South Shore Art Center's informal Vacation Drop-In classes.

Daily drop-in centers during April 18-22 will be held in Cohasset at the Center, 119 Ripley Road; in Hull, at the Life Saving Museum; and in Scituate, at the Trinitarian Church. Young artists can work on painting, drawing and collage activities from 10:30 a.m. to noon and no pre-enrollment is necessary; just drop in and have fun with creativity. The Center's young artists staff will be available to work with students, ages six to twelve.

The Vacation Drop-In centers are funded by the Joseph Drown Foundation and by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council (pending approval) as administered by the arts councils of Cohasset, Hull and Scituate. The drop-in program has proven a valuable benefit by introducing young children to art activities in an informal setting. The participants have an opportunity to experiment with their creativity.

All supplies are included in the $3 per day workshop fee. For further information please call the South Shore Arts Center, 383-9548.

Workshop for women

A workshop, "Women At Midlife: A Kaleidoscope of New Directions," will be held Monday, April 11 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church. It is open to all South Shore women.

The image of the kaleidoscope is an appropriate one for the workshop geared for women at midlife who may feel confused about their changing roles as they move beyond the child-rearing stage of their lives.

The workshop involves written exercises with short presentations and group discussions, all designed to enable women to examine their lives and make decisions about the future. The written exercises will help individuals to focus on themselves and learn where they are now and what their options may be.

The topics will include issues facing women at midlife (empty nest syndrome, caring for aging parents, sexuality, the aging process, career moves and changes), women's developmental stages, the search for identity, philosophical and spiritual needs and the challenges and opportunities in planning for the future.

Three clinical social workers will lead the program.

They are: Amy Arman Cohen, a graduate of Simmons College School of Social Work, who works with women dealing with midlife issues and with couples who have marital problems. Ellen Gillis, a graduate of Boston University School of School Work, who specializes in counseling for depression, anxiety, separation, loss and grief. Pam Marino, a graduate of Boston College School of Social Work and Andover Newton Theological Seminary, who is on the faculty of several colleges working with continuing education programs.

The workshop is sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset.

Reservations are on a first come-first serve basis and may be made by sending a check for $10 to the Social Service League, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, 02025. Coffee and dessert will be served. Participants may bring their own sandwich. Additional information may be obtained by calling 383-0771.

Candidates compete in local election . . .

McCann, Sigrid Carey and Katherine Sturtevant.

Recreation commissioner Richard Barrow is running for re-election, and James Sheerin is the only candidate for a three-year term on the board of water commissioners. Michael Patrolia is the sole candidate for a three-year seat on the board of assessors.

Candidates for contested offices

Katherine Sturtevant of 40 Ripley Road is conducting her first campaign for public office. Having worked in a medical library and bookstore, Sturtevant feels she is qualified for the position of trustee of the Paul Pratt Library.

"I have a lot of free time now, and I'm interested in the doing something for my community," she stated. Sturtevant said the Pratt library is "superb" and said she is interested in maintaining that level of service.

"I'm imprssed with the people who work there, and the people who use the library. I want to continue that," she said, adding that her experience in the book business will be an asset to the library.

Elizabeth Eaton of 30 Beach St. has been a library trustee for the past 15 years. A former substitute teacher, Eaton believes her work as a trustee is in "recompense for what the library has done for me."

Agnes McCann of 104 Doane St. is an attorney along with her husband, Robert Skorupa. She has been a trustee since 1984, and is a graduate of Suffolk Law School.

"I think the library is terrific. I love being part of the people who are associated with it," she explained. "the town is justifably proud of its library, and it would be nice to keep it that way."

McCann keeps abreast of investments for the library, and is anxious to see completion of the library's computerization project. "Looking ahead, we have to keep on top of building maintenance," she added.

Sigrid Carey of 8 James Lane is the fourth candidate for the library board of trustees. Chairman of the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council, Carey is also librarian of the South shore Spinner's Guild.

She sees no problems with the operation of the town's library, but Carey feels this is an opportunity to serve her community.

Michael Sullivan is a candidate for a three-year seat on the health board. This is the first attempt at public office for the Fairoaks Lane resident.

Sullivan, who owns and manages a professional search company, was formerly in management positions with Fidelity Investment and Prime Computers.

Originally involved with the health board while investigating odor problems from a nearby commercial development, Sullivan has also been active in monitoring the Cohasset Heights Ltd. issue.

"When Dr. (John) Burns decided not to run, I thought maybe an engineer would decide to run for the office. When no one did, I decided I could bring a business perspective to the board. I can offer the town my

The beginning of a family-owned tradition

By George Franklin
Special to the Mariner

During the early 1900's in the area of Nantasket and Hull, a fellow by the name of Charles Fleck was earning a living with a horse and wagon moving personal belongings and household goods from the boats that docked at Nantasket Beach.

The boats were delivering summer vacationers to this area and they needed to have their goods delivered to the summer cottages.

Charlie Fleck was doing pretty well for himself when he heard that a regular household moving firm (Daley and Wanzer) was up for sale. Charlie was a good businessman and grabbed at the opportunity to buy this established business.

Charlie Fleck made a success of this moving business. As a matter of fact I remember my mother telling me that our family moved to Hull around 1916 and my father was employed by Charlie Fleck. This was before I was born.

The motor truck arrived on the scene and Charlie Fleck was able to go to the city and pick up furniture lots to be transported to this area for the summer vacationers.

Charlie and his brother Jake kept things moving. His son Herbert came along and joined the business and, when Charlie died in 1929 Herbie continued. In turn, Herb Fleck had a son Herbert Jr. Since Herb Fleck Sr. has retired for about the sixth time, Herbert Jr. is now the operating manager of Daley and Wanzer.

This family business has consistently grown and prospered. The entire Fleck family has been involved with the exception of one daughter, Paula. She preferred another way of life. Susan Fleck runs the office and her mother, Antoinette acted as bookkeeper. Antoinette has recently passed away. Herb Jr.'s two sons and his daughter and granddaughter are all involved as well as other members of this fine family.

Today, the company is still located at the original spot in Hull. They have thirty trucks and a permanent crew of twenty men plus additional help during the busy periods.

In the accompanying photos, you will see a 1928 Mack moving truck. This is a four-cylinder truck that has been fully restored to it's original condition. This truck has been used on regular moving jobs, has a top speed of about thirty five miles per hour. They also send this machine out on exhibition to various affairs around New England.

Another thing that makes Daley & Wanzer unique is the fact that the Flecks rarely get rid of an old truck. They have their own shop and mechanics and, as a truck shows wear, they will rebuild the vehicle while keeping the same chassis.

The storage warehouse and office building was originally a garage. The clearance on the doors was for the old fashioned low vehicles and, as the trucks were built higher this meant that the doors were too low to accommodate the new, higher vehicles.

Herb Fleck solved this problem by calling in a contractor who raised the roof of the building. As the business grew it was discovered that the original building was too small to handle the amount of storage that was coming in. Herb called the contractor back and had him expand the building. Soon, Herb found that he needed still more room. Since there was no more ground space to be used Herb struck on the idea of putting a second story on the original building. This was done and an elevator was installed.

The Flecks were next bothered by the prospect of handling and rehandling furniture that was to be stored. The usual procedure would be to load the furniture on a truck then unload and pack it away in the warehouse. This meant extra labor plus the increased possibility of damage. Herb solved this problem by purchasing fiberglass containers from an overseas shipping company.

He modified these containers and added doors and tie off hooks so the container could be secured to a truck chassis with no danger of falling. An empty container is sent to your home, the furniture is loaded and sealed for protection against the weather. When the truck returns to the warehouse the container is simply taken off the chassis by fork lift and the container is placed in the warehouse to be stored until delivery. There is a saving of time and labor in this method, as well as protection to the shipped goods.

Piano moving seems to be a lost art today. Not so with Daley and Wanzer. These people are piano moving experts. They do the moving the old fashioned way, where every means is used to protect the piano. Most pianos, when they are stored in a warehouse, are just put in a room. The grand pianos have to be disassembled and set on their sides. This means that the legs, lyre, topboards and bench are all loose and can be lost or damaged easily.

The Flecks came up with the idea of making platform dollies with six six-inch caster on each dolly. They spread a cushioned paper on each dolly and load the grand piano on with all the parts tied in to the piano. This saves rehandling and any danger of loss or damage to the piano parts.

What the mind can conceive, man can achieve. This is an old saying and this Fleck family has proven this adage to be true. These people are truly innovative.

As regards the storage of grand pianos Herbie Fleck has built the piano dollies to accommodate baby grands, parlor grands and the nine-foot concert grands. This is using good old Yankee ingenuity.

Should you be considering a move anywhere in the Continental United States Daley and Wanzer are the moving people for you. They have the certification to travel in the forty eight states.

knowledge of business, in addition to my interest in several health-related issues," he stated.

Sullivan cited the protection of the town's water supply and the continued efforts to maintain the town's landfill as two important issues facing the board. Recycling and solid waste disposal are also crucial issues facing the future of the town and the health board.

"Repairs to residents' septic systems are also a vital issue to consider," he stated, "because we are dealing with repairs that may cost people $10,000 to $15,000. I'm committed to seeking less costly solutions."

Hugh Morgan of 24 Bow Street could not be contacted.

Raimund G. Vanderweil of 500 Jerusalem Road, is running for re-election to the sewer commission. A registered professional engineer, he is owner of a Boston-based engineering firm.

As a proponent of the Ward sewer plan, Vanderweil said he is committed to the continued optimization of Cohasset's treatment plant with state requirements. He is also involved in the continued effort to implement a cost effective approach to sewering based on the extension of central sewering to the Veterans and Hillside areas and other locations in the Ward Plan, and on-site corrections for the remaining parts of town.

His opponent in the race for a three-year term on the commission is Lot W. Bates of 56 Red Gate Lane. A 1963 graduate of Cohasset High School and a lifelong resident of Cohasset, Bates is a self-employed building contractor.

Bates said he is running for office, "because I don't like the way the sewer commission is dragging its feet and not doing anything about the town's problems. Septic systems in this town are not working. The Hillside and veterans' area is a disgrace."

Bates added, "I want to see that the town gets proper sewering, not a band-aid solution to major problems. We need a treatment plant that will handle three-quarter of a million gallons, not 300,000."

The candidate said he would prefer "to buy a house rather than rent. In other words, this hook-up with Hull is not the right way to go. We'll have no representation and no say in what happens to the sewers or the cost."

Regarding the operation of the Cohasset treatment plant, Bates said the current commission had offers from two companies to supervise the facility. "If they put the contract out to bid it would have been cheaper. But they wouldn't even look at the second offer," he charged. "That's not the way to run our plant."

Puppet show April 8

A pre-school puppet show will be given by Pat Boylan at the Cohasset Community Center Friday, April 8 at 10:30 a.m.

The show will be "The Tortoise and the Hare." Admission is $2 per person payable at the door. Anyone is welcome.

Illusion tricks

Cohasset Junior High students will learn some of the tricks of the trade in creating the illusion of combat for stage and screen through a program presented by the PSO Monday, April 11 at 8:30 a.m.

Six members of the Cumberland Company for the Performing Arts from Cumberland, R.I., will perform on the school stage as part of the PSO's cultural-enrichment program. The actors incorporate cleverly planned choreography while staging various fight sequences for the plays of William Shakespeare and other famed dramatists.

The audience sees many of the secrets of swordplay and slight-of-hand used in producing the special effects required in live theatrical performances.

The program was arranged by Regina Schultz and Pat Baird, PSO representatives for the Cohasset Junior High School. It is funded jointly by the PSO and an application to the Arts Lottery.

Dinosaur Adventure

The children in Mrs. Moody's Kinderdarten continue to receive rave reviews for their creative writing. Here is a sampling of their work.

DINOSAUR MEETS A FRIEND

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As she passed by a tall building she saw a secret path. She stops and looks down the path. Then she hops excitedly down the path. As she hopped down the path she heard a noise behind her. Quickly she hid behind a large bush to wait and see who was behind her on the path. It was her friend! As her friend came by the bush, dinosaur jumped out and said, "Hi!" The friends were afraid for a minute. The two friends finished walking the path together. They both went to dinosaur's house to play for the rest of the day.

DINOSAUR FINDS GOLD

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He quickly hopped down the path until he found a tunnel. He walked into the tunnel. At the end of the tunnel was a treasure box. When he opened the box he found much gold. He took home all the gold. With the gold he bought a limousine. He and his family drove to a rich house where they could keep the gold and live happily ever after.

DINOSAUR IN THE FOREST

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He slowly walks down the path carefully looking around. He walked for a long time looking for the end of the trail. As he walked through the creepy woods he became afraid. He did not like the sound. He walks on hoping to find the end of the trail. In the distance he sees sunlight. He quickly walks to it. Finally he reaches the end of the secret path. He is very happy.

THE DINOSAUR AND THE GOLD

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As she passed by a tall building she saw a secret path. She walks slowly down the path. While walking she sees a big, beautiful box full of gold! The dinosaur opens the box and takes home all the gold and the box. She needed the box to carry the gold in. Her family tells her how surprised they are to see her with all the gold. The box of gold is so special she decides to keep it for a decoration. She kept it forever in her bedroom.

Saturday voters approve $515,000 deficit

Tom Burke, suggested the elimination of the excess liability insurance coverage along with the town's contribution toward a special pension fund. Goedecke explained that $50,000 allotted for the special pension had already been taken out of the budget.

She also explained the excess liability insurance is needed in case of a disaster such as a school bus accident or the town hall roof falling in and injuring numerous people. The insurance will cover the town for up to $5 million.

Galt Grant, a member of the insurance advisory committee noted, "that for an $11 million business, it does not seem right for the town to be covered by a $1 million insurance policy."

The school committee looked at methods to further cut the 6.9 percent increase in the school budget, according to school committee chairman Joseph Nedrow. Consolidation of buildings, increased class size, curtailment of extracurricular activities, were all studied and rejected.

Roy Fitzsimmons of Doane Street suggested that school administrators look at the reality of a declining enrollment, and consolidate schools. The minimum manning clause in the firefighters' contract should also be removed to cut down on overtime expenditures, he stated.

That argument was refuted by Linda Henderson of Jerusalem Road who said cutting out the Osgood School would result in 28 to 30 students per class and the sixth grade at the high school.

The vote to approve article four containing the town's operating budget was approved by a voice vote.

Additional warrant articles

In other business Saturday, voters defeated an amendment offered by selectmen to increase salaries of non union town employees by five percent. Article five called for a three percent hike which was calculated as part of the previously-approved operating budget.

But Selectman Rocco Laugelle told voters the rate of living in Cohasset has risen more than three percent, and their salaries should reflect that. Charles Douglas of the personnel committee said after studying many Boston area communities, the three percent raise for clerical employees is considered standard. Step raises based on job performance merit, will be added to that increase, he noted.

The amendment to article five was defeated by only five votes following a hand count. The original article for the three percent raise was adopted.

Later in the meeting, town moderator William Weeks was asked to reconsider the article at Monday night's session.

A four percent room occupancy tax was approved by voters, despite a plea by two local inn managers to defeat the proposal.

Daniel Leahy, general manager of Kimball's By The Sea, urged voters to reject the tax which could bring as little as $16,000 or as much as $40,000 into the town each year.

The added four percent, he told voters, would mean the difference between his motel winning a large contract for business clientele, or losing it.

But advisory committee chairman Goedecke noted the tax could appear on an individual's bill as a separate charge, and will not necessarily mean higher room rates. Executive Secretary Andrew explained that without the tax, that revenue will not be coming back from the state to the town.

In his argument against the tax, Leahy said only about 30 percent of the 250 Massachusetts towns with lodging homes have adopted the tax program. The legislation, he said, was initiated a few years ago to garner additional revenue for Boston from its numerous hotels. "No town loses a penny if you do not pass this," a state Department of Revenue official informed Leahy. Selectman Cliff Mitman said a Department of Revenue memo stated the town will receive less state aid if the tax is not adopted.

"But the local hotel will lose substantial business, so it will lose income," he said, noting that the motel pays $35,000 in property taxes and purchases 12 licenses from the town for a total of $200,000 each year.

Fran Coffey, co-owner of the Red Lion Inn noted that his establishment primarily accomodates residents and families of residents. "This tax will be coming out of their pockets," he stated.

By a voice vote, and again by a hand count, the proposal to tax the motels four percent was adopted.

Youth soccer starts season

Three of Cohasset youth soccer's teams scored victories in the opening weekend's matches in the Coastal Soccer League.

A fourth team--Boys under10-2—registered a surprising 1-1 tie against Kingston.

The weekend's most impressive victory came from the Girls Under 10-1 team, coached by Sandy Theriault. Theriault's squad whipped Scituate 5-1, as Tammy Maitland scored two goals, and teammates Megan Fahey, Danielle Nohe and Alison Ritts registered one apiece.

The second girls' Under 10 team, coached by Kevin O'Donnell, also won, edging Pembroke on a goal by Catie Campbell.

"We're really excited about the under 10 girls," said league coordinator Larry Shultz. "We've never fielded two teams in this age group, and to have them both win their first games. . .well, isn't that outstanding."

Scoring a victory for the boys was coach Steve Endris' Under 12-1 team, which upset defending league champion Halifax 1-0 on a goal by striker Eric Henry with two minutes left in the game.

Playing well, but not as fortunate, were the other Cohasset squads. In their 1-1 tie with Carver, boys Under 10-2 used a goal by Ryan Staszko and stellar second half goaltending by Roderick Martin to make acting coach Roy Davis' debut a pleasant one.

Losing a 1-0 tight game to Marshfield, the girls Under 14-1 couldn't get on the scoreboard, but had excellent play from Heidi Lincoln. The same was true for the girls Under 14-2 team, losing to their Marshfield counterparts 2-0, despite great efforts from forward Tara Gallagher and sweeper Colleen Fitzsimmons.

The two girls Under 12 teams had rockier outings. The first team dropped a 3-0 contest to a strong Plymouth squad, while the second team also faced powerhouse Plymouth, losing 7-0.

The two boys' Under 14 squads lost their openers to Marshfield as well. The number one team, led by Danny Baird, Brooks Doten and Eric Drysdale at midfield, were shut out 3-0. And the number two squad lost 6-0.

The boys Under 12-2 team, scheduled to face Hanover, had their game postponed until this Sunday when the Hanover coach announced he was unprepared to field a team. The rest of the Cohasset teams begin play this weekend in the league's first full slate of games. The Cohasset teams at home on April 9 and 10 are:

Saturday at Milliken: Girls Under 10-2 vs. Plymouth, 9 a.m.; Girls Under 12-2 vs. Scituate, 10:15 a.m.; Girls Under 14-1 vs. Plymouth, 11:30 a.m.; Boys Under 12-1 vs. Kingston, 1 p.m.; Boys Under 12-2 vs. Kingston, 2:15 p.m.; and Boys Under 14-1 vs. Norwell, 3:30 p.m.

Sunday at Milliken: Girls Under 16 vs. Plymouth, 1 p.m.; Boys Under 16 vs. Duxbury, 2:30 p.m.

Recreation dept. soccer camp registration

The North American Soccer Camps, Inc. will conduct a half-day, week-long soccer clinic beginning Monday, August 22 through Saturday, August 29, at the Deer Hill Field.

The Cohasset recreation program will be from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.. Monday through Friday. The Saturday time will be announced during the week.

The cost for camp is $80 for the first child in the family; $75 for the second, and $70 for the third or more in each family. Each participant is also provided a camp T-shirt and soccer ball. Parents coaching clinics will be held two evenings during the week and exact days and times will be announced.

North American Soccer Camp's instructors are brought to this country from Great Britain to conduct youth soccer programs throughout the United States during the summer months. They offer quality instruction to youth aged 7-18 years of age.

To register for this program, call the Recreation Department office at 838-6791. A $25 deposit will be necessary at the time of registration and the balance will be due by June 1.

Registration is necessary now in order to assign the proper number of coaches for a 1-15 coach/participant ratio. Also, the registration form on the back of this year's N.A.S.C. brochure must be completed in full for each child.

Little league tryouts April 9

Little League tryouts for the major league teams will be held Saturday, April 9, at 9 a.m. at the Little League field. The rain out date is Sunday, April 10 at 1 p.m.

For those who cannot tryout on Saturday an alternate tryout wil be held on Sunday, April 10, at 1 p.m.

All 10, 11 and 12 year-olds must try out if they were not on a major league team last year.

Political placards were the order of the day during Saturday's local election. Victorious sewer commissioner Gary Vanderweil and board of health member Michael Sullivan were in the forefront of the electoral action. (Chris Edwards)

Selectmen set May 14 for override question

Selectmen scheduled May 14 for the special election to override Proposition 2 1/2.

They have not voted to request the override election, as required by law, nor have they decided the ballot format. They will complete that business at their meeting Tuesday, April 19.

This week, selectmen proposed a ballot which would contain several different exclusion items, the general override for the operating budget, and debt exclusion overrides for the transfer station, sewer project, the highway department front end loader and purchase of a school bus.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted, "towns that have listed the items with the override have been more successful. It shows it's the people's choice."

Among the separate items which would require individual exclusion overrides are: $4,800 for the Milliken Field study, $8,800 for the fire department emergency equipment; $15,000 for the five-town ambulance; $50,000 for environmental counsel; $70,000 for revaluation; $18,000 for board of health engineering services; $20,000 for repair of the Osgood School roof; $68,290 for leachate control at the landfill; and $16,000 for a school department truck. The list of capital exclusions total $284,890. The capital exclusions will not affect the town's tax base and will only affect the tax rate for one year, selectmen explained.

The $515,911 operating budget deficit will be a general override question on the ballot. That amount will affect the town's tax base.

The remaining debt exclusion override items will affect the tax rate for the term of the borrowing, but will not affect the base.

According to selectmen, there could be as many as 17 items on the May 14 ballot.

Selectmen decided to wait until Tuesday, April 19 when all members are present to discuss the articles proposed for the ballot.

In other business this week, selectmen were informed that two gasoline tanks at the high school failed leakage tests. Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said the fittings on the two underground tanks will be further tested to locate the leak and possible soil contamination.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said Fire Chief Daniel Brock will keep a close watch on the proceedings which are regulated by the state Department of Environmental Quality Enginerring (DEQE).

Gloomy forecast for schools if override fails

By Bill Bowers
Mariner staff

The quality of public-school education in Cohasset will be seriously compromised if the proposed Prop. 2 1/2 override is not approved at the upcoming annual town meeting, the school committee learned Monday.

Superintendent Stephen Hart told the committee that failure to override would force him to cut about $440,000 from the fiscal '89 school budget of $5.1 million.

"There will be a serious deterioration in our educational program," he said.

Roughly 80 percent of the school budget goes to pay salaries and related personnel costs, Hart explained. He said the remaining 20 percent consists largely of fixed costs for items like supplies, heating and building maintenance, which cannot be eliminated.

"The cuts would be mostly in the area of personnel," Hart said.

In response to a question from committee member Nancy Sandell, Hart said about 22 school department employees would have to be cut from the payroll. Fourteen of these would likely be teachers, he added.

Such a drastic elimination of teaching staff would mean greatly increased class sizes at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools, with more than 30 pupils per class. Not only would children receive less individual attention, but the strain on teachers would also increase. Larger classes would have a particularly harmful effect on the less able students who generally require more attention from teachers, Hart pointed out.

Failure to approve the override might also necessitate the imposition of user fees on parents whose children are involved in sports or other extra-curricular activities. Hart told the committee he could not yet estimate the amount of such fees.

"I really don't support user fees. It flies in the face of the concept of public education," commented school committee member Christopher Ford.

Thus far, the reading program which began in Sept. 1987 has been a resounding success, according to Jr./Sr. High School English dept. chairman William Kite.

Kite told the school committee that students at the Jr./Sr. high school have read over 1100 books for enjoyment since the program began.

"It's been very successful," Kite said. "If the number of overdue library books is any indication, they are reading a lot.

The new reading program is one of many items that may have to be cut back if the Prop. 2 1/2 override is not approved at the annual town meeting scheduled for May 2.

No surprises in local election

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

By this time, many new board members have already participated in their first meetings as the April 9 election produced a few new faces, but no surprising results.

There were no upsets in this year's annual election, as incumbents returned with overwhelming victories.

Town Clerk Frances Marks announced the results by 7:15 that evening, just about an hour after polls closed for the day. The number of incomplete write-in ballots particularly in the uncontested selectman's race, could not be deciphered by the electronic voting machines and accounted for the brief delay in the tally.

As predicted, only a third of the registered voters cast ballots in the municipal election. According to the town clerk, 31.62 percent of eligible Cohasset voters, or 1,449 residents participated in the election.

In perhaps the most vigorously-contested race, incumbent sewer commissioner R. Gary Vanderweil beat out challenger Lot Bates for another three-year term. Vanderweil gathered 61 percent of the total vote, compared to 38 percent for Bates. This was Bates' second attempt for a seat on the sewer commission.

Vanderweil said his main goal during his second term will be "securing a good future for Cohasset sewerage by combining an expanded central sewer district with on-site corrections in the less densely populated parts of town. I will work as hard as I can to achieve that, especially

Hull pipeline is now a possibility

Hull's overwhelming approval of the plan to connect Cohasset into its wastewater treatment plant was greeted with enthusiastic relief by members of the local sewer commission.

Commisioner Ted Guild, who attended Hull's town meeting Monday night, said he was "absolutely delighted" by the reversal of Hull voters. In February, Hull special town meeting rejected the same plan which calls for an intermunicipal sewer pipe from Cohasset into the Hull wastewater treatment plant.

In exchange for the treatment service, Cohasset will pay to upgrade the Hull plant.

But nothing will be finalized until Cohasset voters have their say at the May 2 special town meeting. The sewer commissioners have three articles on that warrant, but they will withdraw one which was to be used as a backup if Hull had rejected the intermunicipal agreement once again.

Article 16 in the special town meeting warrant will implement the intermunicipal agreement between the two towns. This article, which will also be included as a debt exclusion override question at the May 14 special election, will request about $1 million for the conversion of the Cohasset sewer treatment plant, the construction of the pipeline into Hull, and Cohasset's share of the basic costs to implement the plan.

Article 17 will request $1.8 million for construction of phase one and two of the sewer

CHL appeals ruling

The attorney for Cohasset Heights Ltd. has informed special town counsel that a ruling from the appeals court prohibiting general refuse in the commercial landfill has been appealed.

Atty. Anton Moehrke said owners John and Paul Barry will appeal that March 18 decision to the state Supreme Judicial Court. The appeal was filed April 7, and Atty. Moehrke said he does not expect any resolution until sometime next month.

"The supreme court will decided whether to take the appeal or not. If they decide to take it, it will mean a whole new round on this issue," the attorney stated.

The appeals court ruled last month that a zoning board of appeals decision, prohibiting the disposal of household trash, was proper. The ZBA denied the commercial landfill a special permit to accept general and household trash. The landfill owners appealed that decision, saying the ZBA decision did not specifically rule out general refuse, that general refuse is not significantly different from commercial debris, and that previous building inspectors did not enforce the ZBA decision.

While the appeal to the supreme court is on-going, the commercial landfill has not been prohibited from accepting general refuse.

Conservation vacancy

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of James B. Cox from the conservation commission. Anyone interested in serving on the commission should contact the selectmen's office.

Hunter sought

Selectmen are seeking members for the new hunting committee which will investigate whether hunting should be banned in town except for coastal areas. The members of this new committee will include a small game hunter, a duck hunter, an archer and an interested resident. A member of the conservation commission and the police chief will also serve on this committee. Anyone interested in serving on the committee should contact the selectmen's office.

Suggestions to solve algae growth

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen are pondering a suggestion that algae formed along inner Little Harbor be harvested and composted in the town's landfill.

After a nine-month diagnostic study of the algae formation in inner harbor, IEP Inc. consultant David Worden recommended an experimental method of removal. He told selectmen the most efficient and cost-effective method of removing the smelly nuisance would be to harvest it.

Worden suggested that within a month or two, crews should be sent into the inner harbor with redesigned cranberry booms. Using rakes and pitchforks, the crews would retrieve the algae and drain it on shore.

He recommended that somehow, the 40 to 160 cubic yards of material be desalinated before it is deposited into the compost at the town landfill. Cohasset's $2,000 state grant would cover the equipment and personnel costs involved, Worden stated.

But health board members were dubious of this solution, noting that limited capacity in the landfill could not accomodate the amount of algae. Member William Baird explained that 160 cubic yards of material is greater than the entire town produces at the landfill in one week. If this procedure was completed three times a year, which Worden said could occurr, the cost of cover materials and personnel to remove the algae "would be enormous to the town," Baird added.

But Worden replied that this "creative" method was the least expensive of all available options. He also noted that perhaps one harvesting would be sufficient, and perhaps the yield would only total 20 cubic yards of algae.

The town appropriated money for this study by IEP, Inc. as a result of complaints issued by residents surrounding inner Little Harbor. The stench from the decaying algae forced residents to continually complain and request a solution to the increasing problem.

In his presentation to selectmen Monday night, Worden explained there are three available options. A watershed technique would require management of the land surrounding Little Harbor, but it would result in limited effectiveness. He also suggested that the tidal gates at Cat Dam be flushed more frequently with ocean water so the nutrients which the algae feeds upon would be reduced. A more permanent flushing system could be constructed under the Atlantic Avenue causeway into Little Harbor, but that alternative would be expensive, he stated.

Although mechanical harvesting is done in fresh water lakes and ponds, the salt water in Little Harbor requires manual harvesting. The alage, which is plant material similar to grass clippings, could be deposited into a compost heap at the landfill, Worden suggested. But because it is from salt water, it must be washed off before it is composted.

He recommended the alage be harvested before it reaches its growth peak in May. Worden noted that the process may have to be repeated once or twice.

"There is no new technique we have designed to fit the unique situation of inner harbor," Worden said. "Because of its shallow depth, it can't be flushed. This is admittedly experimental, but we have great hopes for it."

It was suggested by health board member Michael Sullivan that the tidal gates be opened more frequently to flush the inner harbor water with ocean water. Worden said that could be accomplished, but it would only be successful in conjunction with the harvesting.

He also noted that, contrary to original belief, there was no problem with raw sewage entering inner harbor. Worden noted that unless the entire surrounding area was sewered, some degree of nitrates from septic systems would reach the water. Perfectly functioning systems leach a certain amount of nitrates as a byproduct, he explained, and the algae feeds upon that nitrate.

Health board member Baird suggested a large diameter pump could be connected from the outer harbor into inner harbor, pouring seawater into the algae-infested area on a continual basis. Worden said he would investigate to see what type of pipe could accomodate this procedure. he also noted that flushing water into inner harbor would not result in flooding onto adjacent properties. "Flushing is one of the more appealing methods, except that is one of the most expensive," he added.

Worden explained that because the harvesting procedure is experimental, it is not known how much algae would remain once it is removed from the water and drained. If the volume is greatly reduced, it may require less than the required six-inches of cover material at the landfill.

He suggested the town try the harvesting for one season, and analyze the results. Health board member Baird said if the amount of algae could be placed into two or three truck loads, he would not object to despositing it in the landfill's compost heap.

Chamber wants $ back; selectmen say wait

Selectmen will seek advice from town counsel regarding a request to return $4,000 donated to the town by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce for the Milliken Field project.

Chamber president Richard Straley said the board of directors voted to request the donation be returned following the defeat of the Milliken Field project at the October special town meeting.

The local Chamber donated the money following a benefit premiere of "The Witches of Eastwick" - a movie filmed primarily in Cohasset two summers ago. The Chamber assisted in the state's efforts to bring the film crews into Cohasset.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt noted there was no precedent for a town returning a gift. "And the project is not dead," he advised Straley, noting that town meeting appropriated $4,800 toward the athletic field engineering study last week. "I don't see why you say that nothing has been done here. That's not the case," Pratt added.

Selectman James Gallagher said he attended the last Milliken Field committee meeting and was "quite impressed." He noted that when he read Straley's correspondence dated April 1 "I thought it was an April Fool's letter. I thought you were kidding. You presented the check to town officials. I think it's kind of embarrassing to get it back - you're not going to get it back from us," Gallagher stated.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew noted the project has not been abandoned, as Straley had stated.

"I consider this kind of Indian-giving," Selectman Rocco Laugelle added. Selectman Laugelle noted that when Straley wrote the letter to selectmen earlier this month, the project had not been revived. "But now the project is not dead, so the question is mute," he stated.

Although Gallagher made a motion not to give the money back, no one supported the proposal. Selectmen decided to check with town counsel regarding the legality of returning the check to the Chamber.

Science center capital campaign

The Board of Trustees of South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell will announce the kick-off of a million dollar capital campaign on May 5.

The campaign will fund a carefully designed addition to the Natural Science Center and strengthen the Trustees, Richard K. McMullan of Norwell, said, "Many program requests were turned down this year because the lack of space. The addition will primarily provide much needed classroom space and exhibition facilities to showcase the Center's extensive collections."

McMullan, architect of the Center's first addition which was completed in 1983, has donated his services for the design of the new addition. The Building Committee has worked with McMullan for more than a year researching and planning the addition to maximize its functionality while minimizing the impact of an addition on the environment and neighboring area.

South Shore Natural Science Center is a non-profit organization offering activities and resources that support the natural and cultural environments of the South Shore. Serving more than 40,000 people last year, the Center has doubled its audience in the past three years, boasting a membership of 1,200 individuals and families, and more than 100 corporate members. From preschoolers to senior citizens, people of all ages enjoy the 64 acres of trails, exhibits, trips, gardens, library and gift shop, and 1,260 education programs annually.

PROGRAMS

The Center's programs focus on three areas:

Environment: With the rapid growth of the South Shore has come the need to preserve space and natural habitats. The Center plays a key role in educating the public about its surrounding natural resources and in maintaining open space properties and living exhibits.

Education: The Center works closely with local teachers to enhance their ability to motivate children to take an interest in the natural sciences. Its programs are crucial to maintaining a quality level of science education in the schools.

Exhibits: The Center's substantial natural science collection is looked to for its unique perspective on the South Shore area. Exhibits supplement the work performed in classrooms and in the field. As such, they are an important focus for natural science study and serve to attract visitors to the Center.

Last year, 4,650 adults participated in 600 programs and workshops ranging from astronomy to guided beach walks. Another 23,000 visited the Center's natural habitats, enjoyed exhibits, and used the science library. Providing exciting and enriching natural science and cultural programs for Massachusetts school children is an important part of fulfilling the Science Center's mission of promoting appreciation and understanding of the South Shore environment. More than 10,000 visits are made by area children each year also.

In 1986, for example, 3,400 children from schools in 26 communities explored the trails; 600 middle and high school students participated in the North River archaeological dig; 1,000 fourth and fifth graders took part in the wetlands program; 300 first graders celebrated Arbor Day; 400 campers studied the environment; 750 students attended youth group programs sponsored by the Center; hundreds of others spent their vacation weeks at the Center's program; toddlers and pre-school children participated in special activities and 200 teachers learned to establish field work links for their science curricula.

While classes from as far away as Cape Cod and the North Shore visit the Center, it is the local school systems that use the Center's resources and programs now that things look promising for a Hull connection," he stated.

The commissioner noted that his victory is one more link in the "long chain of approvals the town has given to the Ward Plan," he said.

"I have certainly been a proponent of that approach, while my opponent disagreed with it. He did not believe in the feasibility of on-site repairs,' Vanderweil said.

Political newcomer Michael Sullivan won a three-year seat on the board of health. He finished with 62 percent of the vote, compared to 37 percent for his unsuccessful opponent, Hugh Joseph Morgan.

"I think I was fortunate to get some good advice from people who knew the Cohasset political system and the effective way to get my message across to the people," Sullivan said this week. The 32 year-old business professional said he talked to many town officials during his campaign, and mailed information to Cohasset voters, outlining his views on health board issues.

Sullivan said he intends to continue the careful monitoring of the tributaries to Lily Pond and he will pursue creative alternatives to the expensive repairs to Cohasset's septic systems. "I will also encourage the gradual implementation of a strong and effective recycling program in this town," he added.

The new member of the Cohasset School Committee is J. Russell Reidy. He was unopposed in his first attempt at public office.

A seven-year resident, Reidy said his two sons are class presidents, and another is a class representative, while he and his wife have been active in many school organizations and functions.

"It was kind of an easy campaign," Reidy said, referring to the lack of competition for the three-year term. "But I'm very enthused about working with the other board members."

His first priority as a committee member will be "to ensure the passage of a Proposition 2 1/2 override. It's a necessity to maintain the quality of our schools," Reidy noted.

"I hope there are enough concerned citizens with children in the system, and those whose children have gone through the system and succeeded in their careers, who will support the override," he continued. "The school system also has a serious effect upon the valuation of a town. Reducing the school budget will affect the basic quality of life here."

Reidy said he decided to run for the committee seat because of his family's involvement with the schools. "I also feel an obligation to give some time back to the town," he noted.

Other winners in Saturday's election included Robert Sturdy, who was re-elected to a five-year term on the planning board. His opponent, J. Stephen Bjorklun, received 35 percent of the vote, compared to 64 percent for Sturdy.

In the race for three, three-year terms on the library board of trustees, politicial newcomer Katherine Sturtevant edged out Sigrid Carey for a seat on that board. Incumbents Elizabeth Eaton and Agnes McCann were re-elected to the trustees board.

Uncontested candidates included school committee member Barbara Bliss; assessor Michael Patrolia; water commissioner James Sheerin. Incumbent Lot Bates decided not to seek re-election to the commission. Recreation commissioner Richard Barrow gathered 1,030 votes in his uncontested race for re-election.

And incumbent selectman Rocco Laugelle is beginning his fourth term in that office. The longtime local politician was previously on the water commission for 12 years and the sewer commission for the same amount of time. Prior to that, Laugelle served on various appointed boards and committees.

service area. This amount will be paid through user fees by those residents serviced by sewers.

"My impression is that since this will be paid through user fees, it is logical it would not be on the override ballot," Guild said, adding that the commission has been trying unsuccessfully for weeks to determine whether an override is required.

Regarding Hull's reaction to the proposed sewer plan, Guild said it took less than an hour for a majority of residents to approve the proposal. Only 19 voters rejected the plan.

The Cohasset sewer commissioner noted that if Cohasset voters approve the plan May 2, "that's it. That's what we need."

most. Since 1972, there have been more than 65,000 visits by students and 1,400 program contacts with teachers.

Youth, adult courses

Youth and adult courses, field trips, workshops, trail walks, field research, and year-long school curriculum collaboration address such topics as wildlife identification and behavior, astronomy, meteorology, geology, oceanography, botany, ecology, zoology, archaeology, cultural history, horticulture, and environmental concerns.

The Center's Speaker's Bureau provides additional outreach programs to clubs, museums, nursing homes, and other organizations. The nature day camp continues to be a dynamic part of summer activity and learning for young people. And the annual Kid's Festival and Corn Festival are happy, exciting affairs that involve thousands of people and offer information and fun for the whole family.

The Natural Science Center celebrated its 25th anniversary in 1987, distinguishing it as one of the oldest natural science centers in the nation. It is recognized for its outstanding community service, good management, quality staff and strong volunteer program. In 1986, Faith L. Burbank, director of the Science Center, received the Elsie M.B. Naumburg Award as one of the two outstanding professionals in the field of natural science education in the United States. The Center has also received special recognition for volunteer excellence by the United Way of Massachusetts Bay.

In addition, the Center receives grants from a variety of foundations, including the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and the Institute of Museum Services, which funds only the top 25 percent of applicants nationwide.

FOUNDED

"South Shore Natural Science Center was founded in 1962 by a group of citizens who recognized the importance of appreciating and preserving the environment and culture of the South Shore area. Inspired by the leadership of Dr. William G. 'Cap'n Bill' Vinal, known nationally as the 'Father of Nature Study and Recreation," the volunteer groups initiated a series of successful field study programs," said Capital Campaign Special Gifts Chairman Pam Vinal of Norwell.

"With a $1,000 donation from the Norwell women's Club and a gymnasium loaned by the Norwell Junior High School, the Science Center began. Soon a flourishing summer camp was established. A few years later, year-round operation followed, featuring school programs and adult courses.

ADDITIONS

"By 1966, the Center owned 16 acres of land and leased another 5 acres. Six years later, the Center completed construction of a compact facility that provided classroom, office, meeting, library, and exhibition space."

A small administrativce office was added five years ago. But the time has come to add classroom space if the Center is to continue to fulfill its educational mission," Executive Director Burbank commented. "After nearly three years of careful planning, the support for this campaign is certainly gratifying. We are looking forward to our official kick-off in May."

David Sargent, chairman of the Capital Campaign Committee, noted, "South Shore Natural Science Center is one of the finest resources on the South Shore. I am delighted to be heading the committee that will help the Center continue as a leader in environmental education."

Young People's Summer Theatre

The Young People's Summer Theatre of Scituate has announced plans for its 12th season of educational theatre for youths.

Donald Capen, director announced that the musical "It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman!" will be the major presentation of the season.

"Superman," a 1966 Broadway show by Charles Strouse (who wrote the music for "Annie") and Lee Adams (who wrote the hit shows "Bye, Bye Birdie" and "Applause", is based on the famous comic strip. It contains all the familiar characters including Superman himself and, of course, Lois Lane.

"Superman" follows in the YPST tradition of presenting a show not familiar to the general public, yet has a definite appeal due to the recent films and the comic strip's 50th anniversary this year.

The summer programs will begin Monday, June 6 at 7 p.m. at the First Congregational Church on Country Way, Scituate.

Registration for the program will be held then with a brief meeting for all interested youths. Registration is $30 per person, open to all area youths between the ages of 13 and 22. If Registration is mailed prior to June 1, the fee will be $20. Capen explains that all youths register for the program prior to auditions" so that they're there to perform in the show regardless of whether they get a lead role or not. Auditions, therefore, are basically a "placement" procedure."

Auditions will be held at the church on Saturday and Sunday, June 11 at 12, from 5 - 9 p.m. Interested youths need only attend one of the two evenings. Those interested in only performing as a "chorus" member (versus a speaking role) need only register and an audition is not necessary.

Everyone is accepted into the show who registers, regardless of the talent possessed.

An annual letter which detailed information, along with Registration cards, will be mailed to previous members on May 1. Youths who are not previous members may request a letter and registration card by calling 826-7983, or by writing to YPST at P.O. Box 41 in Scituate. Registration cards will also be available at the meeting of June 6, but, again, no discount will be allowed.

The program will run through early August. Details on performance dates will be announced later, since the usual place of performance, Scituate High School, will not be available this summer due to renovations.

Local youth hockey teams return from Quebec

Two Seahawk and Hingham youth hockey teams recently returned from a combined hockey exchange in Quebec City.

The Bantam teams (ages 15 and 16) showed the Canadians how to play their own national sport by coming away with four wins and no losses. Hingham can be proud of a 12-4 score against Valcartier Military base and 9-6 against St. Foye.

The Seahawk team emphasized our teams' superiority with wins of 4-2 against the military and 11-3 against St. Foye.

Many of our players were welcomed in Canada as long lost brothers, since the teams had previously competed two years ago. Many permanent friendships were formed. The game scores then were not of the kind that our players would wish to recall to the same extent as the friendships, so this year's results became particularly satisfying.

M.V.P. (most valuable player) awards were bestowed upon our teams by the Canadians after each game. Seahawks chosen were Pat Hammitt of Marshfield and John McDonald of Cohasset. Their fine playing was indisputable just as was the fact that separate judges in separate arenas twice chose Rich Schuhwerk to be Hingham's outstanding player.

The games, held over the weekend of March 18 to 20, were preceded by the playing of each country's national anthem while each team held the other team's national flag. Each game was followed by an exchange of souvenirs, the Seahawks giving lapel pins and Hingham giving minature hockey sticks of trophy-size with its team name inscribed.

Hockey was the purpose but not the entirety of the trip. The teams spent Saturday skiing at the vast and glamourous Mont-Sainte-Anne ski area. Those players who had never skied before were heard wondering why it took them until now. The more accomplished skiers surely become the "all-you-can-eat" breakfast smorgasbord offered by the Canadian Military in one of its chow halls, the indoor swimming pool, and the never-to-be-forgotten nights out on the town. (The kids learned that Canada's large cities, unlike those in the U.S., can be safe at any hour of the night on any street).

Hingham was represented by Pete Ward, Chip Willy, Brian Wightman, Jeff Darling, Brian Porier, Rich Schuhwern, Brian Falvey, Jamie Norton, Jay Mullen, Brian Hanson, Tom Kennedy, Aaron Jollin, Adam Vickery, Matt Teague and Pete McKenna. They were coached to a winning success by Bill Anastos and Chris Ward, who together have produced this year one of Hingham's best Bantam teams in recent history.

Dick Martin's Seahawks displayed their usual finery with Norwell's Scott Williams and Sean Martin, Hull's Frank McInnis, Danny Cohen, brother and sister Jon and Colby Mahoney and Chris Ventolieri, Cohasset's Rich McLaughlin and John McDonald, Marshfield's Pat Hammitt, Mike Garside and Kevin Walsh, and Scituate's Joel Whitman, Jeff Melville, Brian Legge and Kevin Stanley.

The coordinator of the hockey exchange, Don Willy of Hingham, said the Greater Boston League will reciprocate over the Easter weekend when it hosts "AA" Atomes from Quebec, who will play local "AA" Squirts at Pilgrim arena and Babson College. Willy said several of the South Shore boys who played in Quebec are also on his "Team U.S.A. Wolverines", which plays in April in Switzerland, Germany and Austria.

envied some of the mountain's "expert trails".

Chip Willy of Hingham and Jeff Melville, as well as several others, were "in their glory" when they located "double-black diamond" trails that would compare with Killington's "outer limits" reputed to be the most difficult in the East. Other striking memories would

Seahawks win tourney

The Seahawks Mite B hockey team, made up of under-10-year old players from the towns of Cohasset, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate, beat the Montreal Eagles 3-1, Sunday night to win their division championship in the Dolland-Des-Ormeaux, Montreal, Quebec tenth annual hockey tournament.

This marks the first time ever that a U.S. team has captured a division championship title at this Canadian tournament, which is the world's largest novice hockey tourney.

The Seahawks, coached by Barry Cox of Norwell, and assisted by Steve Gilley and John McLaughlin of Scituate won four straight games, scoring a total of 23 goals, with only two goals scored against superb Hull goalie, Mark Hendrickson.

Deer Hill fourth graders, Nevin Bunstein (2 goals, 6 assists) and Brian Riley (1 goal, 2 assists) skated the American flag around the ice at the end of the championship game.

The Seahawk Mite A team, coached by Scituate's Ted Malley, came very close to capturing the "B" division championship in Montreal, after winning its first game 25-0, stunning the Canadians. Malley's team followed with two more victories, losing in the semi-finals 5-4 against the team that won the championship. All in all, a triumph for these fine South Shore hockey teams.

Gift shop needs more crafts

Artists and craftspeople are invited to submit their work to the South Shore Art Center for consideration for the Center's gift shop.

Sheila Casey, who heads up the gift shop, is in the process of expanding and redoing the gift shop and is looking for artists and craftspeople who would like to sell their work through the shop. Interested artisans should contact Casey at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, 383-9548.

She is looking for smaller items such as unusual jewelry, hand painted silks, items in the "art to wear" category and blown glass. All works submitted will be juried into the gift shop.

Serious consequences

Now that the date for the special election is set, it's time for some difficult decisions tmade. It is time for people to gather all the information they can about this override proposal, and decide honestly and intelligently what the best course is for this town.

But those residents who cast their votes at last week's town meeting which added to the town's deficit, must feel obliged to vote for the Proposition 2 1/2 override. Without that override, there will be no money for the expenditures they approved. There will be no money for a contract with the Maine disposal company. There will be no money for the fire department's Jaws of Life. There will be no revaluation of properties, no mosquito control and no renovations to the high school science labs. If you voted for these services and improvements, you must be ready to approve an override.

This week, the school administration explained how a defeat of the override proposal would affect Cohasset's public school system. Many teachers and parents agree that further cuts into next year's proposed budget would be devastating.

Other departments will be affected by an override defeat. Services that have been kept to a minimum for the past several years will be sliced even further.

This is not the time to bear grudges against those who may or may not be responsible for our fiscal situation. For whatever reason, this town like many others, finds itself in bad financial straits and there appears to be no way out except to override Prop. 2 1/2. This is the route many other communities throughout the state are following.

We say this is not the time to bear grudges, but there is certainly ample time to correct our mistakes. One of those corrections may be to require the attendance of the town accountant at advisory committee meetings. This was a procedure followed in the past for many years, but with the hiring of several accountants in the past four years, that practice was unheeded.

It is an important and effective way to keep our town financial officers abreast of the latest monetary matters concerning Cohasset. Periodic reports on the fiscal status of the town will be welcomed along with updates for our advisory members.

We welcome comments and concerns the voters of Cohasset may have regarding the impending override. We hope you care enough about the future of this town to share your views with other residents. We have just a few weeks to impart this vital information - we want to make every citizen a part of this decision.

Whether or not we decide to override Prop. 2 1/2 will have serious consequences on this town for many years. It is important we share in that dialogue and decision.

Cohasset Bicentennial Committee

Constitution led to a new Navy

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset Bicentennial Committee

More than a decade following the American Declaration of Independence in 1776, at the time when a major change in the new nation's frame of government was being architected by the Constitutional Convention at Philadelphia in 1787, the United States was well on its way to becoming one of the world's great maritime powers.

The new nation, comprised of 13 former colonies stretching along the Atlantic seaboard of the New World, had turned its eyes toward the oceans of the world. During the colonial era merchant shipping from America had carried goods over trade routes to and from the thriving ports of British America. During that time American vessels enjoyed the protection of the world's greatest navy, Britain's Royal Navy (so long as they observed the regulations of the Crown, which frequently they did not.)

Following the Declaration of Independence the new nation found itself in desperate need of war vessels of all types to stave off the might of that same great fleet. By 1776 there were several small American navies, maintained individually by some of the seafaring states, and there was the nucleus of a small national navy maintained by the Continental Congress. Thus it was that Cohasset's Capt. Nathaniel Nichols served with Commodore Esek Hopkins' squadron aboard the warship "Alfred" in 1776.

A few large American war vessels served heroically, carrying names such as "Alfred", "Wasp", "Hornet", and of course, the most famous of Revolutionary War vessels, John Paul Jones' "Bonnehomme Richard" which bested the Royal frigate "Serapis" within site of the French coast. But the American Navy soon was swept from the seas by the might of England's fleets, and the greatest Revolutionary sea victories were won by Yankee "privateers"; fast, heavily armed merchant ships, many from Massachusetts ports, specially commissioned to capture, sink, or otherwise disrupt Britain's world-girdling merchant fleets.

In this, they succeeded, taking hundreds of prizes and bringing back mountainous supplies of badly needed goods to New England's port cities and towns. (Following his service aboard Esek Hopkins' "Alfred" Nathaniel Nichols notes having embarked on a privateer "voige" to the eastern Atlantic where several prize ships were taken.)

After the successful conclusion of the Revolution the new nation found itself without a navy to protect American merchant vessels and American sailors on the high seas. Before long, harassment by foreign warships began, and in the Mediterranean, the Barbary Pirates began to prey upon defenseless American vessels. By 1787, when the Constitutional Convention debated and discussed the future of the new nation, the "Algerine threat" in the Mediterranean had become a pressing matter. For an American sailor taken by the Barbary Pirates, enslavement, or ransom if he were fortunate, were an ever present danger.

In debates at the Constitutional Convention, and in the ratification debates which followed, the subject of a strong national navy repeatedly arose. In general, those favoring a strong centrally governed federal republic favored a strong navy to guard American vessels and crews at sea. Those opposed to strong "Federalism" also feared a strong navy, preferring treaties and tribute payments to keep foreign intruders away from American ships.

As the new Constitution was framed and then ratified, a national navy was authorized. Section 8 of the document gives Congress the power to "provide for the common defense", to "define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas" and "to provide and maintain a navy." On March 27, 1794 Congress authorized construction of six new and powerful warships, of the type called frigates, mounting 36 or 44 guns. The 36 gun frigates were the equal of any foreign ship of their class, and, as events later showed, the 44 gun vessels were vastly superior to ships of their type in any navy of the world. Of the 44 gun frigates, one was named "Constitution", and was to be built in Boston.

Today "Constitution" still can be seen at its berth in Boston, often is referred to by its historical nickname "Old Ironsides", and is the oldest fully commissioned warship in the world. By the year 1801, following a brief "quasi-war" on the seas with France, the new United States Navy was ready to turn its attention to the Barbary Coast corsairs. "Constitution" led a powerful squadron to the Mediterranean and action commenced to reduce the pirate states of the Algerine and Tripoline rulers. By 1805 the pirate states had been bested by the fledgling United States Navy, their cruisers and swift but fragile "war galleys" swept from the seas by "Constitution" and other American vessels, and their leaders more than willing to surrender in the face of American determination. A treaty with the Dey of Tunis signed in June, 1805 ended hostilities in the Mediterranean. When the final treaty was signed American seafarers as well as those of other nations could breathe a grateful sigh of relief for the ending of an era characterized by fear of enslavement in distant lands.

Shortly to follow, however, was another struggle which had as its foundation the protection of Americans on the open seas; the War of 1812. For England refused to fully recognize the sovereignty of its lost American colonies, and continued to seize American seafarers from our ships under the pretext they were "deserters" from the Royal Navy. In many cases they were not. Matters came to a head in 1807 when an American ship of war, the frigate "Chesapeake" was boarded by English sailors from the Royal frigate "Leopard" and American citizens removed. War over impressment of American citizens broke out in 1812, and again it was Boston's great frigate "Constitution" which exacted the greatest toll of an enemy by beating first the English frigate "Guerriere", then the frigate "Java", then, as the war was coming to a successful conclusion, two Royal warships at the same time, frigate "Cyane" and sloop of war "Levant" in an action in the Atlantic.

During the War of 1812 Cohasset's Capt. John Wilson and his crew, sailing aboard one of Capt. Levi Tower's Cohasset vessels, was captured and held for a time by an English war vessel. The war for American sailors' rights on the high seas was won by the United States, and England never again attempted to impress American seafarers travelling upon the oceans of the world.

Thus the drafting and ratification by Americans in 1787 and 1788 of a new national Constitution based upon principles of liberty under law, and providing for the means to protect American citizens, led directly to American presence on the oceans of the world which continues to this day, two hundred years later.

Conversation with Advisory Chairman Jane Goedecke

Information on Prop. 2½ override

Do you know at this point what people will be seeing on the override ballot May 14?

Selectmen did vote quite a while ago to support the idea of an override. So I feel certain there will be some sort of override question on the ballot. I think what they're trying to decide now is the best way to present the questions to the people to give them the greatest number of options. But if we separate all the special articles into capital outlay questions, then we are almost assuring the need for a special town meeting, Because even if one of those special articles fail, we must hold a special town meeting to rescind the vote.

Is there a danger that 1,500 voters could come out to the polls for a special election and defeat these articles that were passed by only two or three hundreds voters at town meeting?

Yes. But I think that the difficulty with capital outlay questions on each item is that the education process to help people decide how to vote took place at town meeting, and it will be hard for voters to educate themselves to decide on the merits of each question. So the voters will have to make an extra effort to educate themselves and we will have to do a lot to help them.

What exactly are those special articles that will appear on the special election ballot?

$20,000 for mosquito control; $15,000 for our contribution to the five-town ambulance; approximately $80,000 to operate the transfer station; $12,000 for the lease/purchase of the dozer/grader for the landfill; $8,800 for fire department rescue tools; $18,000 for engineering services for the board of health; $20,000 for repairs to the Osgood School roof; $70,000 for the revaluation; $4,800 for the Milliken Field study; $68,290 for a leachate control system at the landfill; $50,000 for environmental counsel; $16,000 for a pickup truck for the school department; and $50,000 for a back hoe for the highway department.

Those are just the things we would be funding through taxation, not borrowing.

If even, say the $4,800 for the Milliken Field study were to fail, we'd have to convene a special town meeting to rescind that vote.

We'd have to call a special town meeting just to rescind that vote?

We would have to hold a special town meeting prior to the end of this fiscal year.

Who decides that this is the make-up of the ballot?

Selectmen.

In addition to these special articles, we are going to have a general override question on the ballot?

Yes. An article for the town's operating budget - articles 4 through 7 in the warrant - $515,000.

In addition to those, we have the transfer station which is $550,000. The impact in '89 would be minimal - we are simply temporarily borrowing - but the impact in fiscal '90 would be approximately $98,000. This is a debt exclusion override, which raises the taxes for the life of the debt only, and not the tax base.

A question for the sewer project will also be on the ballot, and that's another debt exclusion override.

Even though there are a number of articles for the ballot, there are actually four topics?

One is the operating budget which is basically the general expenses of the departments and salaries. Then there are the capital expenditures required by the departments for the on-going operation of the town. Then, there are two large projects for which we would borrow. We would make each one of those separate - one for the transfer station and one for sewer project.

What is your greatest concern now with this special election?

I think my greatest concern is that people will not understand the issues well enough to vote intelligently. It's so complicated, they may vote in a way that's not really what they wish to happen.

How do think people in this town perceive an override? Are they angry?

At the beginning, they were very angry. And interestingly, I think some of the anger was caused by the headlines, not the articles in the press, which made people feel that somehow, money disappeared. First, we had to convince them that the money was never there to begin with. Also, there was a lot of concern about the town accountant's figures and if they were accurate, which was a real concern.

Now, I think that because of town meeting and the articles in the paper, people understand much better about what happened. And I do not get a sense of anger - it's more resignation. They understand the inevitability of this.

Could you explain, once again, the inevitability of our situation?

We do need to separate the fact that it was indeed inevitable and that we didn't have any warning. I believe that this was inevitable, but I don't believe we didn't have any warning.

We have been operating under Prop. 2 1/2 for over seven years and in that time there has never been a year when our expenses increased by only 2 1/2 or even 3 1/2 percent. Meanwhile, our growth has been slow and our revenues have also been increasing at a decreasing rate, and in some cases have actually decreased. So, if you plot those graphs, it was inevitable they were going to meet at a point. Our level of free cash has certainly been a very good indicator of what was happening. We knew this was inevitable - those of us on the advisory committee knew that at some point we were going to be looking at a debt exclusion. We didn't know it would be now and we didn't know it would involve a general override.

But we were basically funding our deficit with our free cash . We could have gotten through this year - if we didn't have such extraordinary expenses this year, we could have gotten through this year with just a debt exclusion. But because of the level of such high, unforeseen expenses - the $228,000 increase in our insurance costs, the significant increase in pension costs - and to have revaluation fall the same time as these other things - we had several expenses that don't come every year all land at the same time. And our legal fees have taken on sort of a regular existance, but they originally were extraordinary expenses. We're voting those this year the same level as last year. They've assumed a regular place in our budget.

There should have been some signals, some warnings?

I think that if we had been tracking closely revenues versus anticipated revenues, and if we had been projecting anticipated revenues in a more conservative way, we would perhaps have had more warning we were not going to be able to balance the budget.

What will be different about our budget planning from now on?

Although people can question the value of changing bylaws on the floor of town meeting, I think the intent of the changes made last week was very good. The advisory committee now will have regular reporting by the accounting department as to actual revenues compared to anticipated revenues, which will give us a better idea of where we stand each year. And in the future the advisory committee will also look at revenue projections made by other departments and evaluate for ourselves whether they are realistic. We have not done that in the past.

Where will people turn for more education about this override process?

The League of Women Voters has volunteered to do a town-wide mailing giving information on Proposition 2 1/2, and on the override question. They are not going to take a position. They are simply going to provide information and that will be a wonderful source.

Maybe a part of this mailing could be a sample ballot.

The hope is that people will decide on each item on its own merit. But you can't do that if you don't know what it is. It will say, 'revaluation for $70,000.' People don't know that this is mandated by law. They may say, let's wait until next year. They have to really understand what the purpose is.

Have we calculated what the effect on the teax rate will be if voters approve everything?

If everything passes, the dollar figure will be about $875,000, which would mean a $1.58 increase on the tax rate which would mean a total of $14.56 which is approximately a 12 percent over last year.

If you remove all of those special items from the override, it will still mean a 12 percent increase next year. But in the following year, your base would be set at the level of $515,000, which we already computed. In the succeeding year, the increase would just be the five and a-quarter percent increase we originally discussed. That would be the new base, and you automatically have a two and a-half percent increase over that. It would also mean we would be more likely to have capital exclusions or debt exclusions to consider in the following year.

Unless there is a significant new influx of revenue, either a great increase in user fees - the assessors don't see a great increase in growth. In fact they see growth slowing down.

One thing I think, I see all the towns around us and there are very few that are not in trouble. Particularly their school budgets. I think the state is going to have to step in and that is one of the only ways I see towns getting out of this bind without having to regularly override Proposition 2 1/2.

Towns have to realize the override question - the debt exclusion question - were put into the law on purpose.

They weren't devised by people who didn't like the law to find a way to get around it. We shouldn't think this is something improper. It is an integral part of the law designed to keep control of expenditures in the hands of the people. Proposition 2 1/2 was not designed to prevent expenditures or to prevent an increase in spending. It was designed to keep control of it in the hands of the people.

Conversation with Supt. Hart

How defeat of override will affect schools

Would failure to override Proposition 2 1/2 have a serious impact on the quality of education in Cohasset?

Yes, there's no question in my mind that it would. The budget we have for this year is approximately $5 million. And looking at the projected deficit, we'd have to cut approximately $440,000 from the school budget. Because of the type of budget we have, which is heaviest in the area of personnel, that is the area we'd see most of the cuts coming from.

How many positions would have to be eliminated?

Just to preface that. . .We have not had a lot of time to look at all the potential cuts we might have to face. But at the present stage, it looks as if about 22 people would have to be reduced. Unfortunately, when you do that you have to carry back into your budget a certain amount of unemployment costs. For every three professional positions you reduce, you may have to reduce another just to pay for the unemployment costs.

Would all of the 22 people you would have to cut be teachers?

No. Probably about 14 would be teaching and/or professional support positions. That could mean, say, a guidance counselor or a music or art position. But the majority would be classroom teachers.

What kind of impact would that have?

Well, class sizes would be increased. At the elementary level, we'd be looking at class sizes probably in excess of 30. At the secondary level it's a little bit different. The biggest impact there would be a reduction of the number of sections available to students in certain courses. And I'm sure we wouldn't be able to offer as many courses.

How many children do you have in each elementary class now?

Now we're running about 22 children per class. We've been having approximately 80-90 children in each grade level, though the exact figures vary. Now we have four sections for each grade level. We'd probably have to cut back to three in most grades, and that would push class sizes up over 30.

Some people would say, what's wrong with that?

The concern is for the needs of the children. Obviously you will not get the kind of individualized attention that you have at the present time. The teacher will not have as much time for each student. This is not to say it's impossible to have 30 children in a class. But the overall quality of education would be affected. It depends on what your expectations for quality of education in a community like Cohasset might be. We've been providing what we consider to be an excellent level of educational services, and they would be impacted by those reductions.

What about children with special needs?

There would be a greater demand on some of our special needs services, because children would not get as much help as they presently do. So we may have a greater demand in those areas, which are mandated programs. More children might need extra help outside the normal classroom setting, for example.

Do you anticipate having to cut some programs entirely, your new reading program, for example?

We will try to do everything possible to maintain the quality of education. In my professional judgment, however, with a reduction in the magnitude of over

Science center summer camp

South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell announces the introduction of two new programs to its schedule of summer day camp fun for children ages 3 to 12.

What is Nature Day Camp? Fun, adventure, discover, walks, crafts, and friends — all in an outdoor setting.

This year, in addition to Sprouts (3 year olds), Chipmunks (4 years old to entering Grade 1), and morning Discovers, Nature Day camp is offering a three day a week Advanced Chipmunk program for children entering Grade 1 and an All Day Discoverers program for children Grades 3 - 6.

Under the leadership of camp director Dave Babel, Nature Day Camp is geared toward nature exploration and learning through hands-on activities in small groups which allow for individual attention and promote social growth.

Campers not only explore the 34 acres of the Natural Science Center property but also investigate wetlands, pond, stream, fields, and nearby seashore. For both first time and veteran campers, experiences at these diverse habitats add up to a summer of great fun!

How override defeat will affect schools . . .

$400,000, it would be naive and misleading to imply that I would be able to maintain the level of service we presently have. We would try to avoid eliminating programs entirely, but many, possibly including the reading program, would be scaled back. Athletics, transportation, student services, all would be impacted.

How would all these cuts affect other areas of life in the town?

I think there is a direct correlation between quality of education systems and property values, because that's a prime factor in peoples' decision of where to locate their families. We get inquiries at least weekly, either from realtors or individuals, wanting information about the school system. They want our class profiles, they want to see how many of our students are going on to college, what the pupil-teacher ratio is, what type of programs you're offering and so forth.

What about closing the Osgood School, as some people have suggested?

A number of people have suggested consolidating the two elementary schools. I don't think it's feasible at this point, frankly, purely from a space utilization standpoint. There could be some advantages to having a single elementary school. But before that could happen, given our present and projected enrollments, it would require a substantial addition to the Deer Hill School. For the school year beginning in September of '89, we expect we'll need 26 classrooms. At the Deer Hill School, there are presently available only 17 classrooms.

So you see no alternative but to approve the override at the present time?

Frankly, no I don't, not if we want to maintain the present high-quality level of education the families in Cohasset are being offered in the public schools.

Youth soccer team scores

Two Cohasset youth soccer teams scored victories in the second week of Coastal Soccer League play, while a third earned a hard-fought tie.

But the real story was two tight 1-0 losses to Plymouth, the league power whose soccer program has eight times the number of players Cohasset has. Both Cohasset Under 16 teams lost their Plymouth contests by that narrow score. Nevertheless, said league coordinator Larry Shultz, "those are wins as far as I'm concerned."

In the boys' game, coach Steve Geary cited defender Colin Studds, sweeper Travis Coley, and Tom "The Wrecker" Reardon as playing fine games. Girls earning plaudits from coach Steve Hague included goalkeeper Lynda Hague, Anna Sandell and Sophie Redfield.

The most significant win was earned by the Under 10-1 boys team. In their opening game, Under 10-1 knocked off host Scituate 5-3. Center midfielder Jonathan Crafts scored two goals, while midfielder Matt Rossi, and strikers Matt Belson and Matt O'Connor had one apiece. Particularly outstanding, said coach Terry Kahn, was goalkeeper Kevin McKenna.

The weekend's other win came from the boys Under 12-2 team, which played twice. On Saturday, Under 12-2 lost to Kingston, as Jim Magner scored. But on Sunday they beat Hanover 2-1, with goals by Ken Leahy and Ben Manning.

Boys Under 12-1 tied their Kingston counterparts 1-1 as Eric Henry scored his (and the team's) second goal of the season. Coach Steve Endris also praised stopper Chris Kondrat and Charlie Endris.

The Girls Under 10-2 (Under 10-1 had a bye) lost to Plymouth 6-1 in a game that saw coach Kevin O'Donnell's squad depleted by a competing gymnastics meet. Still, Catie Campbell scored her second goal of the season, and goalkeepers Hannah Beggan and Kelly-Marie O'Donnell played well.

Girls Under 12-1, also affected by a gymnastics conflict, lost 6-0 to Hanover. Sarah Kirk had a good game in goal, and striker Vicki Maynard and back Tina Rousseau played well. Under 12-2 lost 3-0 to Scituate, a game in which Jessica Snow was injured. Coach Nino D'Urso said the team hoped she'd be able to return soon. Cited by D'Urso for good games were Melinda Johanson and goalie Amy Silvia.

Members of the Girls 12 and Under Team 1.

Girls Under 14-1, playing Plymouth, lost 5-1. Amy Galant scored, and goalies Kathleen Conroy and Katie Beggan stopped several shots. Under 14-2 were edged by Pembroke 2-1. Colby Lawrence scored, and Shona Hislop looked good.

The Boys Under 10-2 team played a strong Duxbury squad in their second game of the season, losing 2-0. Striker Burke Davis and back Sam Goedecke were outstanding.

Boys Under 14-1 lost a close one to Norwell, 1-0. Coach John Kinchla cited back Mac Campbell, stopper Joey Andrade and striker John Brister. Under 14-2, facing Plymouth, fell 2-0. Singled out were Sascha Ordelheide, Ben Chittick and, off the bench, David Aronson.

Finally, the boys Under 19 squad — essentially the team that went to the Division 3 state high school finals — lost 4-0 to Marshfield. "It was the first time they'd touched the ball since the finals," said coach Larry Shultz. "They had no feel."

The home schedule at Milliken Field this weekend: Saturday — Girls Under 12-1 vs. Carver, 10:15; Girls Under 14-2 vs. Plymouth, 11:30; Boys Under 10-1 vs. Hingham, 1 p.m.; Boys Under 10-2 vs. Middleboro, 2:15; Boys Under 14-2 vs. Kingston, 3:30.

Local programs honored with awards

By Mary Ford
Mariner correspondent

The setting was Hugo's, not Hollywood. And the cast was made up of volunteers, not high-paid stars.

But the fourth annual Golden Tape Awards (March 29) American Cablesystems' salute to local cable-television productions and their creators, had all the glitter and emotion of its Hollywood counterparts.

"These people (volunteers) really make us look good," said Susan Lippman, program director for Norwell. "This (Awards) is our way of saying 'thanks' to them."

The "volunteers" are local residents from Hanover, Hull, Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate, who do everything from operating cameras to directing, producing and starring in their very own television shows.

Awards in 15 categories were given to the outstanding productions of 1987. And special recognition from the program director in each town was given to "Best Production Crew," "Volunteer of the Year," and the "American Award" (for outstanding service and dedication).

Nominees submitted tapes of their programs to a panel of judges made up of representatives of American Cablesystems and the communities it serves.

HANOVER OLD AND NEW

A big award-getter was "Hanover: Blending the Old and the New," a five-minute documentary, whose producers Bill Cook and John Schumacher won for "Best Short," and cameraman Mike Finnerty for "Best Camera."

"We were trying to show that the town (Hanover) still holds a lot of history and is also progressing," said Schumacher, who also won "Producer of the Year."

The program has been recognized by the Arts and Entertainment network, a nationwide cable station, where "Hanover: Blending the Old and and New," has made it to the semi-finals in the city video competition.

"We've made it to the top twenty (out of 155)," said Schumacher, who teaches instrumental music in the Hanover school system.

"Living Options for Elders on the South Shore," produced by members of the American Association of Retired Persons (A.A.R.P.) branch in Hingham, won silver certificates (second place) for "Best Documentary," and "Best Show."

VOLUNTEER OF THE YEAR

And the entire crew consisting of Laura Connor of Cohasset; Olive Howland of Braintree; Virginia Tierney, Yolanda Galvin, and Margo Cartwright of Hingham; and Connie and Joseph Gaudreau of Weymouth, won "Volunteer of the Year" for Hingham.

"This is a great suprise for us," said Gaudreau (Joseph), spokesman for the group. Gaudreau also praised Hingham program director, Pat Farrell for teaching them everything they know.

At the other end of the scale, "Kids Connection," a Norwell program for teens, which covers everything from movie reviews to "teen views," won silvers for "Best Series," and "Best Lighting." Its creators: eighth graders Renee Taylor and Jim Panarelli, ninth grader Becky Ennis, sixth grader Justin Taylor, and Nicole Taylor, a senior at Norwell High, also won "Best Production Crew" from Norwell.

"Thanks to Sue (Lippman)," said Nicole, speaking for the group. "And thanks to our parents who let us stay out Wednesday nights and miss dinner."

CONNORS NOMINATED

Tom Connors of Scituate was nominated in four categories and won "Best Supporting Event Coverage" for Scituate/Cohasset sports, "Volunteer of the Year" for Cohasset and "The American Award" for Scituate.

Over the past five years Connors has produced 500 sports and community events: 118 shows in 1987 alone.

"I've seen a lot of things," said Connors, who has covered two soccer, four basketball and one hockey state championship. "Doing games is just a thrill for me.

"Some people ask me 'why don't you go and get a paying job somewhere?" he said, adding that the experience and personal satisfaction made it all worthwhile.

"The best part of the job comes to me when after I've announced a state championship," he said. "A parent comes up to me and says 'Thanks, without you, my son or daughters' grandparents would never get the chance to see my child play." "

Not everyone in attendance was a nominee.

Eileen Kurtz and Betty Maree, sisters and volunteers from Cohasset, came to the black-tie affair just for fun.

A few months ago, they saw an ad for a "video workshop" and went in, and now they're running camera equipment.

"I thought I was going down to learn how to run my VCR," said Kurtz, who added, "We're having a blast."

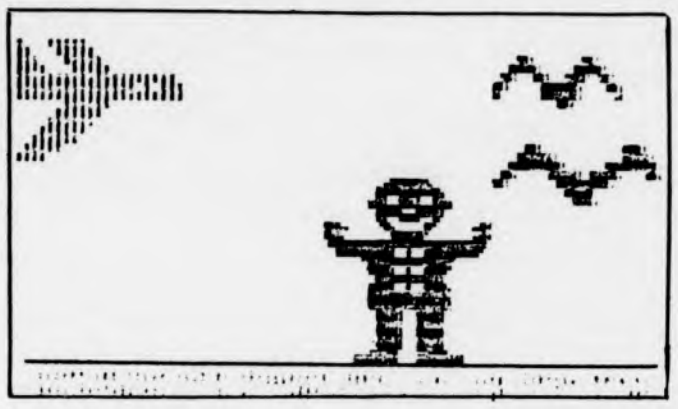
Stories for spring by 2nd grade students



If I were a kite. . .

I would go up into the air. I would fly in the air to space. I see the moon. I saw a fast comet. I saw a space shuttle. Then I went down and landed on the ground.

Keith
Grade 2

If I were a kite. . .

I'd fly up into the sky. I'd fly over my house, to see my mother. If I were a kite, I'd go to the beach to see my boat. I would fly over the ocean. I'd fly far away, and look down at the fish. I'd see Minot's Light, a lighthouse. I'd go back to my house and land.

Tom

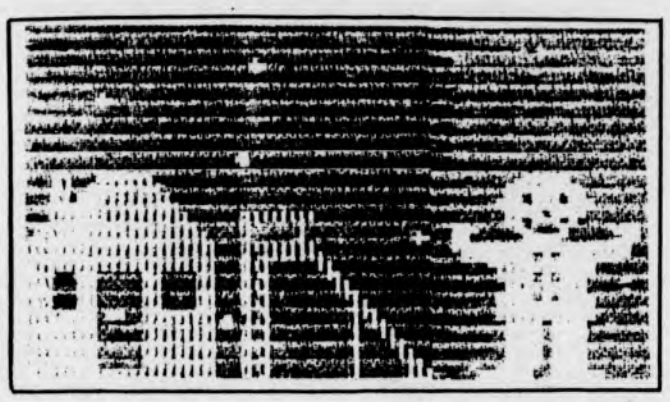
If I were a kite. . .

I would flly over a rainbow, and see all the birds. I would fly over my house. I could see people walking in town, and Melissa's house. I would fly east, I would be in Newport. I would fly over the school and see Mrs. Collins and Miss Balch. They would be doing math and reading and spelling tests. I would fly over to my house and get a drink. I would go over the Frankie's house and Frankie has to fly the kite. I am going over the hill. I see a pond with lobsters, with another rainbow. I will go home and rest.

Rosemarie
Grade 2



If I were a kite. . .

I would go off in the air. Then, I saw an airplane up in the sky. I jumped on top of the airplane and took a little ride. I got off and went to see the birds. The birds were chasing me to the ground. I turned around. They were still chasing me. I went really, really fast. they bit the rope, and the rope broke. I fell on the ground. Then, a car stopped and a lady picked me up. She put me in the car and took me home.

Artist of the Month

The Artist of the Month volunteers introduced the ancient art of sand painting practiced by the native American Indians to the Osgood students last week.

Barely a sound was heard since the students were so engrossed in this unique techinque of using colored sand to create a picture.

This opportunity was made possible thanks to the help fo the following volunteers:

Thank you!

The Sixth Graders would like to thank all the mothers who volunteered their time on March 31, April 5, 6, and 7. The volunteers were: Joan Pyfrom, Sue Brister, Sue DeMichele, Amy Golden, Carolyn Horn, Carol Riley, Sandy Theriault, Karen Murphy, and Kyle Lubitz.

Their positive guidance was invaluable in helping the students organize their poster plans for the School Fair. We especially wish to thank Kyle Lubitz, who recriuted the volunteers.

...it's in your hands

When it comes to safety in the home — we can tell you what to do, but it's still up to you.

- Check your house for worn wires on appliances and extension cords — and replace them.
- Warn children that if their hands or feet are wet they should not touch appliances.
- Warn children not to use appliances — such as radios or hair dryers — in the bathroom or near water.

School news

Senior activities forum

More than 100 seniors and parents gathered at the high school on March 30 to exchange ideas about end-of-year activities. Senior class advisors Florence Ely and Joan Wool outlined plans for the senior picnic May 20, when the yearbooks will be distributed, and for the senior prom, May 31 from 6:30 to 11:30 p.m., at the Weston Hotel.

This is the first year that Cohasset High School's prom will be held in Boston, and all students were strongly advised, for safety, to arrange limousine transportation for the evening. A photographer will be available; dinner will be served, tickets are on sale now at $50 a couple.

Guidance Director John Leary encouraged all seniors, in spite of "application burn-out," to apply for the many local scholarships available; most applications are due in the Guidance Office April 15. Parents were encouraged to attend Senior Class Night June 2, when scholarships are awarded, and when the seniors, in turn, present the Golden Apple Award to the teacher they have voted most inspirational.

Mrs. Wool reminded students of the two 8 a.m. (dates TBA) rehearsals required for the graduation ceremony and assured parents that any students lacking graduation requirements would be fully informed by the Guidance Office.

Unlimited invitations for graduation Sunday, June 5, at the Music Circus, may be purchased by contacting Laurie Hamilton (383-9834) by April 15. Please note that an invitation is not required for admission. The PSO will send personal invitations to all faculty members and will host a reception to honor all graduates and faculty immediately following the ceremony.

Round table discussions of possible pre and post-prom parties provided creative ideas for Senior Class Parent Advisors Laurie Hamilton, Karen Kirkendall, Lucy Marsac, and Ruth Nedrow. Many parents offered to help and plans are underway for a class pre-prom party and a breakfast early the next day.

CHS talent search honors

Katherine Barrett, Catherine DeLima, Nathan Fiore, John Maynard, Marc Mercurio, Sheldon Morgan, Kathleen O'Sullivan, and Alexander Vanderweil, all seventh graders at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, have been selected to receive awards for their achievement in the Talent Search Program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University.

Cohasset High School has participated in the CTY Talent Search for the past five (5) years. Talent Search is a program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University's Center for the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth. The goal of the program is to identify the most academically talented seventh graders, offer those students summer educational programs, and provide them with recognition at state and regional ceremonies. Each year for the past five years the Cohasset Public Schools has received a Johns Hopkins Certificate for Distinction in this competition.

Initially, students are selected based on their scores on the SRA tests administered each year. Students scoring at the ninety-seventh (97th) percentile or higher on those tests in the sixth grade are encouraged to participate in the program. If they wish to enter, they take the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Board in December of the seventh grade. If their scores approximate the averages of eleventh and twelfth graders taking the test, they are singled out for distinction or to receive awards at state or regional ceremonies.

Selected to receive a Certificate of Distinction are John Maynard and Marc Mercurio. Kathleen Barrett, Nathan Fiore, Sheldon Morgan and Alexander Vanderweil have been selected to receive state awards in addition to a Certificate of Distinction. Receiving very high honors in the competition are Catherine DeLima and Kathleen O'Sullivan, both of whom will receive state and regional awards. The state and regional awards will be presented to qualifying students at a ceremony to be held Sunday, June 5, at Boston University.

NEEDED - WANTED - ANYONE INTERESTED IN BECOMING A HEALTH CARE VOLUNTEER

SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) is a program sponsored by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs in conjunction with Councils on Aging. It is designed to develop a network of volunteers trained as health benefits counselors. At present, there are 9 SHINE sites consisting of 121 volunteers in 61 communities.

The purpose of SHINE is to ensure that Massachusetts elders have access to accurate information regarding health insurance and health care options. SHINE counselors are volunteers, mostly elders, who have received intensive training on health benefits. Some counselors receive a small monthly stipend for their work, but all provide their important service free of charge.

SHINE counselors: (1) assist elders in understanding their health insurance needs. (2) inform elders of their rights under Medicare. (3) provide elders with forms and brochures on health care options such as HMO's (4) assist elders in processing claims. (5) make referrals to community agencies when appropriate. (6) arrange for speakers at group presentations. This program is very important because the health care system is becoming more complex with new options such as HMO's and new payment systems such as DRG's. It is essential that elders know where to turn to get impartial advise on these important matters.

Anyone interested in becoming SHINE counselor, please call Kathy Bryanton at the Council on Aging office — 383-9112.

Soccer camp sponsored by recreation dept.

The Cohasset Recreation Department has contracted North American Soccer Camps, Inc. to conduct a half day, week-long soccer clinic, which will begin Monday, August 22, through Saturday, August 29, at Deer Hill Field.

The program will be from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The Saturday time will be announced during the week. The cost for camp is $80 for the first child in a family, $75, for the second, and $70 for the third or more in each family.

Each participant is also provided a camp T-shirt and soccer ball. Parent coaching clinics will be held two evenings during the week. Exact days and times will be announced.

North American Soccer Camp's instructors are brought to this country from Great Britian to conduct youth soccer programs throughout the United States during the summer months. They offer instruction to children aged 7-18 years.

To register for this program, call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible. A $25 deposit will be necessary at the time of registration and the balance will be due by June 1. Registration is necessary now in order to assign the proper number of coaches to keep a 1-15 coach/participant ratio. Also, the registration form on the back of this year's N.A.S.C. brochure must be completed in full for each child.

The Cohasset Recreation Commission would like to extend their gratitude to the many businesses and residents for their generous contributions towards the Annual Easter Egg Hunt, held the Saturday before Easter Sunday, each year.

Over 600 residents attended this year's program held Saturday, April 2, at the Deer Hill School Fields. Children received candy, balloons and prizes and the following individuals and organizations are thanked for their efforts and interest in the program, and Cohasset children:

Cohasset Police Association, Cohasset Fireman's Association, Cohasset Rotary Club, George Mealey American Legion Post #118, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Explorer Post #28, Cohasset Fire Department, Kimball's-By-The-Sea, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lehr, Bobby Barrow, Brendon Mulcahy, June Simeone, Mrs. Lot Bates, Lot Bates, Charlie Stover, Strawberry Parfait, Fanny Farmer Candy Shops, Inc.

A very special thanks to Jean Salvador who has continued donating much time and effort not only towards the Easter Egg hunt per se, but visiting residents who are shut-ins or hospitalized, during the Easter season. Her selfless efforts have brought joy to many residents of all ages. We all owe her gratitude and thanks.

Vacation Special

The prize winning magician David Oliver will perform at Cohasset Town Hall Friday, April 22, at 1 p.m. The price of admission is $4 per person, and includes popcorn, drink and two magic tricks. Also there will be a surprise gift for the first 25 children purchasing tickets.

Children may be dropped of at Town Hall at 12:45 p.m., and should be picked up at 2:30 p.m. Parents who wish to stay for the show, may do so for the $4 price for children.

Murray's memos . . .

By Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

Several of the major bills before the Massachusetts Legislature this year have to do with automobile insurance reform.

There is no question that significant action must be taken this year to address, what can only be described as, the Commonwealth's auto insurance rate crisis.

The proposal that I, along with a dozen other Republican House members, have filed meets that call for significant action. Our proposal is a sweeping, fundamental change which would restore competition and fairness to the state's auto insurance system.

The proposal would increase the benefits for good drivers and toughen the penalties for poor drivers. No longer would good drivers have to subsidize the reduced rates for bad drivers. Suburban and rural drivers would no longer have to subsidize the rates of drivers who live in congested, urban areas. In other words, our plans brings reason and fairness back into the picture of auto insurance in the state.

The plan calls for a phased return to competitive rates, while it gives the state's insurance commissioner a strong oversight role to prevent the occurance of rate shock to any drivers.

The plan would put an end to Massachusetts' dubious role of having the highest auto insurance rates in the country. It means that almost every driver, save for a small percentage in Boston, would see reductions in auto insurance costs or, at minimum, a significant slowing of rate hikes.

The competitive plan is combined with a get-tough approach to auto theft and fraud. The combination is a strong one-two punch that will K-O ever increasing auto insurance rates.

But this is a fight that needs your help. Write the governor, the insurance commissioner, your state senator and state representative. Tell them you're against high auto insurance rates. Tell them you are for House Bill 5290 and some meaningful reform of the Massachusetts auto insurance system.

Override ballot pared down to eight questions

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Convinced that voters would find a 19-part special election ballot too confusing, selectmen pared it down to eight individual override questions.

At the May 14 special election to override Proposition 2 1/2, voters can expect to see one general budget override question for $659,000; a single capital outlay exclusion question for $229,000; four separate debt exclusion override questions totaling $702,000; and two Ward Plan sewer construction articles. Although it is estimated the sewer project will cost about $3.1 million, that amount has not been finalized.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew told selectmen Tuesday night he is convinced that the entire $3.1 million must be approved as an override by a majority of voters. But he was told by sewer commissioner Edward Guild that because $800,000 of the construction costs will be paid by the sewer system users, that amount is exempt from the override proposal.

In order to expedite the printing of the election ballot, selectmen agreed to include the two sewer articles without a specific dollar amount. The articles will read: "will the town exempt from Proposition 2 1/2 the amounts required to pay the bond issues" in order to construct the sewers.

Originally, selectmen were presented with a 19-

One man's dream: landfill for prison

A solution to the town's costly history of lawsuits against Cohasset Heights landfill may be to swap it for a county prison.

A King Street resident has offered that thought to selectmen: ask Norfolk County to purchase the commercial landfill off Rte. 3A in return for a county prison. According to Sumner Smith, "this would eliminate the landfill, unending costly litigation, the potential for pollution and the stigma."

Smith admitted it is a notion he "dreamed up" a couple of months ago. But he said the suggestion would make for an "interesting debate."

In his proposal sent to selectmen last week, Smith said since the prison would require a sewer system, the county could bear a large portion of the cost of Cohasset's system.

"I guess it's an interesting choice, trying to decide between a jail and a dump," Smith stated. "But if the town got enough money for our sewers and enough money to locate a prison here, maybe

People will have to accept waste recycling

By Bill Bowers
Mariner staff

Mandatory recycling of solid waste, which was overwhelmingly approved at the April town meeting is not only inevitable, but ultimately will be of great benefit to the community, town officials say.

"It's our only alternative," said landfill supervisor Joseph Laugelle. "People will just have to accept it."

Laugelle, who has been working at the landfill for over 20 years, says that without mandatory recycling the facility's capacity would be totally exhausted within three years.

More than one-third of the rubbish brought to the Cohasset landfill consists of corrugated cardboard and paper, according to Laugelle.

"Cardboard is public enemy number one," he said.

The landfill receives enormous quantities of cardboard boxes every year from stores in town, Laugelle explained. Furthermore, cardboard is extremely bulky and difficult to pack down, and therefore takes up a great deal of landfill space.

"We're buried in the stuff," Laugelle said.

The town eventually will have to purchase a baling machine to wrap the cardboard into manageable bundles for shipment to the SEMASS facility, according to Laugelle.

The logistics of mandatory recycling have yet to be worked out. Laugelle explained that the dump study committee, the selectmen and the board of health will be meeting soon to discuss the procedures residents will have to follow in sorting their trash for disposal.

Town officials plan to phase in mandatory recycling, Laugelle said. Paper and glass will be the first two categories of materials to be recycled, to be followed by metal items further down the road.

"Eventually people will have to sort their trash into three separate categories," Laugelle said. He added that the town plans to issue a pamphlet as soon as possible to explain to residents the proper procedures to follow once recycling is in full swing.

Laugelle said he does not know exactly what will be done with paper rubbish. During the Korean war, waste cardboard sold for as much as $45 per ton, but today the price is down to $3 to $5 per ton, he explained.

Waste paper from the SEMASS facility might eventually wind up in Japan, Laugelle suggested. With very limited numbers of trees available for paper manufac-

New Mariner rate

The new postal rate increases that went into effect April 3 also affect your Mariner, and will force us to increase subscription rates, effective June 1.

Starting then, the in-town rate for a one-year subscription will be $15, or $25 for the two-year subscription and $35 for three years.

The out-of-town rates will be $22 for one year, $40 for two years, and $58 for three years.

The out-of-town school rate (nine months) will be $15, while the in-town senior citizen rate will be $13 for one year, $23 for two years, and $33 for three years.

The newsstand price will increase to 50 cents, to help offset our higher production costs.

We regret the need for these increases, but have delayed the effective date as long as possible in order to give readers time to take advantage of our early renewal program.

Even with the increase, your home-delivered Mariner costs less than 29 cents an issue -- but if you renew or extend your subscription before June 1, you can take advantage of our current rates.

Savings are even greater for those who sign up for two or three years, and readers who now buy their paper on the newsstand can save nearly half the price by subscribing.

You will find a special subscription blank on Page 8. We urge you to take advantage of these savings, and keep your Mariner coming each week at the lowest possible price.

Murray's fundraiser

After a two-year study, the cemetery study committee concluded that 16 acres of school department-controlled land could be used for about 4,000 additional grave sites that would serve the town for another 100 years.

Cemetery study committee chairman Glenn Pratt noted in the summary that the school department currently controls 216 acres of land with access from Pleasant Street, approximately 1,000 feet from the Deer Hill School.

The committee has suggested the acreage could be developed in phases to accomodate 3,000 grave sites, with further expansion on the Smith Place side of the property for 960 additional graves.

Costs for the development of the proposed cemetery are reasonable, according to the study committee, because there is no acquisition fee. Engineering plans and specifications will cost about $78,000 and site development will cost the town an additional $1,100,000.

According to the committee, the new cemetery would be available in two or three years. If development of this alternative is not initiated soon, the committee said "the town will be precariously close to not having graves for sale."

The planning board reported in 1977 that the life expectancy of available graves for sale in town cemeteries is about 10 years.

The committee had surveyed 15 parcels of town-owned property, and narrowed the possible sites to eight for further evaluation. After inspection of the sites by Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle and the committee's engineer, the possible cemetery sites were narrowed to the school land, land adjacent to the golf club, and land owned by Osborn Ingram on the south side of Beechwood Street.

The committee suggested that selectmen appoint a permanent cemetery committee to manage the town cemeteries in regard to the sale of lots, price and future expansion.

Town in red

In an analysis of the actual local revenue versus budgeted revenue for Fiscal 1988, Town Accountant Mary Matthews reported the town is falling approximately $120,000 short of the 1988 budget.

Based on that analysis, Matthews said the town will need to find an additional $60,000 in local revenue to meet its budget projection of $1,084,400 for Fiscal 1989.

There are several areas of concern in this year's revenue projections, Matthews noted in her analysis to selectmen last week. Motor vehicle excise taxes will fall short of its projected 1988 budget by $44,375, she estimated.

But Matthews also noted that boat excise taxes will be about $3,000 more than the expected total of $12,695 for the current fiscal year. Also, there will be an approximate $21,000 increase in the actual revenue from licenses and fees.

But harbor fees will fall short of the $41,514 expected level by more than $10,000 this fiscal year. And there will be a $19,000 shortfall on the town's penalty and interest on taxes this year.

Thank you's

Thank-you's were issued this week by a resident of Old Pasture Road and the fire chief.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock thanked Wayne Sawchuk of 152 King Street for his donation of a surplus Xerox copier to the fire dpeartment. "The firefighters greatly appreciate any and all support given to the Fire Department by the citizens of Cohasset," the chief stated in a letter to Sawchuk which was forwarded to selectmen.

In another letter, Jeffrey Waal of Old Pasture Road expressed his gratitude to the highway department and surveyor Harold Litchfield for their promt response to a problem on Evergreen Lane.

Waal said he called at 7:30 a.m. April 5 regarding a drainage problem at the end of Evergreen Lane behind his home. The problem was corrected within the hour. "That's remarkable," Waal commented in his letter to the highway department and selectmen. "Your responsiveness is appreciated."

New class II license

Selectmen approved a Class II license to Richard Brown to sell and repair used cars.

The license will be for his second Cohasset location at 574 Chief Justice Cushing Highway - the present site of The Car Barn.

Although Selectman Rocco Laugelle criticized Brown for the number of cars he has obstructing the sidewalk at his Depot Court shop, selectmen voted unanimously to approve the new license. Brown will be limited to 20 cars at any one time on the Rte. 3A property.

Duck pond repair

Selectmen awarded a $38,900 contract for the repair of the common duck pond to Jeffrey K. Morse of Marshfield.

Morse was the only qualified bidder for the project. Two other bids were disqualified because they did not contain the contractor's certification.

Morse's bid was $3,800 higher than the $35,000 budgeted for the project. Half of the amount was to be taken from the Warner Brothers donation to the town for the filming of 'Witches of Eastwick", and the remaining half was appropriated by town meeting. Selectmen said they will take an additional $3,800 from the movie donation to cover the cost of the project.

New committee

Selectmen are seeking five members to the police and fire station renovation committee. Despite town meeting's rejection of a proposed $1.1 million renovation project, selectmen said another committee should make an attempt to develop a plan.

Anyone interested in participating on this committee, including any members of the current study committee, should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

Selectman Burt Pratt, who voted against forming another study committee, promised board members he would tour the facility.

Recycling, a new way of life

turing on their islands, the Japanese are purchasing more and more recycled paper from other countries, he explained.

Scoutmaster Merle Brown said he thinks mandatory recycling will at last provide a workable solution to the town's solid waste problem.

"I predict it's going to work well," he said, adding that Boy Scouts in Cohasset have been recycling newspaper since 1948. Recycling will likely be a key element in community service projects undertaken by Eagle Scouts, Brown pointed out.

Brown told the Mariner he has visited a recycling center in Wilton, New Hampshire that serves three or four communities with a total population of about 10,000. The Wilton, N.H. facility recycles 60 to 70 percent of all the solid waste produced in the area.

Cohasset eventually will be able to achieve similar results, he predicted.

"I think once we get into it, people will realize it's a good idea," Brown said.

The board of health does not anticipate a great deal of resistance from citizens over the recycling issue, according to board chairman Sharon Becker.

"I think people will cooperate," she said. "It's got to happen."

Cohasset Savings reports growth this year

Cohasset Savings Bank reported continuing improved performance in 1988 with net income of $156,000, or $.16 per share, for the first quarter which ended March 31.

This performance reflects a 64 percent increase in net income over the results reported for the first quarter of 1987.

At its first annual meeting since converting to stock form in May, 1987, Donald E. Bates, President and CEO, told stockholders that net income for the first quarter of 1988 was $156,000, compared with $95,000 reported for the first quarter of 1987 and $161,000 reported for the fourth quarter of 1987.

In the income area, he said the only significant decline was in loan origination fees, a reflection of a change in the accounting for loan fees,which requires that such fees and certain direct loan origination costs be amortized as an adjustment of the related loan's yield over the term of the loan.

Deposits increased by approximately $3,000,000 in the first quarter of 1988, reaching an all-time high of $47,224,000 and reversing a decreasing trend that appeared for a period in 1987. Total assets also increased to a record of $62,650,000, and stockholders' equity to $12,178,000.

He noted there has been an increase in mortgage activity and the bank intends to participate in both residential and commercial real estate financing. In that connection, he reported the bank recently purchased $1,800,000 of commercial real estate loans originated by a Massachusetts commercial bank.

At the annual meeting, stockholders re-elected the five directors whose three-year terms expired under the staggered board plan. These directors are Gordon E. Flint, former Cohasset Town Treasurer; Arthur L Lehr, Jr., owner of the Lehr & Barnes Insurance Agency, Cohasset; Robert S. Pape, owner of Oaks Farm, Inc., Cohasset; Wayne H. Robbins, owner of Robbins Garage, Cohasset; and William B. White, Vice President of MLG Labs, Inc. Brian R. Wilkin, President and CEO of Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company, was re-elected Clerk.

Override ballot to contain eight questions part election ballot for May 14. Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said he proposed the fragmented ballot at the insistance of residents who called him in support of override options. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she had also been contacted by residents who claimed they wanted several choices on the Prop. 2 1/2 override proposal.

But school committee members Barbara Bliss and Diana Kornet pleaded with selectmen to simplify the ballot. After listening to the original proposal to include a separate $329,757 override for the school budget, Bliss asked selectmen, "And what do you plan to do with the school children next year if this is voted down?

"It seems to me that at town meeting, we voted the budget for fiscal year 1989. Essentially," she continued, "you're having town meeting all over again if you open up all the money articles again. If you start taking the budgets apart, it will be very confusing. And if the school budget is voted down, I would like to know what you suggest we do with the schools next year? "

As originally proposed to selectmen Tuesday night, there would have been five separate questions regarding a general override to Proposition 2 1/2. All five articles, Andrew explained, would effect the town's tax levy next year.

Article one will now include $659,911 for the town's operating budget in addition to $144,000 in special articles approved at town meeting. They include $2,000 for mosquito control, $50,000 for Cohasset Heights Ltd. environmental counsel, $12,000 for a dozer/grader and $80,000 for disposal of the town's solid waste to a private facility in Maine.

As originally proposed, article two would have given voters another option to approve only the four special articles; article three would have included $515,911 just for the town's operating budget; article four would have included $329,757 for the school budget only; and article five would have been for $330,000 which is the amount necessary to fund the town's operating budget, eliminating the amount needed by the school department.

After listening to objections raised by the school committee members, selectmen decided to proposed one general override question for a total of $659,911.

The second question on the election ballot will include all the capital outlay exclusion articles which include $70,000 for state-mandated revaluation; $16,000 for a school department truck; $20,000 for repair of the Osgood School roof; $15,000 for Cohasset's share of a five-town ambulance; $8,800 for fire department rescue tools; $68,290 for a leachate control study at the town's landfill; $18,000 for engineering fees relative to Cohasset Heights Ltd.; and $4,800 for engineering studies for Milliken Field.

"The simpler this is for the voters, the easier the educational process will be," Bliss said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted that the League of Women Voters will be publishing a comprehensive guide to the special election ballot which will be mailed to all registered voters.

Kornet questioned the procedure of the override vote, and inquired whether a May 14 defeat of a town meeting- approved article will necessitiate another special town meeting to remove that specific amount of money from the budget. Selectmen said that would be the complicated formula following defeat of an override issue.

"I have not had any feedback from anyone disastisfied with town meeting.," she stated. "And if you set up something so confusing, you're setting up a nightmare for us. I am very worried people will vote uninformed and that will create a nightmare."

Selectman Cliff Mitman proposed that selectmen approve three override questions - one for the $659,911 general override; another for $229,000 in capital outlay exclusion articles, and another for the debt exclusion articles.

But Executive Secretary Andrew noted that the four debt exclusion articles, which total $702,000, must be kept as four separate articles as required by law. They include monies for a front end loader; $70,000 for the renovation of two science labs at the high school; $32,000 for the purchase of a school bus; and $550,000 for the construction of a transfer station at the landfill.

Override ballot . . .

The final two articles, selectmen agreed, would be for the two separate sewer issues. Question seven on the ballot would amount to about $2.2 million for the construction of sewers if approved by the May 2 special town meeting. And the final ballot question would request $1.3 million for the modifications of the sewer plant if approved by the May 2 special town meeting.

Selectman Pratt asked whether the last two ballot questions could be crossed out in time for the election if voters defeat the corresponding articles at the May 2 special town meeting. Executive Secretary Andrew said he would check that with the town clerk.

around town

• Had a nice chat with Al Odermatt last week, and he wanted to let everyone know about an event that he feels didn't get the recognition that it should. Cohasset High School students have received special recognition for many sports and drama accomplishments this year, and there is a human service that they performed that Community Blood Chairman Al Odermatt feels deserves compliments. Each year the school conducts an annual Red Cross Bloodmobile in March. This annual event has occurred every year since 1976, and has always been most successful. It has been considered to be a gift of the graduating class to the town. This year it was conducted under the direction of School Nurse Carol Ciciotte and school volunteers on Monday, March 21st. Thirty-seven donors (thirty three students four teachers) participated and donated thiry four pints of blood. This represents greater than fifty percent of those eligible to donate. Al indicated that the town should be aware of this, and feel proud about it, and we are both now!!! Special thanks to everyone.

• Tony Fasciano returned from Florida recently, and reports that he had a grand time. Tony went with Scout Barbuto and Paul Buckley, and they stayed in Tampa at Scout's home. While they were there they had a chance to play golf at Inverness with our former fire chief Charlie Pipenbrink. Tony reports that Charlie looks wonderful, and he sure showed the men a super time.

• We hope that Ray Chase, Jr. is feeling much better as he reads this. He certainly has had a long bout in South Shore Hospital, but we hear that he is improving every day.

• The Senior Class has a nifty idea this year, and they wish to be sure that all parents are aware of it. Graduation invitations may be ordered at a cost of 60¢ each, and there is no limit on quanity. Send a check (made out to Cohasset High School) to Laurie Hammilton, 298 King Street, Cohasset, Mass. They are great mementoes to add to that Sr. Scrap book.

Outstanding sales in 1987 by these Cohasset Gallery 360 associates were recognized recently. The award winners included: Broker of the Year Shirley Tolan, John Gallagher, Ann Courtney, Principal Tom Hamilton, Ruth Keefe, Jane Crocker and Karen Kirkendall.

• The selectmen are searching for a new member for the conservation commission, after the resignation of James B. Cox. Now is your chance to do something for our town, call the selectmen's office if you are interested.

• Our town is certainly being well represented in skating circles. Witness two weeks ago when there was a Lower Cape ISIA Competition. Lauren Wood earned herself a second in figures, a second in couples, a first in team competition, a fifth in free style and a fourth in footwork. Carol Protulis skated to a second in figures, a third in footwork and a first in compulsory team, as well as a sixth in freestyle. Sisters Kim and Michele Ward both skated away with medals; Kim got a first in precision team, a third in team compulsories, a third in free style. Michele got a first in precision, second in freestyle. Marisol Perry, another member of the Cohasset contingent, got a first in team competition and a fifth in freestyle. Michele Buckley also represented Cohasset skaters, and received four medals for her efforts! She got a second in freestyle, a second in spotlight, a second in figures and a first in precision. This is the best that Cohasset kiddos have done in this annual event, we are sure to hear more from them in the future.

• If you are looking for a way to sell your arts and crafts, consider this. The South Shore Art center is looking for smaller items (jewelry, hand-painted silks, blown glass and art to wear are examples) for their gift shop. Sheila Casey, the head of the gift shop, is going to expand the shop and will sell your work through the shop. Call her at the Art Center, 383-9548.

• Amy Hobbs, Kristen Maki, Christine Rooney and Eileen O'Connor all report that they had a real learning experience when they visited State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray at the State House recently. They learned all about our state's legislative process.

• Congratulations to Katherine Barrett, Nahan Fiore, Catherine deLima, Marc Mecurio, John Maynard, Alexander Vanderweil, Sheldon Morgan and Kathleen O'Sullivan for their achievements in the Talent Search Program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University. John and Marc received a Certificate of Distinction; Kathleen, Nathan, Sheldon and Alexander receive state awards in addition to a Certificate of Distinction; and, Catherine and Kathleen both received State and Regional Awards. Great work! And, they are all seventh graders, watch for more from these kiddos!

• That is all the news from here for the week. Call with your news, should be a lot after the "world travellers" return from vacation.

CHL owner says disposal offer still stands

In an upcoming segment of "Cohasset Talks: Person to Pierson" commercial landfill owner Paul Barry said his offer to accept the town's trash "is still on the table."

The segment was filmed this week for the local cable television show.

Barry said his offer to accept the town's general refuse "is a $600,000 to $800,000 savings to the town, after 15 years, it will be a $10 million offer. In return I want an end to all litigation, and expansion for the landfill. We will submit a plan to the town and the state so we can hold the town to that 15 years."

Barry said despite his verbal and written offers made to town officials and voters at town meeting, there has been no response.

"I realize the magnitude of litigation (against Cohasset Heights Ltd.) It is the longest and costliest. As a result, a lot of good police work has been done on Cohasset Heights, and it is needed.

"But I think the problem is that it's very hard for someone to stand up and say 'enough is enough. Let's try to get along' and to sell the taxpayers about all the money they've spent over the years."

But Barry urged the town to work together with the landfill. Because the town originally allowed the landfill to operate 20 years ago, "they have a responsibility towards Cohasset Heights," he stated.

The landfill owner noted that a new charcoal odor control device will be installed and functioning at the landfill by July. A state-of-the-art groundwater treatment plant that will return contaminated leachate to drinking water quality should be constructed within three or four years.

In the meantime, Barry said he holds about $1.5 million in insurance and bonding for the plant's construction and there is a $350,000 revolving account in case the leachate has to be trucked away by the town in the event of the plant breakdown. There is also an amount of money, Barry said, set aside for closing costs and $10 million of insurance coverage should the town's reservoir be contaminated by the commercial landfill.

In his closing remarks to Wigmore Pierson, the host of the local cable news program, Barry stated that the town and DEQE have done an excellent job overlooking the landfill operation. "Everybody is working to make this as safe as a landfill can be," Barry said. 'But I want to see the town, the state and us work together to make this a sound, workable landfill so the citizens of Cohasset can be at ease. Engineering has been upgraded since the 1976 permit, so anything from here on can be safer."

Barry urged the town to reconsider his offer of free trash disposal, noting it did not make sense to truck the town's solid waste to Maine, when trucks arrive daily to Cohasset Heights from all over the state.

Stevenson elected to American College of Probate Counsel

Gordon M. Stevenson, Jr. of Cohasset, a partner at Warner & Stackpole, has been elected a Fellow of The American College of Probate Counsel (ACPC).

The ACPC, an international professional association of estate planning and administration lawyers, coordinates law reform at the state and national level and seeks to improve probate procedures and tax changes involving the transfer tax system and income taxation of estates and trusts.

Stevenson, a frequent lecturer on Massachusetts probate law and estate planning, is a member of the Boston, Massachusetts and American Bar Associations and has served as the secretary of the probate committees of both the Boston and the Massachusetts Bar Association.

Stevenson is a junior Warden of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and served as chairman of the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission. An educated vote

Close attention must be paid by the voters and taxpayers of Cohasset at the special election to override Proposition 2 1/2 approaches.

Each day seems to bring about new changes and more information about this very important issue. How this override proposal will affect our wallets and the services we have come to expect in Cohasset will be decided by our educated vote May 14.

That is the date for the special election to override Prop. 2 1/2. As it appears now, selectmen have decided to formulate a ballot with 19 separate questions.

The ballot will surely appear confusing and complex to the unaware and uninformed voter. But town officials, who by law are prohibited from spending public funds to advertise this override, are urging all voters to become familiar with the ballot issues.

The large number of questions were developed to give voters a greater variety of choices. Rather than approving or defeating one lump sum that would appropriate money for all town departments and special expenditures, voters will be asked to decide one issue at a time.

In other words, voters can approve the override to fund the $515,000 town budget deficit, but they may refuse to finance the $329,000 school budget deficit. Or vice versa.

Voters may decide the fire department really needs $8,800 worth of rescue equipment approved by town meeting, but they could negate the vote taken for engineering plans for Milliken Field by denying the $4,800 appropriation.

In other words, each voter has ample opportunity to approve or deny every expenditure the town is seeking beyond its budgetary limitations.

But all the while, voters should be fully aware that by denying certain appropriations, town services will be reduced. If, for instance, a majority of voters deny the override for the general town budget, there will be a reduction in services beginning in July.

If voters defeat the school budget override, teachers will be cut from the staff, class sizes will be expanded, and programs will be reduced in the school system. That will be the end result of a negative vote, and taxpayers should be knowledgeable of that.

Voters should also be aware that an override is not some new concept given to towns that should hide in shame for their inability to live within the meager means of Prop. 2 1/2. The hardiest supporters of this legislation insist that the override mechanism was originally created to assure communities they still have control over their own financial destiny.

Capital expenditures, increases in fixed municipal costs, staff salary increases and reductions in state and federal aid make it virtually impossible for any town to stay within the two and a-half percent budget increase each year.

As Executive Secretary Donald Andrew stated, "the bubble had to break." Many towns, including Marshfield, Hingham and Hull, have proposed overrides. And the financial advisors in surrounding towns have warned their time is drawing near.

We are still in control of our own destiny, but each decision we make will be difficult. Proposition 2 1/2 is not an easy law to live under, as we are discovering. But we do have options, and those options will be presented to us May 14 on the special election ballot. It is your responsibility to be informed and to make an intelligent decision on each of those options.

Family thanks officers for prompt help

To the editor:

Brenda Kehoe, 22, arrived home from work on Thursday, April 7 and was viciously beaten by her drunken, crazed boyfriend. As she got out of her car and started to the door she was attacked by him as he jumped out from the bushes. Her loud screams awakened her mother.

As Mrs. Kehoe approached the window, she saw her daughter being dragged by her hair down the driveway toward her car. He was trying to get the door open to get her in and was saying, "You're coming with me." Her mother dialed the police which protected Brenda from more physical harm or an attempted kidnap.

She was bleeding quite a bit when she was brought into the house, but the ambulance arrived quickly and took care of her wounds before taking her to the hospital.

Today her family is so thankful to have heard her. They hope anyone who hears screaming in the middle of the night does something about it. Her outside wounds are slowly healing although the inside wounds are going to take quite some time. With the help of her family and friends Brenda will surely make it.

Brenda was just getting prepared to compete in her first body building competition in May but had to back out because of her bruises. But you can bet she'll be prepared for the next one. She teaches classes in aerobics at Gold's Gym in Braintree ,and also works out there. She also waitresses at T.G.I. Fridays in Norwell.

We think of these things only happening in the city but it has happened in this small town of Cohasset where we believe it is safe.

I wish to thank John Conte of the Cohasset Police Department for his quick response for help Thursday, April 7. We also would like to thank Bobby Silvia and Bobby Protulis of the Cohasset Fire Department for the kindness and understanding they showed toward our daughter Brenda. The ambulance drivers who were from out of the town we would also like to thank along with all the other police who showed up to help us.

Thanks a lot to everyone. It was great knowing you were there in our time of need.

Ward Plan poses many problems

To the Editor:

I sincerely hope that you make known to the Citizens of Cohasset well before the Town Meeting of May 2 the answers to the following questions:

1. Will the Ward Plan be modified, changed, or curtailed, from the original report of April 1984 and to what degree?

2. Under the April 1984 Ward Plan, which requires septic systems (with only effluent being removed) some systems will require on-site pumps. What will be the criteria for the size of the septic system and for requiring the pumps?

3. Is it correct that the maintenance and operation of the septic systems will require an annual inspection (at the owner's expense), a biennial pumping out, and the additional expense of electrical power and maintenance of the pump if required?

4. When the original sewer plant was built, approximately 8% of the town was (and is) served. Yet the entire town has paid for the Wastewater Treatment Plant, the collector sewers, debt service, etc. except for a one-time charge of $5 a linear foot with a maximum for laterals. Now, one of the poorest sections of the town in evaluation is expected to pay annually in "user fees" the cost of the entire project, including "on-site repairs" for septic systems in other parts of the town.

5. Under the Ward Plan the pipeline to Hull is on the Old Colony R.R. Right of Way. If the Old Colony is reactivated, how is the sewer line affected.

There are many more questions to be addressed. The town deserves all the answers.

Curtis committee needs funds

To the editor:

This letter was addressed to the citizens of Cohasset.

Our Committee has now formally presented a proposal to the State Attorney General which provides for the Cohasset Housing Authority to use trust funds, and the developable portion of the George E. Curtis Estate, for needy, indigent, and feeble persons in the Cohasset area. Undevelopable ledge and wetlands would be sold to a Conservation Trust for fair market value.

At this time we would like to make an appeal for contributions to defray our Committee expenses which now exceed $3,000. Please make checks payable to the "Curtis Estate Action Committee" and mail them to any one of us, or, Nancy Snowdale, P.O. Box 242, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Conversation with Executive Secretary Donald Andrew

Information on Prop. 2½ override

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

This interview was conducted last week with Executive Secertary Donald Andrew regarding the May 14 special election ballot to override Prop. 2 1/2, and the reasons for ithe ballot questions. Although there have been major changes to the ballot since the interview (see pg. 1 story), we feel this interview gives residents a solid background on the decisions affecting this important town issue.

As of this moment, what can people expect to see on the May 14 special election ballot?

On the ballot there will be up to 19 questions. (This number was amended at Tuesday night's selectmen's meeting to eight separate questions).

Why that many?

We want to give them as many choices as possible. First of all, if we offered them a one-lump sum and say take it or leave it, they probably would say leave it. By doing it this way, we're allowing them to look at each individual part of the total override, and say, 'yes, I want this,' or 'no, I don't want this.'
On the override part, There are five questions. One is for the entire thing - everything we need for the entire override. There is the budget and four articles.

Be more specific. On the general override question, what does that include?

One will include the operating budget deficit which is $515,911, plus $144,000 from four special separate articles. These items don't qualify for debt exclusion or for capital outlay exclusion, because they don't meet the requirements.

And what are those articles?

$2,000 for mosquito control; $12,000 for the lease/purchase of a dozer-grader; $50,000 for legal fees for Cohasset Heights; and $80,000 for landfill expenses to Penobscot (energy facility).

What is the next question on the ballot?
(After Tuesday night's ballot change approved by selectmen, the following three questions will not appear on the ballot).

The next question will be $515,911 which represents only the budget deficit. The first question contained the four articles plus the budget deficit.

Why is it being done this way - a safety option to make sure we can cover at least the budget?

It just gives the voters another choice. Some of them may say, yeah, the operating budget is good, but we don't like those other articles.

Then what is the third question?

For $329,757 which is the total override necessary to finance the operating budget of the schools. Only the schools. People may say 'yes, I think we should override, but only for schools.'

What's next?

For $330,153 which is the operating deficit for all town departments except the schools. Here again, they can say, 'yeah, we want it' but not the schools.

And the next question?

For $144,000 for those four special articles alone. The board could vote (Tuesday, April 19) to put on more options.

It's good to give people options, but is this getting too confusing?

I don't think at this point it is. I think it can be explained very simply. If we get in any more questions, I think it will be too confusing.

These questions will be clearly written, so people know when they are voting for one question, they will be voting for the school deficit only?
(Once again, because of the ballot changes approved by selectmen, this override question affecting only the schools will not appear on the ballot).

Once they (selectmen) vote what to put on, I want to go right down the list and say a yes vote on this question means . . . a no vote on this question means . . . and right down the list.

So at this point, you personally don't feel this ballot is too confusing?

At this point I don't, with an explanation having been published and offered at public meetings.

Can an explanation be added to each article on the ballot?

No, an explanation will not go on the ballot. It will be worded carefully in the question, but we can't offer an additional paragraph on the ballot. The question will be worded so that it's plain what they're voting.

So we're relying on people to be educated about this?

Yes, we're relying on them understanding this, having read the mailing that will be going out by the League of Women Voters.

Back to the ballot, what are the following questions?

We go back to capital outlay exclusion articles. The first one will be the $70,000 for the tri-annual evaluation. That's state-mandated. We have to do it. We would like the exclusion from the levy limit because otherwise we have to cut the budget by that amount of money. And if we don't appropropriate that monev. which town meeting nas appropriated, the state will come in and do it and bill us through the cherry sheet - just deduct it from our state revenues. And we'd pay a higher price for them to do it.
Question 11 is $68,290 for the leachate control study at the town landfill.
Question 12 is for $18,000 for engineering services relative to Cohasset Heights.Question 13 is article 50 at the annual town meeting for the Milliken Field engineering services for $4,800.
Now we go into debt exclusion articles.

These are the articles with the bigger price tags, comparatively speaking?

Yes. Article 14 is for the highway department's front end loader at $50,000.
Number 15 is the science lab renovation at the high school for $70,000.
Number 16 is $32,000 for the purchase of a school bus.
The next article is for $550,000 for construction of the transfer station at the landfill.
Article 18 is related to article 16 of the May 2 special town meeting. It will be less than $1,800,000. That ballot question is for the Hull connection.
Article 19, which will be less than $1,300,000, is for enhancement to the Cohasset treatment plant.

These debt exclusion articles will not affect the tax base?

No, they won't affect the general base. They will just be the amounts to pay the debt and interest - will be excluded each year from the levy limit. Now as the debt gets less and the interest payments are less, the amount to be excluded also gets less. So when the debt is paid there is no more exclusion. It is only for the life of the loan.

How much would the life of these loans be?

Well, for the transfer station, you're talking about 15 years. That could be more. The school bus could be five years. The renovation to the science labs could be ten. The highway department truck could be five years. The sewer loans could be 30 years, although it's doubtful they would go for that amount of time. I think more likely it's 25 years.

Is this what we can expect from our town budgets from now on?

We're hoping with the budget override the base increases for next year. If one of these budget overrides is approved, say the one for the schools, or vice versa. Next year, that amount of money just goes into the base. It loses its identity each year. But for the current year, it would be for the purpose it's voted for, then it will lose its identity.

The next articles?

Question seven will be $16,000 which was voted under article 25 at the annual town meeting for the small pick-up truck for the school department.
Question eight is $20,000 for the repair of the Osgood School roof.
Question nine is $15,000 for Cohasset's share of the five-town ambulance.
Question ten is $8,800 for rescue tools for the fire department.

Are we going to be looking at an override each year?

I don't think we're going to be looking at budget overrides, especially if this one passes. This year we had an unusual situation with the increase in fixed costs - liability insurance and pensions. Now, if we continue to have such increases in these things, yes, we are going to be looking at future budget overrides. In view of the legislature's action on the health care bill, we certainly will. But I don't think we'll be looking at general overrides every year.

What about debt exclusions?

We're going to be looking at debt exclusions. Anytime we have a big capital expense, you can't absorb the debt and interest in the regular budget. It's going to have to be excluded.

Don't you think a lot of people think of an override as a dirty word?

It isn't. If you look at how Prop. 2 1/2 was enacted initially - you can increase your income by two and a-half percent but inflation is going to be much higher than that. Eventually, the bubble breaks and what you're saying is okay, we're going to bring in a little bit more money to meet our increasing expenditures. I think it's remarkable that any town has been able to get along without the added state revenues. For fiscal 1987, we had increased state aid of a quarter of a million dollars. This past year, we were looking at about one-fifth of that. Last year, we had a reduction.

What happens is voters do not pass the $144,000 in special articles. We won't have mosquito control, but what about environmental attorneys. What do we do?

We can't continue to fight at the level we have been fighting. One issue is now before the state supreme court, and if we don't have the money to appeal it, to fight and argue our side, what happens?

How can we not appropriate money for the landfill?

What it will mean is that we continue to use the landfill and fill it to its absolute fullest capacity. And we'll shutdown so much sooner.

And what about $68,290 for leachate control?

The state can force us to do that. They can come in and fine us. That's protection of our environment. That's the town's landfill - not a private landfill.

People should be aware that overrides are happening - not just in Cohasset but in many other communities?
The override was built into the law for this purpose. There are a lot of places that have had successful overrides, and a lot of places that have had unsuccessful overrides. But people have to realize that if we don't have this general budget override, services are cut back drastically.

King Street resident dreams of dump swap people wouldn't mind.

"Maybe," he continued, "the county could even come up with something more palatable than a jail. Maybe they could use the land for a county hospital or a facility for the state.

"Then again, the only thing the state is interesting in is finding land for toxic waste dumps."

Smith said he discussed the idea with his wife, Martha, but has not "ballooned-tested" the notion with other friends or town officials. "It's something I thought of two or three mnonths ago. I don't know if it was a dream," he laughed.

He hestitated about writing the letter to town officials. "If the town takes this letter seriously," he noted, "it would give them more leverage if this was kind of quiet for a while. But then again, I don't know how badly the town wants to pursue this idea."

Selectmen rejected Smith's suggestion Tuesday night as a "tongue-in-cheek."

Although none of the town officials had discussed the letter with its author, Selectman Burt Pratt, a longtime acquaintance of the King Street resident said, "I have never known him to be a humorist."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, Cohasset's liason with Norfolk County, said when Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall first suggested several years ago that towns consider accepting a jail into their community, Laugelle answered, "do you want me to live here?

"I told them then there was no spot in Cohasset for a jail."

In regard to Smith's suggested location, Laugelle answered, "you can't build a jail on top of that landfill. And believe me, the county never asked us to."

But in his letter to selectmen, Smith noted that "prestigious and historical towns of Concord and Plymouth have had prisons for many years. In view of the gains Cohasset could make in solving its larger problem, I would be more willing to have a prison here than a commercial landfill."

The 39-year Cohasset resident admitted it was an "interesting choice."

"All I know," the former school committee member stated, "is that this has been a wild goose chase just to get rid of the landfill. I was looking at a way to get the landfill out, but to get something for it.. For seven years this project has been pretty expensive for the town."

With the town's current fiscal crisis, Smith said his suggestion is "unusual, but it struck me as a Utopian solution."

Smith suggested in exchange for the prison site, the state should pay the town an annual fee. "Any other benefits the town could arrange would be a bonus," he added.

Brush burning banned May 1

May 1 is the last day of the year that open burning of brush is allowed in Massachusetts, according to Bruce K. Maillet, director of air quality at the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

"May is the beginning of our ozone season. Adding particulate from smoke to an already overburdened air mass must be avoided," Maillet said. The brush-burning season runs from Jan. 15 to May 1.

It's necessary to get a permit from local fire departments in order to burn brush. Fire officials are the best judges of when weather conditions allow for safe burning, Maillet said.

"Brush" includes cane, driftwood, and forestry debris. No grass, hay or leaves may be burned, although these materials make excellent mulch.

Do you feel like you're lost in a "big pond" at your present bank?

Bring your business BACK HOME to one of our friendly Neighborhood Offices!

The trend of bank mergers and loss of local control frequently leads to measuring the value of your business on the basis of the size of your account. Some banks require large deposits as a prerequisite for full, personal service.

This is especially unfortunate for small and medium sized accounts since they frequently need more attention and personal commitment than the large ones.

If you find yourself in this situation, make it a point to visit one of our local offices (one is sure to be near your home or business). We welcome your account ... whatever its size, and we'll treat you with the courtesy and respect you deserve.

We think you'll enjoy swimming over to one of our pads!

CHS baseball season opens with one-hitter

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Craig Mulcahy spun a one-hitter and Dave Schultz scored both runs as Cohasset High baseball team won its South Shore League opener, 2-0 over visiting Norwell last week.

Mulcahy (2-0 on the year), a senior righthander who has allowed one earned run in 14 innings, relied on control. He struck out four, walked three and had his no hitter spoiled by a single to center in the fourth inning.

Cohasset (2-0 record) took a 1-0 lead in the bottom half of the first when Schultz doubled and scored on Peter Sandblom's single to left. In the fifth, Schultz singled, stole second, took third on Jim Maguire's bunt and scored on a wild pitch.

Norwell's pitcher, Paul Flaherty, took the loss despite allowing just five hits.

Girls' Track

Jen Coley won four events and Tisha Wallace set a Cohasset record in the shotput (30'7 1/2") to direct the Skippers to a South Shore League victory over Middleboro, 78-58, at home.

Community center holds Silhouette Portrait Day

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor a Silhouette Portrait Day at the Center Wednesday, May 11, from 10 a.m. until 5:30 p.m.

Joy Ann MacConnell has been cutting silhouettes for 26 years. MacConnell shows are a fusion of art lesson and performance. She has you stand, tells you to relax and begins snipping away, explaining and answering questions along the way. She makes all her silhouettes free-hand, and the likenesses are guaranteed.

An appointment requires only 10 minutes, which includes one portrait sitting plus selection of mats and frames (optional). Framing will be done on the premises. Cost is $16.50 for two silhouettes; a right and a left profile. Additional copies are $4 each.

To make an appointment or for more information, call the Community Center at 383-0088, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A kennel where every dog is part of family

By George Franklin
Special to the Mariner

People who keep dogs as pets really love these animals. Dogs, in turn, give back all the love and affection they receive from their masters.

Sportsmen and hunters oftentimes develop a great love for their hunting and sporting dogs.

Steve "Crusher" Casey of Cohasset kept a kennel of hunting dogs. He and his son Paddy were great outdoorsmen, sportsmen and athletes. Unfortunately, Steve died in January 1987. He was a man who used to win all the athletic contests he entered except for his last bout was with cancer. Steve lost that one.

Prior to this tragedy, Steve had built a kennel to the rear of his house in order to take care of his own dogs. People started inquiring about whether they could board their pets while they were away from the area for any length of time. This led to the start of a dog boarding and grooming business. Steve's wife Mary pitched in and helped to get things rolling. They soon found the business was growing to a point that a larger kennel was needed.

A year or so prior to Steve's death he and son Paddy had been talking about just such a kennel. Now was the time to set things up.

Steve always thought that money should be invested and, what better commodity ot invest in than land. After all, as Steve often said, ' they aren't making any more of it."

Having already bought land just up the street from their home on Cedar Street, they proceeded to build a large kennel. Now they could accomodate a great number of dogs.

Since Steve's death, Paddy and his mother have been operating this kennel. Mary pitches in to handle the phone and all the paper work in the office and helps out in the other work also. Paddy has his hands full keeping the place stocked and caring for the dogs. In addition to this there has been installed an animal grooming service with a professional groom to see that these animals really look fine.

Each animal is looked after as though it were part of the Casey family.

Looking at the picture of Casey's Kennel with Paddy standing in front and, on his left, the inevitable fire hydrant which is loved by all dogs. To Paddy's right is six-year old Buck, a registered Labrador retriever. This dog is Paddy's personal pet and, wherever Paddy goes you will invariably find Buck trotting alongside his master.

In addition to all these kennel activities, Paddy has another business. This is Sea Duck Hunting. Paddy and the boat can be chartered for trips out to sea in a specially-built boat for people who like to hunt sea ducks. This is another live wire business of the Casey family.

A few years back, Paddy decided he wanted to have his own house, built to his specifications. What he had decided on was a solar heated house that relied on the suns rays for heat.

Paddy had a piece of land set in a clearing in the woods and really not visible from the road. There was a hill and the house is built into the side of this hill. This is a most unusual building and has all the comforts of a regular home.

With Mary handling the phone and office work at the kennel, and pitching in with other kennel chores, these people maintain a really busy work schedule.

Steve Casey was a world champion at the things he did-wrestling and rowing. Steve often said of he and his brothers - "rowing is our sport and wrestling is our business". Son Paddy seems to be following in the footsteps of his world famous father. Paddy's interest seems to be in business.

No better place than Casey's Kennel when you have to be separated from your best friend for any length of time.

Boosters continue 25 years of support

The Cohasset Boosters which began twenty-five years ago, continues to award all junior and senior high school athletes with award banquets, banners for the Sullivan Gymnasium (five additional will be hung this year) and spirit awards for each athletic event.

We support all athletes! The spirit awards are presented to the player in each sport, selected by their teammates, displaying the most "spirit."

Each May, the Boosters award the Nancy Sladen (one of the original Booster founders) and the "Hots Sullivan" Award (a man that dedicated many years to Milliken Field and to Cohasset athletic events) to a senior male and female athlete. Anyone that has played in two sports over a three-year period is eligible for these awards. Dedication, spirit, character and attitude are qualifications that will be considered.

Two or three times a year, award banquets are sponsored by the Boosters and recognition is made to all athletes. The Spring Sports Event will be a change in format. We plan to host a cook-out prior to awards Sunday, May 22 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the field in front of the high school. All spring athletes and their parents will be invited.

Participating in the Cohasset Boosters is a rewarding experience for either parent of our athletes. The objective is to reinforce CHS athletes and sports beyond the school department's responsibility. The Boosters have been fortunate with the results shown our athletes. They have been superb!

If anyone has an athlete or prospective athlete in the junior or senior high school that would be interested in becoming involved in the Boosters, please contact Jane Bishop at 383-6772, Eileen Corbett at 383-6467 or any member of the organization.

Cohasset High's Mike Anderson (21) is one of many athletes honored annually by the sports boosters.

Mixed bag for soggy weekend soccer game

Three Cohasset youth soccer teams recorded their first victories of the season last weekend in Coastal League play, a weekend town coordinator Larry Schultz termed "our best yet."

In boys' play, the Under 12-1 team remained undefeated, beating Scituate 4-1. The Under 10-2 team gave coach Paul Cotter his first victory, upending Middleboro 1-0. "Actually," noted Cotter, "that's only the second game I've ever seen"

Scoring for Under 12-1 were Tim Brister, who recorded Cohasset's first three-goal hat trick of the season, and Drew Pozatek. Coach Steve Endris also praised the play of midfielder Ryan Freeman and goalie Chris Rolandelli.

Under 10-2 were led by striker Burke Davis' goal. Davis may have scored a second when the Middleboro goalkeeper fell into the net with the ball, but the referee apparently missed the play, bystanders reported. Also playing well were defender John Lacks and goalkeeper Matt Conley.

Under 10-1 took a forfeit win over Hingham, whose coach decided his team couldn't play in the rain. Under 12-2 lost to Scituate 3-0, but had good efforts from Ben Redfield, David Nofnagel and Andy Collins.

Under 14-2 played to a tough 3-3 draw with Kingston. Chris Brown scored twice, John Maynard once, and Mark Mercurio turned in a top all-around effort. Under 14-1 was asked by host Halifax to postpone their match-up.

Under 16 came up short against Halifax, losing 7-1 with but 11 players. Linc Marsac scored, with an assist from Greg Noury. At midfield, Topher Henderson played well. The Under 19 squad had its match against Scituate postponed.

In girls' play, both Under 12 teams registered exceptional wins. Coach Nino D'Urso's Under 12-2 squad beat powerhouse Duxbury 3-0 using just 11 players -- all that D'Urso had available. Scoring for Cohasset were Corinna McMackin, Andrea Mercurio and Melinda Johansen. Leading the defense was back Molly Pease.

Under 12-1 gave coach Don DeMichele his first win, 3-0 over Carver. Scoring were Sarah Kirk, Renee Prisble and Emily Spencer.

Under 10-2 tied Kingston 0-0 as Julie Smith and Cara McKinney shared goaltending honors. Also playing well were defender Katie Anderson, midfielder Andrea Freeman, and striker Ashley Brister.

Despite a goal by Danielle Nohe, Under 10-1 lost to Pembroke 2-1. Goalies Jen Sullivan and Rory Winters, and stopper Lena Roukounakis led the defense, while Tammy Maitland assisted on the goal.

Both Under 14 teams were narrowly defeated. Under 14-1 dropped a 2-1 heartbreaker to Hingham, with the winning score coming on a penalty kick with a little time left. Heidi Lincoln scored for Cohasset, while back Rebecca Tosca played very well. Under 14-2 were edged by Plymouth 1-0.

Under 16 lost to Pembroke 3-0, although goalkeeper Laura Smart shut out victors in the second half. Also praised by coach Steve Hague were Nicole Barry and Cory DeSantis.

"This week showed the benefits of having a little practice under our belts," said coordinator Schultz. "Our teams are really coming together now. Most scores are close, and we're in just about every game."

This weekend's home schedule is as follows:

Saturday at Milliken: Girls Under 10-1 vs. Middleboro, 9 a.m.; Girls Under 10-2 vs. Hanover, 10:15; Girls Under 14-1 vs. Norwell, 11:30; Boys Under 10-2 vs. Plymouth, 1 p.m.; Boys Under 12-1 vs. Hingham, 2:15; Boys Under 14-1 vs. Plymouth, 3:30.

Sunday at Milliken: Boys Under 16 vs. Marshfield, 2:30; Girls Under 19 vs. Marshfield, 4 p.m.

The Boys under 12 Team 1 in the Cohasset Youth Soccer League.

Seedlings offered to school children

Elementary schoolchildren will be able to order their own springtime trees next week.

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle told selectmen that between 450 and 500 white dogwood and Northern Oak seedlings are available for order. The children will be given a notice and the 18-21-inch seedlings will be available.

The annual project will benefit the scholarship fund of the University of Massachusett's Stockbridge School of agriculture. The seedling program is sponsored by the Mass. Tree Wardens and the Arborist Association.

Reed's Ark

A geographer's view of the world

Geography studies the world as the home of humans.

When you close your eyes can you visualize the beauty of spring on the South Shore? The maples, even during the winter, keep a hint of red and the birch family hold their yellow leaves. Those relieve the greys and browns.

Then the red buds come along, the very delicate greens, the yellows of the willows, the early white of the pussy willows, and then the startling yellows of forsythia. By then, greens of a whole range of shades and intensities appear, and within a week or two there are cherry whites and pinks, maple florets, and of course, the yellow jonquils setting off the green of the renewed lawns.

As a startling display, the candelabra of the horse chestnut put a marker on the progress toward summer. Even when all the trees are green, there are subtle differences among them, along with striking contrasts between the dark evergreens and the lighter deciduous trees. (Had you noticed that even the larch) — which is a conifer like the white pines, but loses its needles in winter — is a lighter green than the other evergreens?

I won't even try to suggest the color changes that come with late summer and fall. There are other parts of the world that have a special beauty, but world travelers tell us that New England's seasonal leafing and losing is unmatched. When that is associated with the salt marshes, beach grass and roses, and the pallet full of blues, greens, greys, creams, and even blacks of the ocean, the South Shore is in a superbly beautiful spot.

There are many of us who have tried to live away from New England, or even away from the ocean, and have found their way back. I wonder how many painters, photographers, composers and authors find inspiration just being in places like the coastal Massachusetts?

Pardon me for being crass, but we know that our ocean and estuaries attract vacationers; that our harbors serve shell- and fin-fishermen; and that our schools and town governments are good.

How much money do the less tangible amenities bring in? How many people buy homes (bringing commissions to realtors and employment to builders) because of the beauty, as well as because of the access to jobs? How about film, art supplies, year-round restaurant meals, and rainwear that are sold? Our house lots are more valuable because of scenery. We have had friends from as little as 20 miles closer to Boston to marvel at the open nature of the landscape, at those very winding roads that we sometimes wish were easier to navigate.

Tied in with the attractiveness and the economic benefits, and with the breadth of mind that the ocean, fields, and woods can bring, comes the necessity for the care for those elements.

Our water supply is ample, but precarious, our swimming and fishing ponds and rivers are changeable, our fields and woods can be poorly developed, and our roads can be overcrowded.

Actually, we are in pretty good shape. Most builders have an eye for the landscape; the town boards do a good job of guiding growth; the bottle bill has made Rid Litter Days less necessary; town meetings have supported conservation commissions pretty well in their land acquisitions, and most of us are aware of the problem of hazardous wastes.

At the moment, it seems, the necessary balance is being maintained between growth and the attractive character (however you define that) of the South Shore. As pressure builds though, as the available lots are fewer, hillier, have less frontage, are wetter, then the decisions become harder, and the consequences more noticeable. Each added family or business means that we have to look more carefully at the way the town dump is managed, for instance, or at the age of the water pipes.

We make our own landscapes in more ways than we usually realize. The decision to allow cable TV meant more wire along the streets and more susceptibility to ice storms. A move away from cable toward satellite TV receivers might bring more large disk antennae into view. Maybe, though, more TV links and more home computers will allow more people to work at home and reduce the number of commuters and lighten the traffic on the roads. We are part of a network, and whatever we decide affects other areas of each town and of the region.

The improved consciousness of environmental problems that brought about the rather simplistic "Earth Day" of some years ago has not disappeared. Even people who looked askance at the "all development is bad" extremists are aware of the reality of carcinogens in insecticides, of the North River pollution and the difficulty of making a left turn onto Ocean and Plain Streets in Marshfield. That is one sign that the environmental ideas have become part of everyday thinking.

In addition, the concept of private conservation ownership of land, started by the Massachusetts Trustees or Reservations in the 1800s has become widespread. In Marshfield, the Dwyer Farm Committee comes most quickly to mind, but just in this state there are more than 50 other land trusts.

Nationwide, the number is upwards of 1,000. Most of those aim at education about the ecological network we live in and at the preservation of the natural diversity which makes an area so attractive a place to live. That very diversity is, in fact, essential to the health of the whole network.

We may fret under restrictions on our right to do what we will with our land, but we realize that we have no right to use that land so that it hurts others. As we create a landscape on our property, we set the view for years to come, not just for ourselves, but for the community. It's a major responsibility that we each have, as managers of a unit of a "townscape."

Local artist featured in art center exhibit

By Robin Surhbier
South Shore Art Center

Her career as an artist began in a bedroom closet of her childhood home in Brookline.

"I would hide my crayons in my closet so that my brother wouldn't tease me! At night I would return to the closet with my flashlight to draw with my crayons," reflected abstract painter Claffy Williams of her early childhood love for drawing. Today, a half century later, now an accomplished artist and respected professional in the visual arts, Claffy, (as she prefers to be known), will have her first one-person exhibit at the South Shore Art Center, a facility in which she put her energies to help it grow into a regional center for the arts.

The Center, at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, opens an exhibit of large-scale acrylic paintings by Claffy, April 27 with a formal reception for the artist, Sunday, May 1 from 4-6 p.m.

For the exhibit which will hang in the Bancroft Invitational Gallery, she has selected works which reflect mood and motion in nature, on canvas or on paper. A few figurative pieces depicting birds and other images taken from her extensive travels will also be shown.

The artist, who primarily works in the abstract, using shapes and colors to narrate a sense of space, first began her painting career working realistically in watercolor. After her college years at Sweetbriar where she majored in the practical arts, she put her work on hold while she raised her family and worked for 20 years as a docent in the Museum of Fine Arts education department. When she returned to painting, she enrolled in the Museum School courses and studied under nationally recognized artist George Dergalas. She soon found herself experimenting further with shapes and developed a real love for the abstract. Her body of work now primarily revolves around nature and addresses an inner spiritual feeling.

"I look at a rock and I ask myself 'what's in that rock,' and what is that rock saying? With that thought in mind I try to express a mood which has evolved from that rock," she explained. Working out of her studio overlooking Cohasset's Little Harbor, she often begins a piece with a few thumbnail sketches of shapes then progresses to the canvas or paper for the final piece. She works on several pieces at a time and always works on the floor rather than at an easel."I get a whole different feeling by working on the floor. It is more creative," she added.

"Strike Out," an acrylic on canvas by Claffy Williams.

Many of her pieces, she continued, are influenced by "my love of Oriental art where motion is expressed in Japanese and Chinese works." Claffy recently completed a commission of 20 works for the Anatole Hotel in Dallas ,where many of the works were inspired by the hotel's own collection of Oriental decorative arts.

Claffy came to the South Shore Art Center eight years ago when she and her husband moved to Cohasset. She immediately became a primary force in directing the destiny of the Center. "Artists," she said, "need to volunteer their time in their own organizations to get a sense of what it takes to run such a facility, and to give some professional input into an art organization." An artist, she contends, is the direct beneficiary of a successful visual art center and therefore needs to be involved in the success of that facility. Claffy points out that the South Shore Art Center is the only such organization in which artist-members are able to exhibit one work each month in the ongoing members' show. Her other professional endeavors include serving as a founding member of the Prison Art Project and as a member of the Copley Art Society's board of directors.

She has had numerous one-person exhibits including shows at the Madeline Carter Gallery in Brookline, the Marion Art Center, the Dover Gallery and the Art Complex in Duxbury as well as the Copley Society. She has recently been invited to exhibit in a group show at the Ariel Gallery in Soho in New York City and shows at the Horizons Art Gallery in Campton, N.H.

Williams has received numerous awards including ribbons from the South Shore Arts Festival, the All New England and Juried Exhibit, the Pembroke Art Festival, the Cambridge Art Association and the North River Art Association. She has been included in art-related feature articles by the local press and by the Boston Globe.

From her bedroom closet in Brookline to her studio on Little Harbor, Claffy has — through years of hard work, perseverance and maturing — achieved a level of artistic work which can truly be identified as her own thought processes.

The exhibit of her work at the Center continues through May 23 and is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For further information, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548. Programs of the Center are supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Eastern Edison announces rate changes

Eastern Edison Co. announced that is has completed a refund of $7.4 million to its customers as of March 31, 1988.

The refund had resulted in a 7 percent reduction in the average customer's bill for the last six months.

Eastern also announced that the State Department of Public Utilities has approved an increase in the purchase power cost adjustment (PPCA) portion of its bills. The purchased power increase will amount to approximately 1.5 percent of current bills.

In spite of the increase, the bill of an Eastern Edison residental customer using 500 kilowatt-hours of electricity will be $45.44, or $2.10 less than it was in January 1987, and 20 cents less than it was at the beginning of this year, the company said.

Customrs will not see the full effect of the changes all at once. The new charges are being phased in by pro-rating them over a one-month cycle of bills, beginning April 1.

The fluctuations are due to energy charges calculated on an estimated basis from Eastern Edison's supplier. When actual bills are rendered, an adjustment is made which sometimes results in a credit, and sometimes an additional charge to customers, Edison said.

Natural science center begins capital campaign

David T. Sargent, Senior Vice President for Rockland Trust Company has been named chairman of the Capital Campaign for South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell. The million dollar campaign will not allow for the building of a much-needed addition but also will strengthen the Center's endowment.

"South Shore Natural Science Center is a recognized leader in environmental education," noted Sargent. "Last year the Center served approximately 40,000 people from all over the region, and program requests were turned down due to limited facilities. This campaign is vital in helping the Center to continue serving the South Shore. I am delighted to chair such an exciting, worthwhile project."

Sargent, a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College and Williams College School of Banking, is coordinating the overall campaign which will be "kicked-off" at a special gala on May 5. A resident of Hingham, Sargent serves the Center as a Trustee and member of the Executive Board as well as being active in a number of other charitable and professional organizations.

The Center also announces the appointment of other key leaders for the campaign. Eric Anderson II, president of Anderson Insulation, is chairing the Gifts in-Kind Committee. In addition to serving on the Science Center's Board of Trustees and as Chairman of the Building Committee, Anderson is a member of the Board of Directors of Plymouth County Wildlands Trust.

Garden Craft President Randy Wright and environmental planner Pam Vinal, both residents of Norwell, co-chair the Special Gifts Committee. In this capacity, they are responsible for attracting major gifts from businesses and individuals. Both Wright and Vinal serve on the Executive Board for the Natural Science Center.

Wright, who received his degree from UMass in Landscape Architecture, also serves as an overseer for South Shore Hospital and on the Board of Directors of the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association.

Vinal, recipient of a masters degree in Forestry and Environmental Studies from Yale University, is employed by BSC Engineering. She is also a member of the Society of American Foresters, Society of Wetland Scientists, and Norwell Open Space Commission.

Marshfield resident J. Leonard Bicknell heads the Committee for General Gifts. A principal of Alvin Hollis & Company, Bicknell is responsible for securing pledges and contributions from South Shore families and individuals. In addition to serving on the Center's Board of Trustees, Bicknell is active in Marshfield's Ventress Library development and is a member of the Board of Directors of South Weymouth Savings and the Better Home Heat Council. He also is an overseer for South Shore Hospital.

Also named to the campaign's key leadership is Gaylen Litchfield of Norwell. A CPA and UMass alumna, Litchfield was Controller for the Museum of Science in Boston for five years as well as being past treasurer of the Natural Science Center. In addition to being a member of the Board of Trustees, she serves as treasurer for the Capital Campaign.

It is also announced that Chairman for Communications for the Capital Campaign is Susan Donahue of Norwell. A marketing consultant for Mobil Oil and Stop & Shop, Donahue has extensive experience in marketing and public relations. A member of SSNSC Board of Trustees, she also serves on the Board of Directors for Talking Information Center for the Visually Handicapped. In addition, she is director of the Cushing Center in Norwell, an Incorporator of Advisors Bancorp and an overseer for South Shore Hospital.

South Shore Natural Science Center is a non-profit environmental education center serving the South Shore region with natural and cultural history programs, activities and resources for all ages.

MARRIAGE ENCOUNTER WEEKEND — May 13-15

Every married couple deserves some time to get "off the treadmill." Register by calling 888-4067.

GATE OF HEAVEN — SOUTH BOSTON is celebrating its 125th anniversary with a 'dinner dance' on Saturday, May 14, at Hynes Auditorium in Boston. For ticket information call 268-3344.

CARDINAL'S APPEAL - Special collection will be taken the weekend of April 30-May 1.

LDS sponsors song and dance

Showtime Company — a lively musical revue of song and dance by students from Ricks College, Rexburg, Idaho, now touring in the East, will entertain May 5 at the Weymouth South Junior High School auditorium, 280 Pleasant St., in Weymouth from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

The event is being sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints of Hingham, Foxboro, and West Bridgewater. The public is welcome. A $1 donation is required at the door, or call Polly Doggett at 383-1847 for more information.

St. Mary's services

A sharing and support meeting for those dealing with grief and loss will be held at 7 p.m., April 21 at St. Ann's Church Hall on Lewis and Somerset Streets in Hull. The meeting is sponsored by St. Mary of the Assumption Parish.

St. Mary's Sodality holds a Day of Recollection for all women of the parish at 1 p.m., April 23 at St. Ann's Church. The afternoon concludes with a coffee hour and celebration of Mass at 4:30 p.m.

A six-week training program for people to learn how to visit the housebound (by phone, by mail or in person) will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesdays from May 5 to June 9 at St. Mary's Church, Green Hill. Workshops will be coordinated by Leo Donoghue from the Development of Parish Social Ministries of Catholic Charities. For information, call Joan Cellini at 925-0680.

Religious education continuation forms for next year must be returned to the Religious Education office at the rectory by April 30. Also, general registration for all children (first graders in 1988) will take place before and after the 4:30 p.m. Mass, May 7 at St. Ann's Church, and after both Masses at St. Ann's, on May 8.

CANVASS NEWS:

Seventy pledges out of 133 have been received to date totaling $47,378. Of the 70 pledges reported 41 (60 percent) chose to increase their pledge. Many families have doubled their pledge from last year. The results are very encouraging.

We have sixty-three parish members who have not been seen or who have not made final gift decisions. It is clear that the potential exists among this group to complete the Canvass successfully and reach our goal of $82,000.

We must all share the commitment if we are to pay our own way and balance the budget. Let this be the year that we do what we say we should do. So far, more than half of us have given more to reach the goal of a balanced budget. Let's finish the job!

Housing plan a 'blight' to town

By Thelma O'Brien
Mariner staff

"Gimmick apartments" is what Robert Sturdy calls the state's idea of affordable housing.

The planning board chairman therefore has no use for the Deck Point 128-unit complex planned for 16 acres on Route 3A, more or less opposite the north entrance of King Street.

"The project would be a blight on the landscape. It is totally atypical. It would be detached neighborhoodwise. It is a highly concentrated development. I call it a project."

Deck Point developers have said that 30 percent of the residences will be priced to suit state affordable housing standards, thereby making the project eligible for state permits and some money. They will seek approval for the development under state sanctions that bypass local zoning laws.

The site is zoned for light industry and is bordered by, among other things, Cohasset Heights Landfill, Webb-Norfolk Conveyor and Whitney Hill Technology Center.

(Coincidentally, the health board has sent a letter to Deck Point developers giving them until May 1 to either fill in or fence two large holes dug late last

May 14 ballot set

After conferring with town counsel, selectmen decided to keep the same ballot they drafted last week for the override special election.

However, the May 14 ballot will now contain seven questions, with the $2.2 million sewer project combined into one question.

In addition, selectmen scheduled a June 13 special town meeting, in the event an override question is defeated. If any amount is defeated at the May 14 special election, voters must return to town meeting to subtract that amount from the town budget.

Regarding the May 14 election ballot, Town Counsel Richard Henderson advised selectmen to

Two sewer articles will make or break Monday night's special town meeting.

The question of whether voters will approve the long-awaited Hull pipeline connection is expected to garner the limelight at the May 2 meeting.

Voters will be asked to put up $2. 2 million for construction of a pipeline into the Hull sewage treatment plant. That amount will also include the actual sewering of various neighborhoods.

If voters approve the project, it will have to be reaffirmed on the special election ballot May 14. The entire amount will require a Prop. 2 1/2

Developer proposes 12 stores at Rte. 3A plaza

By Jane Lane

Developer Donald Staszko presented plans last week that would add 12 more stores to Cohasset Plaza, and about $25,000 in tax revenue to the town.

The single-level brick building would be situated next to the Super Stop and Shop building on Rte. 3A. The rear of the stores will be hidden by a six-foot high berm topped by white pine trees along Sohier Street.

Entrance to the mall stores will be from the present access into the plaza from Rte. 3A, according to Atty. Charles Humphreys, who represented the developer. Although additional access from Sohier Street is an option, the developer does not intend to consider it, Humphreys added.

The preliminary plans were presented to planning board members last week to determine whether they will require more landscaping in return for less parking spaces. The current plan calls for 266 parking spaces for the 12 stores, although only 231 are required under the town's bylaw. The planning board can waive a third of the parking spaces in return for more landscaping on the lot.

Roof repairs

Based on two estimates received by local contractors, selectmen recommended that $4,000 be specified in Article 5 of the May 2 special town meeting warrant.

The article requests an appropriation for the replacement and repair of the roof on the town hall. Two local contractors submitted estimates to selectmen, detailing how much money would be needed to repair and replace a section of the slate roof.

Although the two estimates were about $2,200 each, selectmen decided to increase the amount in the event there are unforeseen problems in the ridge section of the roof. If the money is appropriated by town meeting, a bid process will not be necessary. Contracts for the work will be requested from contractors.

Theatre cooperations

Neighbors gave high marks for cooperation to Ted Kasses, the new producer of the South Shore Music Circus.

Kasses attended this week's selectmen meeting to request an entertainment license for the Sohier Street estblishment.

In the past, neighbors have complained about the high level of noise eminating from the tent theatre, the foul language used by some of the performers, and the late closing times.

Kasses, who is beginning his first season as producer, explained that most Saturday night shows will start at 8 p.m., although a few will begin at 9 p.m. But they will conclude by 11 p.m., he stated.

In an effort to control the noise and traffic problems, Kasses said Sunday shows will now begin at 7:30 p.m., a half-hour earlier than previous years.

The season will begin June 24 with a benefit performance for the South Shore Art Center. The regularly-scheduled performances will continue from June 25 to Sept. 18, when Kenny Rogers will appear at the Sohier street tent theatre. Although the season is longer this year, Kasses explained in September there willl be weekend performances only.

Janet MacLure of Sohier Street praised the new producer for cooperating with neighbors. When she asked whether any "foul" comics will be back to the Cohasset stage, Kasses noted that Joan Rivers will be making a return appearance this summer.

The producer said he is working to reduce noise levels at the theatre, by turning amplifiers a certain way and changing the brand of speakers.

Selectmen will ask Police Chief Joseph Kealey if a patrolman should be stationed at the end of Sohier Street on Rte. 3A for traffic control after performances. If he recommends the patrolman, selectmen said the Music Circus would have to provide one.

Boat excise bills due

Boat Excise Tax and Harbor User Fees are due to the Treasurer's Office by the close of business June 1, 1988.

Non-payment of the user fee will result in forfeiture of mooring rights. Non-payment of the state excise tax will result in a fine of $20 or 20 percent of the vessels assessed value, whichever is greater.

Documentation of your boat registration is required before the Town Collector will issue a decal for your boat.

Hazardous collection

A regional household hazardous waste collection for residents of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, and Scituate will be held on Saturday, May 14, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The site of the collection will be in a different town each year. This year's collection will be held in Hingham at the Station Street parking lot.

A list of substances being collected will be published next week. Meanwhile, residents of participating towns are asked to set aside toxic household substances, including asbestos, motor oil, and aerosol cans.

Appointment delayed

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt wants to continue the discussion about the school committee's two representatives to the Milliken Field Study Committee.

The school committee forwarded the names of Russ Reidy, the newest member of the committee, and Clark Chatterton, athletic director, for the Milliken study committee. But Pratt objected, noting that Reidy had already been a member as the school committee's non-school member. Chatterton was a resigned member of the former Milliken study committee and does not qualify as a "non-school" member, he added.

Selectman James Gallagher said he worked alongside both men and found Reidy knowledgeable and energetic. Chatterton, he said, was a "walking encyclopedia" regarding the school's playing field.

Selectmen said before they aprove the school committee selections, they should allow Selectman Pratt time to discuss his concerns with Wayne Sawchuk, chairman of the Milliken study committee.

New Member

By unanimous vote, selectmen and members of the Cohasset Housing Authority named Joanne Young-Nawn to the housing authority.

Nawn, a member of the Cohasset Fair Housing Committee and director of the Quincy and Weymouth Housing Authority Support Services, will fill the unexpired term of Kathleen Conte. Conte resigned from the authority March 1.

Selectmen praised the three other candidates who applied for the position, and hoped there would be other town committee vacancies they could fill. The other candidates included Leo Happenny, Maria Plante and Stephen Bobo.

Local property taxes due May 2

The second-half fiscal 1988 tax bills were mailed March 31. This payment must be received in the collector's office on or before Monday, May 2 by 4:30 p.m.

For any payments received after May 2, interest will be computed at 14 percent from April 1. Community Garden Club prepares flower show

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

As more than 200 Community Garden Club members toil, others are eagerly anticipating an outbreak of spring fever.

For the first time in recent memory, Cohasset's contingent of community gardeners are preparing a spectacular standard flower show.

Entitled, "Genesis," the show will be held within the new South Shore Art Center galleries, and will be open to the viewing public the afternoon of May 10. In addition to the floral arrangements, exhibits and educational materials, the show will feature dozens of unique and award-winning floral designs that compliment and interpret the surrounding artwork by local artist Claffy Williams.

According to Mary Larson, general chairman of this event, it has taken a year to prepare for the show. Unlike any other type of flower show, a standard flower show is highly regulated, and requires minute attention to detail according to strict guidelines and criteria.

"Everything in this show has to be precise," she commented, breathless at the thought that May 10 is only days away. "It's a much more elaborate show than anything else we've done recently. There are a required number of exhibits, and a formality of schedule you won't find in other shows."

Such strict regulations encompass a standard show because it is not simply a local or regional event. Nationally-accredited judges will attend the event and judge each exhibit according to a number of established rules. Awards are national honors, Larson explained, and denote those arrangements which meet and exceed their criteria for excellence.

"In other words," she noted, "someone may think one arrangement is better looking than another. But the award-winning exhibit must meet every one of the criteria set forth by the judges."

For instance, in the Division I exhibits, judges will view each arrangement according to a number of requirements, including conformance, design, color, creativity, expression and distinction. Other classes within that division will be judged according to separate criteria.

"It is complicated and very precise," Larson stated.

To ensure that all exhibits are created fairly and equally, garden club members entering the competition must complete the actual exhibit the day of the show. Early on the morning of May 10, exhibitors will arrive at the art center and begin their arrangements. Although the flowers and plants have taken months to cultivate, the finished products will be prepared only hours before the judging begins.

In addition to the show's objective of visual beauty, the standard flower show will include the club's national and local educational efforts.

Mary Larson, (l), program chairman and Tish Grinnell, theme chairman, prepare some of the arrangements that will be viewed at the May 10 standard flower show at the art center. (Alan Chapman)

Kornet begins last term in office

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Diana Kornet says this will be her last year as a member of the Cohasset School Committee.

Before she leaves, however, the 10-year veteran and committee chairman has some things she wants to accomplish.

"The biggest thing I plan to do is a long-range study of school needs," she said.

"We have to formulate a plan for when the (enrollment) numbers have been reduced to such a low point that we will have to begin considering options of consolidating schools and positions."

Kornet explained that at some point the school system will have to abandon the Osgood School and move students to Deer Hill School.

"We need to plan for when that is the obvious step," she said. "I think we certainly want to preserve the quality of education we believe in so strongly.

"I like the fact that Deer Hill School has a path to the high school and a nature walk to Osgood School. It's a lovely idea.

"I'm envious of the campus set-up that Duxbury has," she commented. "They have the swimming facilities and everything seems to radiate from there. It's all centralized. I think even their town library is there.

"We have a large chunk of land adjacent to Deer Hill, and although we'll never be able to be completely contiguous," she said, "it would be very nice if maybe we could do something to enhance what we have."

For the present, Kornet said the school committee feels a sense of relief.

"We've tied up a lot of loose ends," she explained. "We've negotiated a teachers' contract ."

The relief won't last long, however, because the school committee is gearing up for a Proposition 2 1/2 override.

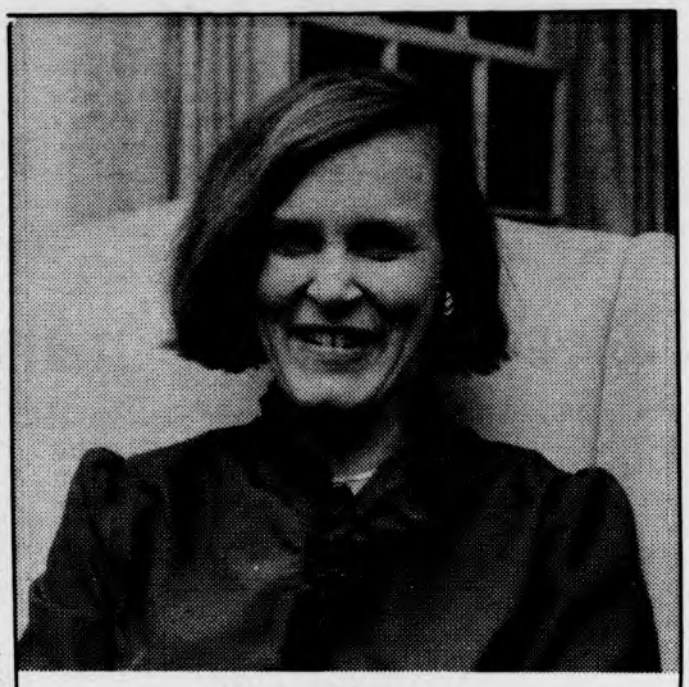
Kornet said the school committee and school community would be devastated if the override does not pass.

"We risk losing a teacher at every level, kindergarten through grade 12, and more positions too," she said.

"We try to keep our class sizes at about 20 to 25. At Deer Hill it's acceptable to be just a little higher, 24 to 27.

"But it would be a real blow if this doesn't pass. We would have class sizes of 27 and 28 kids in first grade and all the way up."

Kornet explained that 80 percent of the school budget is devoted to salaries, and beyond that there is very little room to cut.



Diana Kornet

Since the establishment of Proposition 2 1/2, schools run out of materials and supplies in April and May.

"If we have to cut the budget, it would come out of salaries," she said.

That is not something Kornet wants to do.

"I have great respect for our teachers and staff," she said. "I used to teach sixth grade science in Hanover, New Hampshire, so I've sat in their seats.

"I know what it's like to be a teacher."

Kornet said she hopes to retain CHS' mix of young, enthusiastic teachers and experienced educators, because the combination keeps the teachers vitalized.

New faces, such as that of art teacher Colleen Lucas, have recharged students' spirit as well, and Cohasset students are beginning to be recognized for their artistic talent as a result.

If the override fails, many of the younger non-tenured teachers will go, Kornet warned, even though the committee tries to cut where that cut will be least harmful.

Although she regards her work with the school committeeas a rewarding experience, Kornet said, "it's time to share it; it's time to give fresh ideas an opportunity."

She said there are many volunteers with the PSO

Stroke Club is a good first step for patients

By Mary Ford
Mariner correspondent

November 7, 1982, is a day that Norwell resident Howard J. Burnham will never forget. That's when Burnham collapsed with a heart attack while attending church at St. Stephen's in Cohasset.

"I had almost recovered," says Burnham, an artist and member of the Norwell Handicapped Commission. "Then I had a stroke right in the hospital."

So for Burnham, the last five years have been a struggle: a struggle just to walk, to talk, and to paint. But he, and about two dozen other stroke victims, don't know how to quit. And to get the encouragement, information and support they need, the group attends monthly meetings of the North River Stroke Club, sponsored by the Easter Seal Society, in the Norwell Council on Aging Center, 293 Pine St.

"It's (Stroke Club) a good way to take that first step," says Joyce Nicholas, a medical-social worker who coordinates the group. "A lot of times they (stroke victims) have a tendency to isolate themselves.

"Here they get mutual support, in addition to information about strokes."

The club, which is free of charge, draws people from Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset, Kingston, Pembroke, Hanover, Rockland, Quincy, Braintree, Hull and Marshfield. And in addition to occasional trips out to lunch or having a cookout, the group often hears speakers from fields like speech and physical therapy.

Getting Together

And sometimes they get together just to talk and gripe about their situations.

A simple item, like shoes which most of us take for granted, can cost a handicapped person anywhere from $200-to-$600. While the braces attached to the shoes are often covered by insurance, the shoes which have to be specially made, are not.

For Francis Iacabucci, 77, of Pembroke, taking care of her husband Tony, a stroke victim, isn't easy.

"The other day I tore the muscle in my arm," she said. "At 11 p.m., I have nobody to help me put him (Tony) to bed."

Often couples attend the Stroke Club, says Nicholas, because even the unafflicted partner needs the support.

"I'm amazed at the people I see," adds Nicholas. "It's a difficult struggle and I really admire all these people (stroke victims) who come out and try to help each other."

Anna Krukonis of Quincy, who has regained about 90 per cent of her mobility since her stroke, hopes that information about the Stroke Club will encourage more people to come.

"I see them (afflicted) all the time," she says. "Out of 10,000 people in Norwell alone, there are more than just the few who attend here."

Club members also feel that transportation problems discourage some from attending.

"We try to hook people up within the club," says Nicholas. "And others get rides from family members."

The Easter Seal Society runs 30 Stroke Clubs in Massachusetts, as well as providing some home health care, swim programs for handicapped adults and children, and nursing and social services. For more information about Stroke Clubs and to be added to the mailing list, call the Easter Seal Society at 1-800-922-8290.

The North River Stroke Club usually meets from 1 to 3 p.m. on the third Tuesday of the month, but will have its next meeting on May 24, due to a scheduling conflict.

At the meetings, there's a lot of smiling and even a few jokes, as the survivors seem happy to be alive.

"The first 100 years are the hardest," says Francis. "After that who gives a damn."

Recreation programs . . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor golf lessons for beginner and intermediate levels starting Monday, May 16, from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. for beginner level class, and Tuesday, May 17, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., for intermediate level instruction.

Patrick MacNamara, assistant pro at the Cohasset Golf Club, will be teaching the five-week, one-hour per week session.

To register call the Cohasset Recreation Department office, at 383-6791. The fee for the five-week program will be $25 per person, payable by check, to "Town of Cohasset". Participants will need a couple of irons, putter and a driver for lessons. If you do not have access to clubs, please indicate this at the time of registration.

Classes will be held for the most part, on the back lawn of Town Hall, directly behind the parking lot and new addition. Classes will not meet if weather is inclement, and if you should be in doubt on any given evening, if classes will be held, you may call the Recreation office to confirm.

MacNamara has been assistant golf pro and Cohasset Recreation Department Golf Instructor for the past three years. Classes will be limited in size to afford more individual attention, and non-residents will be accepted to the program on a space available basis.

SUMMER SOCCER CAMP

Again this summer, the Cohasset Recreation Department has contracted North American Soccer Camps, Inc. to conduct a half-day, week-long soccer clinic, which will begin Monday, August 22, through Saturday, August 29, at Deer Hill Field.

The program will be from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, and the Saturday time will be announced during the week. The cost for camp is $80 for the first child in a family, $75 for the second, and $70 for the third or more in each family.

Each participant is also provided a camp T-shirt and soccer ball. Parent coaching clinics will be held on two-evenings during the week and exact days and times will be announced.

North American Soccer Camp's instructors are brought to this country from Great Britain expressly to conduct youth soccer programs throughout the United States during the summer months, offering top flight instruction to youth aged 7-18 years of age.

To register for this program, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible. A $25 deposit will be necessary at the time of registration and the balance will be due by June 1.

Registration is necessary now in order that we be assigned the proper number of coaches to keep a 1-15 coach/participant ratio. Also, the registration form on the back of this year's N.A.S.C. brochure must be completed in full for each child.

KICKBALL PROGRAM

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct a five-week kickball program for children in grades K-3. The program for both girls and boys will begin on Monday, and Thursday, May 2, and May 5. Kindergarten and first grade groups will meet Monday's, and second and third grade groups will meet Thursday's, from 2:45 (directly after school), until 5 p.m.

The program fee will be $8 per child for the five weeks and checks made payable to: Town of Cohasset, may be brought to your child's first session. Pre-registration will however be necessary by calling the Recreation office at 383-6791.

A 50 percent discount of fee will be offered for second and subsequent children registering from the same family. Parents should send a note to school with their child allowing them to stay after school for the program.

Please indicate on the note the name of the classroom teacher. Children who do not bring in the note will be sent home as usual.

three years before winning approval to build the Super Stop and Shop, said a complete site plan will be prepared by the second week in May. If the plan is approved, the developer said construction could begin as early as July.

The developer now pays $3,000 in taxes for the property which includes a small house and the remnants of another home that was demolished in a fire last year. He expects to pay about $28,000 for the property containing the 12 stores when a new tax rate is set.

He currently pays $75,000 a year in taxes on the Stop and Shop property, and expects to bring in about $113,000 when the entire project is completed under a new tax rate.

"That's a huge increase in taxes on the same piece of dirt that will not add any students to the school system, or a fireman or a police officer to the town's budget. It's pure revenue," he stated this week.

Staszko told the board the tenants will include a mens clothing store, a women's clothing store, a bank, a jewelry store, a dry cleaner and an interior decorating shop. Although he had inquiries from two fast food chains, Staszko said he never considered the offers.

Project architect is James Kelleher of Axiom, Inc. of Hanover. When asked what projects he had previously designed, Kelleher told the board he was architect of the Merchants Row shopping area on Rte. 53 in Hanover, in addition to the

□ The members of Cohasset Cub Scouts Den 8 recently spent an afternoon on a special "spring cleanup/conservation project. They went to Sandy Beach and picked up literally barrelsful of broken glass, bottles and trash. The boys were deservedly proud of their work, particularly since the freezing cold winds made the job all the more difficult. It turned out more like a "winter" outing! Those participating in the project were: Todd Harrington, Simeon Ketchum, Jason Murphy, Ryan Sawchuk and Gregory Schultz.

□ In case you didn't get a card in the mail, The Linen Chest has made some changes! Walpoles has left Cushing Plaza, and "Fleuri" has taken over their space and selected inventory. "Fleuri" is the new name, but the traditions remain the same. . . "fine linens and quality fashions for the home as well as the personalized service that has been the mark of the Linen Chest for over twenty years. Be sure to go in and see their wonderful new set-up, its so nice!

□ Happy birthdays go to two special people, Jim and Liz Kuhn. They were both born on the same day (but not the same year) and we hope their day is a special one indeed.

□ Not all was quiet at Deer Hill School in the students' absence, just ask Bob Barrow! While he was up there doing his work, he noticed a cat run down the hall. He followed her, naturally, and she headed for the auditorium. Bob couldn't believe his ears when he heard small mews, and found two brand new baby kittens! No one knows how the mother cat got into the school to have her babies, but its too bad the kiddos weren't in session to see them! on't worry though, they are in good hands. Bob brought them home to his house, and will probably give them away when they are big enough. See him if you are interested as they certainly should be "smart cats".

Ruth Keefe

Claire Shields

□ For the second month in a row the Gallery 360 Cohasset office is receiving congratulations on being "home" to the Gallery 360 Broker of the Month.

Honored for the month of February, Ruth Keefe, who has been associated with the Cohasset office for the past 10 years. "Boo" has been a consistent multi-million dollar broker and has won many sales awards.

Claire Shields, who has enjoyed an eight-year association with the Cohasset office took the top honors for March.

In addition to her numerous sales awards Shields is the Past President, twice, of the Eastern Massachusetts Division of the Women's Council of Realtors.

□ Michael Greiner, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Dewald of Nichols Road, was initiated into the University of Massachusetts chapter of Phi Alpha Theta at ceremonies held April 5.

Greiner is a member of the Class of 1989 at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He graduated from Cohasset High School in 1986.

□ There is a "search committee" around town, perhaps you can help them in their quest.The Rotary Club Field Hockey Trophy is missing, and they would like to get it back on its honorary roost in the trophy case at the high school. The trophy had every winner listed from 1951-1975, and is a grand one. If you know the where abouts, call Clark Chatterton at his office, 383-6103.

□ Congratulations go to Jane deLima, who really deserves it! Jane was recently informed that she won the National Merit Scholarship. The whole country is eligible, and over one million students applied. Out of this, 16,000 won, and our own Jane was one of them. Now she faces her next "test". . . she got into both colleges that she wanted to go to, Williams and Amherst, and has to make a decision. We know that you will make the right one, Jane, good luck!

□ Don't forget that this Sunday is the Walk for Hunger, in Boston. You can register right up until 1:00 that day, so be sure that, if you are able, you do!! We sure see a lot of walkers around town!

□ Mark Sunday, May 15th on your calendar, that's the day that State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray will hold her annual fundraiser. It will be the annual brunch, under the direction of Lillian Murray, to be held at the South Shore Country Club. The time is 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The ticket salespeople will soon be in touch, or watch for their names to appear in the paper.

□ Hats off to Wayne Sawchuck, who donated a Xerox copier to the fire department. We certainly need more willing contributors to do things like that for Cohasset, and his donation is appreciated.

That's the news from here, be sure that your remember to call in your latest event.

Summer town meeting to decide jet ski ban

In response to complaints by several neighbors, selectmen said town meeting can decide if jet skiing should be banned in Cohasset.

There should be a town meeting in three months to approve a labor contract that will be finalized within the month, according to Town Counsel Richard Henderson. Selectmen said an article to ban jet skiing could be included in that warrant.

Several residents, including Edward Long of Nichols Road, detailed their opposition to jet skiing in Little Harbor. Now that the inner harbor is used by passive boaters for rowing and canoeing, it is disturbing and dangerous to have jet skiiers in the same waters, he told selectmen.

But selectman Rocco Laugelle criticized the residents, saying "people around Little Harbor just want Little Harbor their own. You have never wanted anything there. Where are these things going to go? They're not built to go outside (Cohasset Harbor)."

But Long charged that jet skiis are very dangerous and noisy. Some skiiers travel 30 m.p.h. in the inner harbor. The resident pointed out that the New Hampshire state legislature recently banned the ski machines in most lakes in that state.

John Hubbard of Beach Street joined his neighbors and implored selectmen to enforce a ban on use of the jet ski in Little Harbor. "If you were sailing or rowing, or enjoying the quiet of Little Harbor, you would find the jet ski annoying," he stated.

He suggested that the jet ski be included in the partial ban now enforced against "fast boating." The town allows fast boating in Little Harbor only on even days.

Asst. Harbormaster Thomas Wigmore said last summer he received only one complaint about a jet skiier, although he issued verbal warnings to some skiiers in Cohasset Harbor. "This year I'd like to do more in Little Harbor," he said, requesting that residents contact him if a jet skiier is annoying anyone.

Wigmore recommended the skis be used on even days, along with the motor boats and water skiing in Little Harbor.

Priscilla Long of Nichols Road asked selectmen to impose some ban on the activity. "We see near misses all the time. It is an unsafe harbor to water ski or jet ski in," she said.

And Mary Klein, a resident of Bassings Beach last summer, called jet skiing a "moronic activity" that destroys the peace and tranquility of anyone living in the vacinity of the skiier.

Although selectman did not vote whether to support the ban, Selectman Laugelle recommended they accept it into the warrant for special town meeting this summer.

Historical Society concert May 22

A concert by a brass ensemble performing in a distinctive Cohasset landmark with a display of the "crown jewels" of a renowned local costume collection, will provide an elegant afternoon benefit event for the Cohasset Historical Society on Sunday afternoon, May 22, beginning at 4 p.m.

The setting for the occasion will be the Castle Hill estate of J. Arnold Nickerson, off South Main Street, a 20th century re-creation of a turretted medieval keep rarely opened to the public. Nickerson, owner/impresario of the Nickerson Theater and a Director of the Historical Society, is opening his home for this major fund-raising event.

In the great hall of the dwelling, the Brass Ring Chamber Music Ensemble will present a concert featuring selections to enhance the nostalgic ambience, while a number of priceless gowns from the Historical Society's costume collection will be displayed on mannequins to further heighten the yesteryear atmosphere. A member of the Brass Ring quintet will provide a commentary on the music, and Jean-Michel Tuscherer, curator of textiles and costumes at Boston's Museum of Fine Arts will comment on the local costume collection.

Invitations in the name of "Lady Beatrice," the spokesperson/logo of the gown collection, have been sent out by a committee headed by Mrs. John M. Bleakie and Mrs. Donald W. Steele, co-chairmen. Seating will be limited to 100 and transportation to the isolated "Castle" will be provided from the rear of St. Anthony's Church. Reservations at $50 per person may be made to Mrs. John M.Bleakie, the Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 262, Cohasset Ma 02025.

Meetings & election

As we are going to press Wednesday, the ballot for the May 14 special election override has been set.

For a few weeks now, we have all been on a sort of roller coaster ride while the ballot is prepared and revised. But as of Monday night, selectmen decided there will be seven override questions.

In the upcoming weeks, we will print the ballot in the newspaper, and we will attempt to explain each question; the affect on the tax rate should that question be approved, and the consequences if it is defeated.

We have no doubt that the electorate, in their attempts to become educated about this process, are now thoroughly confused. While we offer no excuses, let us note that this has been an educational process for many town officials and residents.

This is Cohasset's first try at a Prop. 2 1/2 override, and we must admit, it came suddenly and at an inopportune time. We were almost completed with the town budgets , gearing up for town meeting, when out of the blue, we're hit with a growing budget deficit.

Well, we're recovered from that intiial shock, and quickly town officials got down to business. For endless weeks, they have debated how much is needed for an override, and what form that override will take.

The Mariner will do its best to inform the public about this crucial issue. But it has been a difficult task thus far. Everytime a decision has been made affecting the override proposal and questions, we report it and by the publication date it is inaccurate and outdated.

But that is the nature of the weekly newspaper business. We must continue to bring the news as it is reported and strive to make that information accurate.

But it is the responsibility of each voter to educate himself. If there are questions to be asked, do not wait for others to ask them. Your elected town officials, including the school committee members, selectmen, the sewer commission and appointed board members, including the advisory committee, will be willing to share their knowledge and advice with anxious voters.

In addition to the override ballot, a more immediate concern is the special town meeting Monday, May 2.

The most important issue within that brief warrant are the questions regarding the intermunicipal sewer agreement with Hull, construction of the sewer pipeline into Hull and the improvements to the town's treatment facility.

Hull and Hingham have approved the agreement, but nothing can be done without Cohasset's consent.

And voters must also be aware that without a subsequent override approval to construct the project for $2. 2 million, there will be no Ward Plan.

The sewer commission has submitted a thorough explaination of the project. It is essential that every voter read that information (pg. 11) and attend town meeting.

You should be aware of the services the plan will provide, and the costs that will be encumbered.

The results of under paying services

Letters

To the Editor:

Most of us who live here have a real love affair with Cohasset. It is a beautiful and comfortable place to live and yet is having some real financial problems right now. It was only natural at first for people to try to fix responsibility for our situation and this is constructive if we are trying to find positive solutions and viable procedures for the future.

I hear some people say that we should defeat a general override to Prop 2 1/2 and let the town and the departments suffer or that we have been overspending in recent years. Most people in town must have been satisfied with spending levels, because out of 4600 voters, only a few hundred voted on our general budget each year and only a handful debated the budget items.

Our budget has truly been a lean one and our tax bills have been generally lower than in most comparable towns. Our revenues have not kept up with our needs -uncollectibles in water and excise bills plus a flat distribution from the Commonwealth because Cohasset is viewed as a wealthy town under their formulas. In addition, the real "spend-thrift" items in our budget have been the uncontrollables: health insurance, liability insurance, legal defense fees, county charges and the like. The Advisory Committee and the several departments have done a reasonable job of controlling other expenses and the voters who did attend town meetings have had the opportunity to control further. We do need to improve our management control over our budget process among the accountant, advisory committee and the selectmen's office. As our local governments become more complex due to legislative and other pressures, a town manager concept may be more timely.

Proposition 2 1/2 has enforced greater discipline on local spending but was not intended to keep citizens from having the services they want. We have a moderate level of services, not plush by any means, and have probably been underpaying for them recently. Now we should support the good people who have given us such long and good service at considerable personal cost and vote for the general override. It is not easy to vote for a tax increase, but in our democracy we can tax ourselves in order to have the town and the services that we want.

It is very important that the 4600 voters express their views on this issue and do the right and fair thing now without rancor or recriminations from the past.

Agreement mere incompetence

To the Editor:

The recent Cable TV appearance and promotional efforts of Cohasset and Hull officials.

The recent Cable TV appearance on "Pierson to Person" by Cohasset and Hull officials in promoting the Agreement for a Sewer connection and sludge removal to Cohasset was very enlightening. The presentation showed the motivation behind the proposed "Agreement." It is clearly a product of political egotism, "we have finally signed something" and self-serving delusions," the Chinese have used it (sludge) on their gardens for centuries."

It is clear that the proposed "Agreement" goes beyond mere incompetence to represent an egregious violation of the public trust placed in the Cohasset Sewer Commissioners, Mssrs. DeSantis, Guild, and Vanderweil. These men should not only be removed from office but subject to penalties of civil law.

First, it is clear the agreement serves as a transparent mechanism for protecting a certain residential area, the Jerusalem Road area where all three commissioners live, to the detriment of the rest of the town which will have to bear a disproportionate share of the cost and nuisance both of the construction and the ultimate travesty — Cohasset's newly proposed industrial centerpiece, a sludge to-fertilizer factory, which,to be economically feasible,will have to import not only the human waste from Hull and Hingham, but probably all that is generated from Quincy to Cape Cod.

Cohasset will be converted from a quaint andpricey fishing village to an odorous joke. Our school athletic teams will be dubbed cohASSET and will not refer to our capital accounts.

How in good conscience or good sense, can Mr. Vanderweil and Co. plan for acceptance of huge quantities of other towns waste when we cannot take care of our own at the current contaminated landfill or treatment station. Nor is it clear that the costs of detoxification or composting of the sludge have been included in the budget for the agreement. These two heavy industrial functions will cost hundred of thousands of dollars,to say nothing of the proposed site of such activities, possibly near Little Harbor (where the algae harvesting would be precluded.)

From a health point of view the acceptance of sludge creates a huge hazard. Mr. Vanderweil's reference to the Chinese use of chamber pot residues to improve their agriculture is horrifying and incredibly ill-informed. Not only does this usage contribute to the spread of diseases such as typhoid and shistosomaisis,but it also most recently affected hundreds of thousands with hepatitis. Nor, of course, does that Chinese sludge carry the contamination of America's special deadly viruses, nor the lead residue from Hulls' century old pipes, nor the household toxins which are dumped down the drains because they may no longer be dumped in the landfills legally.

The cost projected,but unprovided for by the current sewer commissioners if this agreement is passed,will shock Cohasset into reality, as will the Cohasset Heights Landfill,but alas, not until after irreparable harm is done to the environment and huge legal costs are incurred. Frankly, Cohasset well deserves the insult and injury of the Agreement. Will the voters of this town ever wake up and protect their own future?

An analysis of Ward Sewer Plan costs

At the May 2, 1988 Special Town Meeting, voters will be asked to appropriate funds for an Intermunicipal Agreement for wastewater disposal with Hull. On April 11, the Hull Town Meeting voted to accept the Cohasset program, the Ward Plan. With a positive Cohasset vote the financing for the project can then be placed on the May 14 Proposition 2½ Debt Exclusion Override Ballot. Passage of this particular ballot will allow immediate start of this important program.

The following is a brief summary of the project which we ask that you please review:

WHAT DOES THE WARD PLAN ACHIEVE?

- — Elimination of Cohasset's discharge permit violation.
- — The end of legal confrontation between the State and Cohasset.
- — Protects the public health.
- — Provides 300,000 gallons per day wastewater flow.
- — Minimal tax impact - $45 for an average home to pay for central sewer district.
- — An ecologically acceptable plan:
  - * No new large sewer plant.
  - * No sewer ocean outfall.
  - * Provides for environmentally controlled growth and therefor protects and preserves the delicate ecology and rural nature of our Town.

DESCRIPTION OF THE WARD PLAN

The Ward Plan consists of three parts:

I.	Hull Connection	Conservation of Cohasett's waste water treatment plant to a pumping station which will pump our wastewater through a force main to the under utilized Hull waste water treatment plant.
II.	Sewer Service Area	Expansion of the present sewer service area in one phase.
	Reserve Service Area	Provided for extension of sewer service into Rte. 3A only after the completion of the expanded area and only upon 2/3 vote of the Cohasset Town Meeting.
III.	On Site Repairs	Future program to repair on site systems in the unsewered areas.

Of great concern to the Sewer Commission is the availability of State and Federal grants for projects after September 30, 1988. Advice from the State indicates that there will no longer be any 90% grants available for municipal projects after this date. Without such assistance, this project becomes cost prohibitive for our Town.

We urge you to attend the May 2 Special Town Meeting and VOTE for Articles 16 & 17 of the Warrant. This is our last chance to qualify for this assistance. We cannot afford to lose these grants.

See you all at Town Meeting.

Sincerely,
Charles DeSantis
Ted Guild
Cary Vanderweil

Selectmen adopt eight-part override

divide the eight separate capital overlay override items into separate questions. Those items include $70,000 for the town's property revaluation; $68,290 for a leachate control study at the town landfill; up to 20,000 for the repair of the Osgood School roof; $16,000 for a small truck for the school department; $15,000 for a five-town ambulance; $8,800 for rescue tools for the fire department; $18,000 for Cohasset Heights engineering; and $4,800 for engineering at Milliken Field.

The state Department of Revenue and Prop. 2 1/2 legislation recommend capital overlay items be treated the same as debt exclusions, he noted. Debt exclusion override items, which will raise the tax levy for the life of the loan but will not raise the tax base, must appear as separate questions on the ballot.

If the capital overlay items had been separated into individual questions, there would be 15 questions on the May 14 ballot. Atty. Henderson recommended the entire town and school budget override be combined into one general override question for a total of $659,000. If approved, that amount would permenently raise the tax levy and the tax base.

He also recommended eight separate capital overlay questions and five debt exclusion questions, including two for the sewer project. The debt exclusions without the sewer project total $702,000.

However, sewer commissioner Ted Guild explained that the two sewer articles would be combined into one question totaling $2.2 million.

There would be nothing illegal about combining all the capital overlay questions, Atty. Henderson told selectmen. However, based on the list he received from them last week and his knowledge of the Prop. 2 1/2 law, he recommended the separate questions. "Capital overlays are usually separated on the ballot," he told selectmen. "Although the statute is not clear with capital overlays, I feel it is better to separate them because they're more like debt exclusions than a general override."

Town counsel also advised that no amount be specified in the general override ballot question. As he explained it, "this will not be a second look at the issues affecting the articles passed at town meeting. I'm not sure this should be the second along with the $2. 2 million price tag for the Ward Plan, that override question should specify $800,000 of that amount will be paid by the users of the sewer system. "That's important information for the people voting on the override," Guild stated. That betterment fee will cost each sewer user $2,026.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby supported the split ballot, noting that other towns have experienced more override success by making the ballot easier to comprehend with separate questions. Selectman Mitman disagreed. "If you let the people revisit all the issues of town meeting, you raise the liklihood that it will not pass," he said.

Chartis Langmaid of Beechwood Street recommended selectmen not approve a 15-question ballot. "The first time we passed these articles at town meeting we exceeded our ability to pay. Now we must authorize that payment. We have no choice," she stated. "If these are taken individually, people will feel they are voting on the merits of each issue within the article."

And advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke noted that to break down the ballot into individual articles gives voters the impression "of a lack of strong support."

She also noted, "the more questions there are, it is inevitable one will fail."

Town Counsel Henderson explained that because he was given a list of eight capital overlay questions, he recommended they be treated the same as debt exclusions. State law requires that debt exclusions be listed individually on the ballot. But, he repeated, it would not be illegal to lump the eight articles into one override ballot question.

Selectmen voted to keep the ballot down to one general override question for $659,000; one capital overlay question for $220,890; four debt exclusions questions totaling $702,000 and one sewer project override question for $2.2 million.

Goedecke then requested selectmen immediately open the warrant for another special town meeting. That meeting will be necessary if voters defeat any question on the override ballot.

Because April town meeting voted to appropriate money for all these articles (with the exception of the Ward sewer plan which will be decided at the May 2 special town meeting), voters must also approve the override amounts. If any article is defeated, a second special town meeting must be held to subtract any unapproved amounts from the town's budget.

Selectmen decided to open the warrant for override articles only. If necessary, a special town meeting will be held June 13.

The advisory committee will be instructing town department heads this week to begin reducing budgets, as a precaution in the event of an override defeat.

Dinosaurs discovery of a ghost

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. At first he walked by, then he thought. "Hmmm, I think I'll go down the secret path." He went down the path and stopped for a second, and he heard footsteps behind him. He quickly looked behind him and saw nothing. He continued to walk and heard footsteps behind him again. Beside him he spotted a tunnel. He runs in the tunnel and sees a bright light. Behind him he sees a ghost. He begins to run toward the bright light. As he ran he felt something touch his shoulder he turned and saw the ghost right behind him. He runs toward the bright light and discovers it is gold. Suddenly the ghost is in front of him blocking the gold. The dinosaur runs between the ghosts legs to escape. He grabs the gold and runs out of the tunnel as fast as he can. He runs all the way home. As the clock struck dawn the ghost appeared in the dinosaurs bedroom. The ghost took one ruby and left the rest of the treasure to the dinosaur. Never again was the dinosaur bothered by the ghost again.

The dinosaur finds gold

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He walks down the path and finds a map. The map tells him to look for a treasure. The treasure is hidden under a big rock. He digs and digs until he finds the treasure. He grabs it and walks back until it pops out of the hole. He opens the cover and finds a lot of gold inside. He follows the path to his home where he hides the gold. With the gold he buys food. The gold makes him happy.

Dinosaur's adventure

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He follows the path until he gets to the jungle. In the jungle he sees many other dinosaurs. This makes him feel happy. He introduces himself and begins to play. They play games for five hours. After five hours of play they get hungry. They walk together to the zoo and eat plants. Then they visit the zoo animals. They notice it getting dark and they walk home to the jungle. Dinosaur walks back down the secret path to his house. Dinosaur eats dinner and tells his family about his adventure.

The dinosaur treasure

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He decided to follow the trail. As he walked along the trail he found a treasure map. He stopped to read the map. The dinosaur followed the directions on the map and came to a special tree. He began to dig beside the tree. He dug and dug until he came to a treasure box. He opens the box and finds much gold. He hurries home with the gold. At home all his dinosaur friends meet him. He shows them his treasure and then hides it in a safe place in his house, and lives happily ever after.

Angela and the dinosaur

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As she passed by a tall building she saw a secret path. She walked down the path. While walking she ran into a friend named Angela. The dinosaur and Angela go get a drink and talk about what they will do. They decide to play for the afternoon. At the end of the day they walk back down the secret path to their house. They both thought about what a nice time they had. They lived happily ever after.

Dinosaur finds a building

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As she passed by a tall building she saw a secret path. She went down the path and ended up in a tall, tall building. She went into the building and found some food. After she ate the food she went upstairs to look around. She found dead dinosaur fossils standing up. After she looked around she went back downstairs, out the door, back down the path, and straight home. At home she took a nap because she was tired. When she woke up she rode her dinosaur bike and thought about her adventure on the secret path.

Ready for Ramesses

The boys and girls in Mrs. Prices Kindergarten wrote a story about the Scarab.

Scarab - a sacred beetle that ancient Egyptians used to symbolize resurrection and immortality. Imagine their surprise when Mrs. Price presented them with their very own scarab to wear around their neck. J.B. Nohe was spotted wearing his scarab at a winning basketball game. Jacquelene Kahn wars her scarab to school almost every day. One girl was overheard in the Osgood hall telling another, "you wouldn't have gotten in trouble this week if you kept your scarab on. See I keep mine on and I haven't gotten in any trouble."

During her recent trip to Egypt Mrs. Marie Price arranged a cultural exchange on the Early Childhood level with two Egyptian schools in Cairo and Giza.

The children have sent scenes, photos and books of their lives in Cohasset to share with their pen pals in Egypt. They are anxiously awaiting the return mail.

Mrs. Price's classes are doing a unit on ancient Egypt.

The children are very eager to share their enthusiasm with the Cohasset community and would appreciate more enrichment materials.

Please contact the Joseph Osgood School or Mrs. Eugene K. Price (383-1117) if you would like to be part of this exciting endeavor.

SS Votech honors

South Shore Regional School students took top honors in the 1988 Massachusetts Skill Olympics and Leadership Conference, held April 14, 15 and 16 by the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA).

Thirty-five South Shore students were among 1,600 students, advisors and industry representatives. The winners will attend the national conference in Wichita, Kansas this June.

"We were all very proud of our students as once again they rose above the other schools, not only in competition but also with their outstanding behavior," said Edward Schneider, VICA coordinator for the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School. "We received many compliments from the advisors of other schools."

All gold medal winners were part of the opening and closing ceremonies.

In another regional school award, former committee member James McDermott, a CPA from Hanson, was honored by the regional school committee for his override, although $800,000 of the total will be paid back by the sewer users.

Voters prepare for May 2 special meeting

(A cost analysis of the Ward Plan has been submitted by sewer commission chairman Charles DeSantis on pg. 11).

Red Gate Lane resident Lot W. Bates plans to submit an amendment to the articles at town meeting. A citizens' petition article has been submitted into the warrant, which will be amended Monday night.

An unsuccessful candidate for the sewer commission, Bates said he is not opposed to the Ward Plan. But there is room for improvement, he explained.

Bates said the proposed four-inch sewer pipe connected to the homes will accept only water from the septic tank located in the property owner's yard. That four-inch pipe will be connected to another four-inch pipe in the road which will be connected into a larger pipeline.

"I want to see a six-inch pipe from the septic tanks," Bates explained. "It will mean 83 cents more per foot, but it will be able to accept both solids and water. And homeowners will not need a tank in the yard."

Bates also noted that water department regulations prohibit laying a sewer pipe above the water pipe, a dilemma that will be avoided by using the larger-dimension pipe.

"I proposed this idea about the larger pipe during my campaign," Bates said, "but I realize a lot of people don't really understand sewer issues."

In addition to the two Ward Plan articles, the special town meeting warrant includes appropriation requests for $26,912 to Clean Harbors for the oil clean-up at the high school. the Lily Pond clean-up is also on the agenda, with a $100,000 price tag.

A request for $6,000 will be made to install an electrical pad transformer behind the town hall. Voters will be asked to appropriate $41,000 for a sprinkler system in the new town hall addition; $80,000 for the operation of a transfer station; and $4,000 for the repair of the town hall roof.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Concern over teacher absences

South Shore Regional School committee members are concerned about staff attendance, despite a 2.5 percent drop in absenteeism from last year.

Fifty-nine staff members have been out 233 days, Superintendent Clifford Easton reported at their April 20 meeting. Four of the reported staff are on extended leaves of absence; two for 28 days, respectively, one for 20 days and one for 16 days.

Thirty-six percent of the staff have not taken any days off, and 34 percent have taken one day off.

"I was in business 25 years, and people went years on end with no absentees or tardiness," said David Chittim, committee member from Cohasset. "No absenteeism should be considered a normal routine. I don't see why it should be different here."

The committee will look at alternatives for establishing incentives for good attendance. They will discuss the situation with the bargaining group, also.

Sturdy opposes affordable housing project . . .

summer for percolation tests. Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the holes are safety hazards now more than ever because they are filling up with water. One hole is at least 60 by 125 feet, Dr. Godzik said.)

Meanwhile Sturdy believes Cohasset is not in violation of state so-called affordable housing standards, even though the Office of Communities and Development says it is. A town that fails to meet those standards may be denied certain development grants, generally called discretionary funds.

"In my opinion this town is not in violation of 215, the snob zoning laws. No procedure has been followed to test the violation. No grants have been applied for so we haven't been denied anything."

State EOCD Secretary Amy Anthony has cited Cohasset not just for an absence of housing for lower income people but for the town's absence of effort to correct the problems.

Chairman Sturdy is buying none of that.

"The state wants this kind of housing distributed around town and there are no other sites for 128 units. We have sites for 30 or 40 units and if we could do that we could distribute a few here and there. I don't like their formula anyway. Why should we have to build seven additional units to yield three units of affordable housing, which is what you have to do to get the percentages right. Right now we have a cluster development before us for 20/30 units on Lambert's Lake."

Sturdy was particularly caustic about the state's involvement in the town's business. "This is your typical, popular program – but the state isn't paying for it we are."

He wants the state out of the town's housing affairs.

"The Cohasset Housing Authority is basically a state agency. We tried to form a municipal housing authority and they shot it down at town meeting. Charlotte (Chartis) Langmaid of the housing partnership got up and said she didn't know anything about the plan so everyone should vote against it."

Chartis Langmaid, who also is the town's representative to the South Shore Coalition's Housing Task Force, said not only did the housing partnership, an appointed committee bound to study housing needs in town, not know about the plan, neither did the government study structure committee.

"There is no way to tell yet what effect a municipal housing authority would have on the community," Langmaid said. "We need to know more about it before we create it. I don't think Mr. Sturdy wants affordable housing in town and that's that."

Langmaid also said it was not so true that there were no other site in town for state-qualified affordable housing.

"The town owns lots of land that could be used," she said.

Cohasset lawyer Robert Devin, who represents Deck Point, said the developers will proceed with applications for state approval but that support from groups such as the housing partnership might make that process unnecessary.

"Right now, we are trying to go before as many town boards as we can in order to find out local concerns" Devin said. "Our application before the board of appeals is subject to change if we can get support from the housing partnership for rezoning the site."

A winning weekend for youth soccer teams

Four Cohasset youth soccer teams won their first games of the season as the fourth week of Coastal Soccer League play came to a close.

"Nine of our 14 teams either tied or won," said league coordinator Larry Shultz. "Even the losses were close."

In the most dramatic victory of the weekend, the Boys Under 19 team, coached by Shultz, beat Hingham 3-2 on a penalty shot goal by former Cohasset High captain Todd Fitzpatrick. The penalty — a tripping call — came with 45 seconds to play. Other goal scorers were David Shultz and Jay Staunton.

Coach John Kinchla's Boys Under 14-1 team recorded its first win, upsetting Plymouth 1-0 on a goal by Brooks Doten. Mike Burns assisted Doten, while Bill Bruns got the shutout in his first game as goalkeeper.

Both girls Under 14 teams shut out their opponents by the same 1-0 total. Under 14-1 beat Norwell with Heidi Lincoln scoring,and Tracey Reardon, Michelle Woodland and Jen Reidy excelling. Under 14-2 got its score late in the game from Kate O'Brien, while Jennifer Knowles earned the shutout in goal, and stopper Kate Delima led the defense.

Girls Under 10-1 lost a tough game to Middleboro 3-1, with Erin Devine scoring. Coach Sandy Teriault reported fine play from Nicole Peterson, Abby Pease and stopper Caroline Delima. Under 10-2 girls also lost,to Hanover, 2-0 on two early goals. "Emily Henderson played well in goal," said coach Kevin O'Donnell, "and Megan Connolly got two terrific shots on net."

Under 12-1 girls knocked off Scituate 2-1 as Kate Carroll scored twice, with assists going to Sarah Atherton and Sarah Belson. Under 12-2 was less fortunate, losing 4-1 to Kingston. Melinda Johanson, Emily D'Urso, and Jessica Jenkins all played well.

Girls Under 16 tied Marshfield 3-3 behind Cory DeSantis' pair of goals and Sophie Redfield's single tally. Laura Smart assisted on one goal, and coach Steve Hague gave her all around game high marks.

Boys Under 10-1 remained undefeated, tying Halifax 2-2. "A very tough game," said coach Terry Kahn. "Halifax was physical, and the referee chose to let virtually everything go." Jonathon Crafts scored twice, assisted on both by striker Ely Kahn. Robbie Buckley played a strong game at right wing, while the defensive tandem of Todd Harrington and Chad Whitman made few mistakes.

Members of the Girls Under 10 team 11 of the Cohasset Youth Soccer League. (Kym Marcella)

Under 10-2 boys fell to Plymouth 1-0, after holding their hosts scoreless for most of the game. David Marr and goalkeeper Matt Conley led the defense, while striker Morgan Sandell was the offensive threat.

Under 12-1 boys lost to Hingham 2-1, with the lone score by Charlie Endris. Under 12-2 fared better, beating Duxbury 3-0 with goals from Ben Manning, Ben Redfield and David Nofnagel. Coach Fran Collins also praised Anthony Wigmore, Kevin O'Donnell and Dan Volungis.

Boys Under 16 whipped Marshfield 7-1 with goals coming from Linc Marsac, Mike Cisneros and Doug Drysdale, among others. Colin Studds led the defense.

The home schedule this weekend:

Saturday at Milliken — Girls Under 12-2 vs. Pembroke, 9 a.m.; Girls Under 14-2 vs. Hanover, 10:15; Girls Under 12-1 vs. Duxbury, 11:30; Boys Under 10-1 vs. Sacred Heart, 1 p.m.; Boys Under 12-2 vs. Plymouth, 2:15; Boys Under 14-2 vs. Sacred Heart, 3:30.

Good nucleus for '88 softball team

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

The adage — winning breeds confidence — is what Michael Gill hopes for in his first-year duty as varsity coach. Unquestionably, this assertion may turn out to be what is needed for a successful and competitive Cohasset girls' softball season.

A case in point, Cohasset will carry five members of the recent 1988 state championship basektball team and Gill is sensing similar results in the spring.

"We have a good nucleus of players returning and they know what it takes to win it all. We are counting on these people, with their winning attitude, to pass it along to the other members on the squad," said Gill, who serves as the school's health coordinator.

Senior Marge Murphy, a South Shore All-Star selection in basketball, will guide the veteran nucleus. Murphy will be the number-one ace for Gill and the Skippers.

So far, she has appeared in Cohasset's first three games of the campaign, winning one of them (a 13-11 victory over Sandwich.)

According to Gill, Murphy is the premier pitcher in the league. She is followed by shortstop Kris Ellinger, who was a valuable starter for the basektball team.

She will anchor the middle infield, while sporting a potent bat. Ellinger belted a grand slam home-run against Sandwich the other day.

Third baseman Debbie Hartley and Sara Bishop, first base, will man the corners. Hartley was the most valuable player in the EMass South final basketball contest versus Jeremiah Burke, scoring 20 points including key baskets in overtime. Bishop contributed to the championship team by performing admirably in her sixth-man role.

Centerfielder Barbara Lagiotteria rounds out the final player for the elite team.

"They are very good athletes. We have a mixed blend of talent. This should make us very competitive in our league," said Gill.

Gill is pleased with the progress of seventh-grader Allison Ludlow, who has earned the starting assignment as catcher. "She is a fine athlete. She has adjusted so well at the toughest position, I believe, in softball," Gill said. "With Ludlow behind the plate and Ellinger(SS), Kara Manion (2B) and Lagiotteria (CF), it gives us excellent defense up the middle."

Members of the 1988 CHS girls varsity softball team and their coach Mike Gill, prepare to board the bus for another away game. (Alan Chapman)

Leftfielder Melinda Bonnano and rightfielder Kristin Maki will share the outfield duty with Lagiotteria.

Erin Moynihan will come off the bench to provide muscle and depth for the Lady Skippers.

Gill emphasizes three objectives Cohasset must follow to the successful this spring.

"Number one is try to minimize our defensive miscues. Secondly, our mental mistakes and finally, to eliminate the walks. We just have to throw strikes, although Murphy has been very good in doing that," said Gill, whose club faces tough competition in the South Shore Small Schools Division from Hull.

Optimism is definitely blooming this spring for the Skippers. With the winning attitude present on this year's roster, it gives an indication that the softball team may reap the same benefits just like the girls' basektball squad.

More stores planned at Rte. 3A plaza . . .

retail and office building across the street.

Kelleher's plans include a red brick, one-story series of stores which feature large bay windows.

Staszko explained that the new building will include a net total of 26,800 square feet. That is nine percent building coverage on the property, although 25 percent is permitted under the bylaw.

But planning board chairman Robert Sturdy said he would like to see less building coverage and more green space preserved on the site. He argued that the developer included a residentially-zoned area as common commercial green space in his calculations. "I'm not buying that," he told the developer, adding he would fight the issue in court, if necessary.

Atty. Humphreys disagreed, and noted the board has the option of requiring traffic islands within the reserved parking area and widening the green belt along the property on Rte. 3A. He reminded the board they have the authority to waive 33 parking spaces under the bylaw in order to require more landscaping.

Staszko added, "the landscaping I've done on the Stop and Shop is better than anything before this board in the last five years."

"Not better than Bergeson's," Sturdy replied.

"Well, it's a lot better than the bunch of pine bark at Seavey's and you're a tenant there," the developer shot back.

Sturdy said he would insist that the site plan for the Stop and Shop project be reopened since the traffic flow would be generated from the same access through a combined parking area.

"We're really talking about a single plaza," member Daniel Cotton stated.

Atty. Humphreys said the only allowable alternative to the single entrance and exit on Rte. 3A would be from Sohier Street. The developer does not plan that, nor does he intend any pedestrian access from Sohier Street, Atty. Humphreys said.

The planning board chairman asked if the additional stores would generate 50 percent more traffic into the plaza. Staszko said traffic reports will be provided to the board which indicate the 50 percent estimate is too high. He estimated it would generate about five percent more traffic into the plaza.

"The Stop and Shop generates the most traffic," he stated, adding that under the provision of the Stop and Shop's lease, no other food store can be located in the plaza.

Community gardeners prepare flower show

Community Garden Club members have been active in the local nursing homes, teaching residents the art of floral arrangements. Another educational exhibit at the show will surround the life cycles of butterflys.

Plans for the new environmental garden and nature study area behind the Osgood and Deer Hill schools will be detailed at the show. Club members have been working for the past year to develop an outdoor learning area for Cohasset students. An explanation of their work will be outlined at the show.

Aside from creating this show, club members are regularly seen throughout town, creating and preserving landscaping along the community center, Constitution Park, and the Veterans' Memorial Park in the cove.

A large portion of the standard flower show will be reserved for the members of the junior garden club. More than 24 juniors, most of them fourth, fifth and sixth-grade daughters of club members, along with some 'graduates' of the program will be entering exhibits in the show.

That is an unusually large amount of junior members, Larson said, especially for a small community like Cohasset. But the Community Garden Club has taken great pride in the junior program. "We have a history of a very enthusiastic junior gardener program," she stated.

The juniors are bound by numerous rules, albeit less stringent than those governing the senior members. The juniors will be exhibiting their work in six categories.

The concept behind the title "Genesis" was Larson's accomplishment, a responsibility assigned each chairman of a standard flower show. The show's dominant colors of peach and green symbolize the fiery shades and earthen tones of spring and the rebirth of nature.

Club members, which total more than 200 residents of Cohasset, decided it was time for the club to sponsor this painstakingly precise event. "We had the money, and we've been working up to this point for two years now," the chairman explained. "For that length of time we have been holding in-house flower shows and teaching design and floral exhibits. We felt ready to tackle this bigger project."

One of the primary purposes of the club, she noted, is to sponsor a standard flower show. "The Community Garden Club is all about education, flowers, plants, the environment and creativity. This standard flower show is very technical, and we felt we weren't up to it in past years. We've been working on our objectives and our skills, and we felt the time was right."

Along with the floral arrangements, club members will be working to coordinate the background within the art center galleries. Elaborate and intricate staging for the exhibits will be part of the criteria the standard flower show must meet.

The public will be invited to view the entire show from 1 to 5 p.m. at the art center. By that time, the judging will be complete, and all arrangements and exhibits will include the judges' comments and explanations of each work.

Tickets for the standard flower show are on sale at the Community Center, 3 North Main Street, or at the art center, 119 Ripley Road.

A cocktail party to benefit the club's activities will be held later than evening. Tickets for the party are also available at the community center and art center.

Nature trails clearing day

Attention all nature lovers and outdoorspeople.

Saturday, May 14, a work party is being assembled to clear two newly-blazed nature trails behind Deer Hill and Osgood Schools. People of all ages are invited to participate, clearing brush and roots off the trails.

The trails, designed to be used as "outdoor classrooms" by students at both schools, are basically quarter mile loops with several clearings. Both trails pass either over streams or near ponds, which will allow students to explore wetlands areas, as well as densely wooded areas.

The work party will meet at 10 a.m. at Osgood School. People are asked to bring gloves and socks (to protect against poison ivy) and clippers, axes or any tools to clear the brush. Also bring a picnic lunch. The raindate will be Sunday, May 15.

For those who cannot come, but would like to participate, a $5.00 donation to buy a plank for the two bridges required to cross James Brook on the Osgood Trail would be appreciated.

Donations may be sent to Debbie Cook, 281 King St. or Margaret Cotter, 50A Jerusalem Rd.

Dr. Cottle at PSO

The featured speaker at the Cohasset Parent School Organization's (PSO) Annual Meeting and election of officers, will be acclaimed TV psychologist, author and Harvard Medical School lecturer, Dr. Thomas J. Cottle of Brookline.

The meeting will take place at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 12 at Cohasset High School. All residents of Cohasset are invited to attend, especially parents of school children. The topic will be: "What's Bothering Parents About Young People Today."

Tom Cottle is a regular contributor to WCVB-TV's (Ch. 5) "Good Day!" Show, New England's longest running, live morning talk show. Cottle, 48, is the father of three children. He gained fame with his own Channel 2 series, "Soapbox," a teen-talk series dealing with typical teen problems.

Mark your calendar now for May 12 and be thinking of any questions you might want to ask Dr. Cottle, as there will be a question and answer period. Refreshments, courtesy of the PSO, will be served.

Trail blazing workday

Two nature trails connecting forested land between the Osgood and Deer Hill schools will become reality with the help of parents and others. In order to make these "outdoor classrooms" work, your help is needed!

Saturday, May 14, a trial blazing workday will be held (rainday, May 15). Volunteers will meet in the Osgood parking lot at 10 a.m. Coffee and donuts will be provided. Volunteers will work in teams and should bring a picnic lunch, gloves and clippers.

Get your own team together!

If you can help, or would like more information please call Debbie Cook at 383-6313.

Four member towns approve Vo-tech plans

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

Is the glass half full or half empty?

Four of the eight member towns of the South Shore regional school system have approved proposals to place warrants for a $14 million bond on their upcoming ballots at town elections.

Committee members have met with officials from member towns, asking them to present plans to renovate and add to the Hanover campus of the South Shore VoTech High School.

The school is now housed at two campuses, in Hanover and Abington. Buses transport students between the schools throughout the day. The regional school leases the former Abington Junior High School, which is not designed for shop classes.

Scituate, Whitman, Cohasset and Rockland have approved the warrant article. Hanson, Norwell, Abington and Hanover have not made decisions.

Spurred by concern from the town of Hanover, committee members last week voted not to go ahead with building plants if they do not receive a 75-percent reimbursement by the state School Business Assistance Bureau (SBAB) in this cycle of funding.

"We feel we do not have a commitment from the deputy commissioner of education. He said we could bank on the 75 percent" said David Chittim, committee member from Cohasset.

Committee members, school administrators and the architects for the building project have been visiting town officials to report on the proposed construction.

"This is a window of opportunity that probably will not occur again, so we want to urge the towns to put the warrant article on the ballot," said Superintendent Clifford Easton.

Chimney cleaning can improve home safety

(The following article was submitted by the Chimney Inspectors of Weymouth.)

If you have a fireplace or woodburning stove, summer is a good time to see about getting your chimney cleaned.

You're probably not using them for heating right now, and professional chimney sweeps in your area are less busy now than they are in the fall or winter.

Because of the high cost of oil and electricity, fireplaces and woodburning stoves have become more popular in the United States and Canada.

Most people don't seem to realize that chimneys need regular cleaning when wood is burned, particularly when it is burned on a daily basis during the heating season.

A dirty chimney is a potential fire hazard.

Dust-like carbon deposits called creosote collect on the inside of a chimney flue, impairing the draft. Wood stove manufacturers estimate that as little as one millimeter of creosote lining the chimney can reduce a stove's efficiency by up to 15 percent. If the carbon buildup is heavy this might be the least of your worries.

These carbon deposits are extremely flammable and burn with an intense flame that can melt mortar.

Flaming balls of debris may be lifted out of your chimney onto the roof, your lawn, or your next-door-neighbors house.

Smoke may back up into your home, causing considerable smoke damage. If conditions are right, your whole house could catch fire.

And even if damage is minimal, the chimney may be so badly weakened that it isn't safe to use anymore.

How do you know whether your chimney needs cleaning? You may be able to tell by using a powerful light and a mirror to look up the flue from the bottom. If the bricks look pink, you're okay: if they're black or furry looking: it's time for a sweeping.

If you're still not sure, call a professional chimney sweep. He or she will inspect the chimney and if it doesn't need cleaning, you will be told.

The National Fire Protection Association recommends that chimneys be inspected and cleaned once a year.

When a woodburning stove is used regularly, the chimney should be checked every six months.

A chimney is cleaned from the top to the bottom. First, the smoke box is sealed off. Then the sweep chooses a brush to correspond to the shape and size of the flue. He then runs the tightly fitting brush up and down the flue on six-foot extensions of cable.

A high-powered vacuum is used to remove the carbon deposits and control any soot that might escape from the smoke box.

A professional sweep will give you the price before the work is done. Don't be afraid to ask for references.

Make sure the sweep is covered by insurance; liability, property damage and completed operations coverage should be carried.

A properly installed and properly maintained system can mean economy with safety.

A store with 'do-dads from yesteryear'

A Scituate tradesman has an unusual building with two addresses, Front Street, Scituate Harbor and Cole Parkway. It's the only hardware supply company with a water view.

Tony Mallon and his wife Bonnie purchased Scituate Supply Co. three years ago and turned it into a comprehensive supply store with something for everyone.

Items offered include plumbing, electrical, hardware, painting products and tools of the trade.

The novice handyman can expect good, old-fashioned service and advice from Frank and Al Danon, who have been employed at Scituate Supply since its beginnings, over 30 years ago.

During the past three years the Mallons have ". . expanded our inventory over five-fold. We've been concentrating on buying and selling quality products, because quality often doesn't cost any more, and our customers are pleased to find it."

Scituate Supply Co. says it has the largest collection of nuts, bolts and fastenings in the areas. "We stock over 70 types of nails, and we sell them by the pound," Tony said. The Mallons are also proud of their expanded marine and automotive section.

Recently, a little old lady tested Scituate Supply. "I bet you don't have tack pullers," she challenged. "We most certainly do," Tony responded. And she bought one.

Other unusual do-dads from yesteryear include steel sashed glazing clips (a clip that holds metal basement windows, the kind that tip in, in place; radiator keys (to replace those which have become frozen), radiator valves.

Scituate Supply also boasts a brand-new color matching computer, which will analyze any color you wish to match.

If you're a woodworker, you'll enjoy discovering high quality Freud tools used in fine furniture work. But if you're only an occasional home handyman, a weekender, Scituate Supply can also provide good quality but less expensive tools. Catch that raccoon by leasing a "Have-A-Heart" animal trap; rent a cellar pump, a post hole digger, wallpaper steamers, sheetrock jacks, and numerous hand tools.

A year celebration at Decorating Den

Hanover resident Anne Barry Jolles is celebrating her first anniversary owning and operating Decorating Den, a shop-at-home interior decorating service.

Anne specializes in window treatment, carpet, wall-coverings, furniture and accessories brought to the client's home in a specially designed van. There is no consultation fee.

"My biggest challenge is to listen carefully to my clients, thereby helping them to determine their needs and the final look that will be special for them. When I leave a client's home, I want them to feel satisfied and proud of the coordinated look that "we" put together."

For Anne, the van serves as more than a mobil showroom. Her home based business gives her the flexibility to run her own business and be a homemaker at the same time. Anne and her husband, Jon, a pediatrician, have lived in Hanover for seven years. They have an eighteen month old son, Robert.

Anne is also a member of the Simmons College Alumni Association, South Shore Womens Network and Hanover Chamber of Commerce.

For an in-home consultation give her a call at 878-8806.

Montessori School to hold an evening of song

Saturday night, April 30 at 8 p.m., Old Colony Montessori School of Hingham will present an evening of songs, comedy, and dance at the Old Ship Church Parish Hall, 107 Main St. in Hingham Square.

The variety program is entitled "Maria's Cafe" in honor of Dr. Maria Montessori, the Italian physician and child development expert who introduced her individualized learning method more than eighty years ago.

Old Colony Montessori School is fortunate to have a number of talented individuals among its parent body, many of whom are performing or have performed professionally and will be featured as the evening's entertainment.

Dawna Hammers Graham, the program's musical director, is a singer/songwriter of contemporary soft-rock "message" music. She has performed in clubs in New York City and Cape Cod, as well as in many clubs, lounges, coffeehouses and rallies in the Boston area. Local residents will remember her for her standout performance at Coffeehouse Off the Square this past March.

Another "Maria's Cafe" performer with professional experience is Candy Leary, who has worked as lead vocalist with jazz and soft-rock bands, as well as performing in college and community musical theater productions. She is joined in the cast by Regina Garvin, a Children's House teacher at Old Colony Montessori who also has extensive experience performing with folk and madrigal groups. Graham, Garvin and Leary, who are all Hingham residents, will combine their voices in a selection of folk, Sixties, and contemporary songs.

Also performing Saturday night is Hingham resident Bob Ryan, a singer/guitarist who has played coffeehouses in both folk rock and bluegrass bands. The program also includes John Behn, a Brockton tenor and instrumentalist with extensive experience in college and community theater. Behn has also performed commercially with his own band and is active in his church choir.

The evening will feature the comedy routines of Linda O'Brien of Weymouth and Steve Chase of Norwell, with a special cameo appearance by Tracy Harris, head teacher at Old Colony Montessori. Maureen Murphy of Norwood, an accomplished dancer and Graham's cousin, will interpret a vocal performance. Jill Nickerson, a Whitman-Hanson High School senior with an impressive list of musical credits, will accompany Behn. The Master of Ceremonies for the evening is Bruce Issadore of Hingham.

The evening will also feature a raffle drawing and refreshments. Proceeds from "Maria's Cafe" will benefit the school's Special Project Fund. Admission at the door is $5.00 per person.

For reservations, call 749-8279 or 740-2547.

Five-week course at Old Ship

The third session of "Sources of Meaning," a five-week course offered by the Rev. Kenneth Read-Brown at the Old Ship Church, will explore "The Path of World Religions." The Hindu text, the Bhagavad Gita, one of the inspirations in the life of Mahatma Gandhi, will be the particular focus of this week's session.

This series of classes explores sources of knowledge and meaning from personal experience, world religions, philosophy, and science and humanism.

All sessions are open to the public. They are held on Sunday evenings at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main Street, across from the church. Coffee is served at 7:15 p.m.; the classes begin at 7:30 p.m. and conclude by 9 p.m.

For further information, please call the church office during office hours, 9 a.m.-12 p.m. weekday mornings, 749-1679.

Last term for Kornet

and she hopes one of those spirited individuals succeeds her.

"During your first term, you're just learning. You really have to give it two terms," she said. "The reason I ran last time was because we had just hired a new superintendent, Steve Hart.

"It was important to give him support, rather than have him get used to working with a new school committee member."

Kornet said as a school committee member she is especially pleased with the changes at Cohasset High School since Hart took over and Margaret Gallagher became principal.

"I think the staff feels revitalized by these new faces," she said.

After 10 years on the school committee, Kornet wants to spend more time with her family.

"Diana Kornet is first a mother of four," she said. Her kids range in age from seven to 19. "That keeps me very busy."

Now that her youngest is in school, she works part-time as a travel agent. "That's good fun," she said.

When she is not working or pushing for Proposition 2 1/2 overrides, Kornet enjoys sailing, skiing, gardening and reading.

"Reading is like dessert," she said.

COHASSET VOTERS!

An Important Message from The Sewer Commission Concerning the Sewer Articles at Town Meeting Monday Evening, May 2, 1988

Three Sewer Commission Articles are included in the Warrant for the Special Town Meeting Monday Evening. The action the Town takes on these articles will determine the Town's sewer program for the next 30 years.

Provisions of the 3 Articles are:

Article 16: This article would implement the Hull interconnection under which we would send our waste water to the under utilized Hull Wastewater plant. Our small waste water plant would be converted to a collection point and pump station; a force main pipeline would run from our plant on Elm Street, down the old railroad bed to the Hingham line, across the golf course, and down Hull Street to the Hull line at West Corner.

Article 17: This article provides for an expanded sewer service area. Refer to the list on the right for the names of streets and parts of streets that would be sewered.

Article 18: This article provides for the rehabilitation, modernization and expansion of our waste water plant. It was inserted before the Hull Town Meeting approved the Cohasset project. Now that Hull has said "Yes" the Sewer Commission will move to withdraw this article.

WHAT DO ARTICLES 16 & 17 ACCOMPLISH?

1. Elimination of Cohasset's discharge permit violation.
2. The end of legal confrontation between the State and Cohasset, with threats of $2,000 per day fines.
3. Protection of the public health.
4. An ecologically acceptable plan:
   — No new large sewer plant
   — No sewer ocean outfall
   — Provides for environmentally controlled growth and therefore protects and preserves the delicate ecology of our Town.
5. The most cost effective plan, of the various alternatives offered, for sewering Cohasset.
6. Gets Cohasset out of the waste water business.

Without a vote to spare, Ward Plan passes

The Ward Plan needed a two-thirds vote to pass, and that is precisely what happened.

There were serious reservations when it came down to the wire about midnight Monday night. The once-popular sewer program attracted some skeptics as voters were asked to reach into their wallets.

At Monday night's special town meeting, voters approved the $2.2 million modified Ward Engineering sewer plan by exactly a two-thirds plurality. One more negative vote and the plan, which was approved overwhelmingly in 1984, would have been defeated.

"Whew, were we lucky," sewer commission chairman Charles DeSantis exclaimed at the conclusion of the meeting, agreeing the small diameter pipe sewer plan narrowly survived its latest challenge.

Article 16 which authorized the town to borrow $1.4 million for the design and construction of the pipeline into Hull was approved by 186 voters with 92 opposed. As Moderator William Weeks announced to voters, the measure "barely prevailed."

Article 17 calling for $800,000 for the construction of sewers in two phases was approved by a 178 to 88 vote. Once again, this was exactly the two-thirds necessary to approve the appropriation.

The entire $2.2 million appropriation must now be approved by a majority of voters at the May 14 special election. The amount must be added to the town's Proposition 2 1/2 override. Chairman DeSantis explained the appropriation will add about $45 to homeowners' property taxes.

After months of delicate negotiations between Cohasset and Hull, the intermunicipal sewer agreement was dangerously close to missing its deadline this week.

Voters at Monday night's special town meeting were asked to finance the design and construction of a sewer pipeline into the Hull treatment plant. But officials involved in negotiating the pipeline agreement almost came to town meeting empty-handed.

An emergency meeting of the two sewer commissions last week and a flurry of weekend telephone calls, ended with a 30-year agreement prepared just before the tart of Cohasset's special town meeting.

Cohasset Sewer Commission airman Charles DeSantis said Monday, "We wouldn't agree to anything this town couldn't live with for 30 years. It had to be all or nothing."

But it was thumbs up by Monday night, as a weary Ted Guild entered town meeting. The Cohasset sewer commissioner said all provisions had been agreed to and voters could proceed with articles 16 and 17 of the special town meeting warrant.

As late as this past weekend, commission chairman Charles DeSantis said he was optimistic, but apprehensive that an agreement would be prepared in time for Monday night's vote.

Rep. Murray to face challenge from Silva

A local tradition is being challenged. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset, Hingham and Hull) will face at least one opponent in her re-election bid.

John Silva, chairman of the Hull Board of Selectmen and chairman of the South Shore Coalition and the Tri-Town Commission, has decided to run for the legislative seat held for 12 years by the incumbent.

The 32 year-old Hull resident, the youngest man ever elected to the Board of Selectmen in that town three years ago, will formally announce his Democratic candidacy May 21 at a cocktail reception beneath the trademark carousel along Nantasket Avenue in Hull.

Could Maritime Museum be host to seafaring ghost?

By David Wadsworth
Senior Curator

New England's stern and rockbound coast abounds in stories of the supernatural, passed from generation to generation until they have the ring of authenticity and become part of the region's folklore.

Thus Boston Harbor's "Lady in Black" has been the subject of tales of George's Island and its Fort Warren, once a prison. Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is believed by some to have a resident ghost, reportedly seen by fishermen in past years. The shade of Minot's is believed to be the ghost of one of the two Lighthouse Keepers who perished in April, 1851 on the night the ill-fated first Minot's Light fell into the sea during a furious gale. At times the ghost of Keeper Joseph Antoine is thought to stand on the high ladder leading to the lighthouse doorway and, during dangerous storms,wave to passing boats as though to warn seafarers to "keep away, keep away" from the desolate and fearsome ledges.

New England's hardy seafarers have sometimes been described as a superstitious breed of people (one perhaps could say the same about baseball players or astronauts), and there seems little doubt that fears of the supernatural seldom were far from the minds of early Yankee sailors.

According to local legend, Cohasset village itself may have played host to a ghostly manifestation of some type in years not long past. This refers to the apparent appearance at various times of a shade believed to be that of a 19th century Cohasset shipowner and merchant named John Bates, once owner of a sizeable fleet of fishing schooners and merchant ships. He also was once the owner of the old ship chandlery, now located on Elm Street at the center, called the Maritime Museum.

Cohasset's week . . .

Open space study

The planning board is forming a committee to study the purchase of the former Cox Estate.

The board was awarded a $4,600 state grant to study the possible aquisition of the Cohasset Harbor property by the town. Members of the board of selectmen, the planning board, conservation and the recreation commissions have been invited to participate in the study.

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy proposed the idea to purchase the property for recreation, harbor acess, housing and open space.

Sturdy noted that Cohasset has only half a harbor, with one-half in Scituate which is not accessible from land. The former Cox Estate contains a significant amount of the town's harbor frontage and land area abutting the harbor. The opportunity to examine the feasibility of converting the use of this property from private to public use should not be lost, he added.

The 9.4 acre property was originally owned by the late publishing heiress Jessie Cox. In 1983, the property was purchased by Yankee Cos. and was used as its corporate headquarters. It was at that time the planning board first suggested the property be purchased by the town.

Because the property is situated in a residential zone, several restrictions were required by the town before Yankee Cos. was allowed to use the land. The permit to use the mansion for a corporate office will expire in 20 years.

Deck Point reviews

Plans for a condominium development along Rte. 3A by Deck Point, Inc. have received mixed reviews by town boards.

The Housing Authority favors the proposal which will include 128 units, ten percent of which will be designated for family/spoecial needs housing rentals. Barbara Clain, executive director of the housing authority stated in a letter to selectmen that, "we look favorably upon this proposal as we continue our intiatives towards the goal of affordable housing."

But the planning board, in a separate letter to the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, outlined its objections to the same plan.

But Clain noted that because there is no housing agreement between the state executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) and Cohasset, local preference can not be given to those units designated under the Home Ownership Program.

"With a Memo of Agreement on record at EOCD, the HOP units in this propsal will jot be involved with local preference and the marketing of said units will be through a state lottery," Clain noted in her letter. "Without town support, the developers could conveivably market the affordable units with no local preference being considered."

The housing authority urged selectmen to move qucikly towards an agreement with the state. "It would be unfortunate if the town lost the chance to offer home owenrship to local residents simply because of interminable delays," Clain stated.

In a letter to the MHFA, planning board chairman Robert Sturdy explained it will be "almost impossible for traffic to gain access to Rte. 3A during peak traffic hours." He also noted, "in order for residents and their children to avail themselves of any services of the town, a major state roadway will have to be crossed. the residents will be isolated and not a part of any existing Cohasset neighborhood."

The site adjacent to the proposed housing is a DPW maintenance depot and salt shed which, Sturdy said, may attract children as a "fun" play area.

The town of Cohasset is attempting to develop an agreement with EOCD that will provide "scattered site" housing for low and moderate income housing, he added. And although the town has a residential C cluster development bylaw which allows cluster type housing built, the bylaw does not allow the amount of density proposed.

"The Cohasset Planning Board is actively trying to create scattered site low income housing. We do not see this site as suitable and we do not see this "project" type density as suitable for this town," Sturdy concluded in his letter.

Shelt er report

According to the Animal Shelter Site Study Committee, plans for the regional structure should be prepared by a November town meeting in Hingham.

Donald Smith, chairman of the committee informed selectmen last week that members are working to locate a site for the shelter in Bare Cove park in Hingham. The committee is currently awaiting a decision on that property which is owned by the General Services Administration.

In the meantime, according to Smith, an alternate site has been selected off Ward Street in Hingham.

"From this point on, we hope to move more quickly; and be ready to present our project at a special town meeting in November, if one is called," he stated in a letter to selectmen.

A check for nearly $10,000 was received last week by the Cohasset Council on Aging for a coordinator of the SHINE health insurance volunteer program. Joining the occasion were Council on Aging members: (l to r) Dot Bjorkgren, Burt Pratt, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Edward Mulvey, Rev. John Keohane and Senior Center director Kathy Bryanton. (Kym Marcella)

Cohasset begins senior health program

After an intensive five-day training, followed by an even tougher exam, the Cohasset Council on Aging honored its first graduates of the state SHINE program last week.

The program, conducted by the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs, seeks to train senior citizens in the confusing and technical aspects of health insurance. The idea behind this program, according to coordinator Maureen Barton-Burke, is to provide seniors with up-to-date and accurate health insurance and Medicaid information, so that they can respond intelligently to the questions and concerns of their peers.

The Cohasset Council on Aging, headed by Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton, is the first South Shore organization to sponsor this regional consortium of senior health insurance counselors. this most recent group of graduates will not counsel peers from residents throughout the South Shore.

Rep. Murray challenged by Hull's John Silva

1979, Silva stated, "it is simply not healthy for anyone to constantly run for office unopposed." It was a decision Rep. Murray was not unaware of, according to Silva, who said he informed the legislator of his intentions last summer.

Rep. Murray, a Cohasset native, did not encounter any opposition in her last two campaigns. A member of the legislative committees on counties and local affairs, Rep. Murray has filed nomination papers but has not officially announced her re-election bid.

That announcement is epected to come at her first campaign fundraiser May 15 at the South Shore Country Club.

It wasn't until his decisive victory in Monday's Hull election in which Selectman Silva pulled in 828 more votes than his challenger, that he decided to publicly announce his state house ambitions. He said Tuesday night that if elected to the House of Representatives in November, he would continue to serve as Hull selectmen.

Rep. Murray

"After all, Mary Jeanette remained a Cohasset selectman while she served in the legislature," he noted.

It is his understanding and willingness to tackle regional issues that prompted Silva's decision to run for the legislative seat. As chairman of the South Shore Coalition, a politically- united group of ten area towns, Silva said he has become increasingly aware of the issues confronting the legislative district of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset. He also serves as chairman of the Tri-Town Commission, a smaller group of representatives from Hull, Hingham and Cohasset who regularly meet to discuss common goals and concerns.

"There are so many regional issues that Mary Jeanette has not been involved in, including solid waste disposal, the revitalization of the Old Colony rail line, and the Boston Harbor outfall issue. And it seems in the last three years I have become more aware of these regional issues.

"It will be hard to offset her notoriety, but I'm getting myself known and I think I'll be able to draw her into a discussion of the important issues the three towns are facing," he added.

"Where was Mary Jeanette during this entire negotiation process for an intermunicipal sewer agreement?" he stated. "She was nowhere to be found. For reasons like that, I find it important to seek this office."

John Silva

Silva said Rep. Murray's feigned concern that he would oppose his former boss, is "an old political ploy. It's nothing more than an interesting political ploy," he said this week. "She is not shocked by this. I am good friends with her son, Phillip, and I told him about my intentions. Last summer I told her about it. She said then she hoped I wouldn't do it. Since that time, I have attended many of the same political events as Rep. Murray, and I had nomination papers in hand. This is no surprise to her."

Rep. Murray was the first woman president of the Massachusetts Legislative Association, and was part of the first father/daughter legislative team in Massachusetts history. She currently holds the state house seat once occupied by her father, the late Nathaniel Hurwitz.

Council on Aging forms health volunteer group

In addition to last week's graduation, the Cohasset Council of Aging was the recipient of a $10,000 EOEA grant which will provide a coordinator for the SHINE program this year. That is a job Bryanton will happily transfer to new coordinator Karen Corcoran, who also serves as Cohasset's senior outreach worker.

There are more than 200 volunteer SHINE counselors in the state, according to Barton-Burke. The program is now in its third year, and has served more than 2,220 clients at senior centers, senior housing and nutrition sites throughout the state.

The main purpose of the program, she explained, is to enable seniors to counsel their peers in the complex area of Medicaid reimbursements and eligibility, and health insurance. The most up-to-date information is disseminated from the EOEA office through Barton-Burke and Kathy Glenville, her liason with health insurance policy information. The program is under the supervision and guidance of Andy Bater, assitant secretary of EOEA.

The SHINE volunteers were given a five-day intensive training course in 20 areas of health benefits and information. "It is a rigorous program," Barton-Burke explained. Following the training, volunteers are given a 15-page take home examination. The coordinator then met with the volunteers and went through the exam with them on an individual basis. If they satisfactorily passed the examination, they could continue in the program as a SHINE counselor.

Graduates of the Cohasset program were awarded a handful of citations and certificates from local legislators. Senator William Golden, who was instrumental along with Bryanton in initiating a SHINE program for the South Shore, awarded his constituents with citations from the state Senate. "He acknowledges your accomplishments and is grateful that you deemed this necessary to help the seniors in your towns," his legislative aide, Alison Romick told the graduates.

Nancy O'Toole, legislative aide to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, also awarded the graduates with citations from the House of Representatives to residents of her district.

Marshfield residents and SHINE graduates Marion McLaughlin and Priscilla Mullen were provided with citations from Rep. Frank Hynes.

Local graduates of the health insurance program included Chester and Eleanor Smith, and Tony Finnegan of Cohasset. Joanne Powers of the Hingham Council on Aging also graduated from the state program.

Cohasset SHINE volunteers will be available to assist senior residents with health insurance questions by calling 383-9112.

Town to host 4th annual health fair May 12

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

For the fourth year, a townwide health services day will be observed by a combination of local agencies.

The Cohasset Health Fair, sponsored by the Council on Aging, the Social Service League and the Board of Health, will be held Thursday, May 12 at the town hall and the Second Congregational Church from 1 to 4 p.m.

It is a time for everyone who has been postponing that anxiously-anticipated trip to the doctor, to visit with health professionals in a friendly, non-threatening, neighborly atmosphere. Within a fair-type atmosphere with lots of people and activity, various medical personnel will be available for health screenings and to answer any questions about good health and well-being.

Public Health Nurse Mary Ann Hansen and Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton once again are organizing the popular event along with Health Agent Joseph Godzik. "The purpose," according to Hansen, "is to make people think about their health and bodies and the need to take care of themselves and visit their doctors and start thinking about maintaining their health."

Bryanton agreed the health fair, which is now a tradition in Cohasset, is a preventative measure offered by the town. "We looking to prevent any problems. The screenings offered at the fair and the professionals we'll have available to answer questions will provide an indicator. It will be up to the individual to follow their questions with a visit to their own doctor," she stated, recalling specific instances when people who attended the fair were made aware of a problem or concern, and were later treated successfully in the physician's office.

"A man last year came to the fair and had a cholesterol screening," she said. "He had no idea there was a problem. But his screenings indicated it was on the high side and he went to his doctor. He's been following a diet and has lost 25 pounds. To this day he still thanks us for the service we provided."

Hansen recalled another woman who had her blood pressure checked during her visit to the fair along with a group of friends. Her pressure was high and she made an immediate appointment with a physician. "Her blood pressure is now under control. But this is another instance where someone found this a fun place to go, rather than visiting her doctor first. The fair is simply a non-threatening, fun place, and yet it serves a very serious purpose," according to Hansen.

The health fair takes many months to organize, she said, noting that committee members Judy Fitzsimmons, Judy Collins, Virginia Riley, Sally O'Neil, Karen Corcoran, Bryanton and herself, have worked for months to schedule interesting demonstrations and helpful screening procedures.

In addition, two high school students, Andrew Nawn and Colleen Geary participated in the planning. At their suggestion, professionals in the fields of nutrition and eating disorders, sports medicine, dermotology will attend and information about teenage sexuality and AIDS will be included in the fair.

"We really think the fair is something many people look forward to - young and old," Hansen said. "But we want to emphasize that if people have concerns and questions, or if they've had a high reading on their screenings, they should not panic. They should simply consult their doctor for a full examination. The fair is intended only to be an indicator and not a complete diagnosis."

Among the area health professionals who will attend the fair and be available for consultations are: Margaret Barton-Burke, an oncology nurse who will conduct breast examinations in a closed, private room at the rear of town hall; the Bridge Program of Massachusetts, under the direction of the Commission for the Blind, where adaptive devices for the legally blind will be demonstrated; the Arthritis Foundation will have information available along with Alcoholics Anonymous and Al Anon.

Janet Codley, an optometrist, will make eyeglass adjustments, and screen for glaucoma; the VNA of the South Shore will have Maura Breen conducting blood pressure screenings; Dr. Susan Emmer, a Cohasset chiropractor and holistic health professional will attend; and Podiatrist Gary Count of Scituate will conduct screenings.

Dr. Barry Tufts, DDS, will provide oral cancer screenings; Dr. Stephen Emmet, will answer questions regarding eating disorders; Patricia Messings, a nutritionist, will also be available to answer eating disorder concerns and questions; and Kenneth Reed will provide dermotology screenings from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

The Boston Guild for the Hard of Hearing will have a van parked along William Long Street in front of town hall for eye testing; Magill and Gardner will attend with information regarding sports medicine; St. Margaret's Hospital will have representatives there to discuss teen pregancies and sexulaity by representatives of their Family Life Center; and Andrea Blumberg will provide nutritional and cholesterol screenings.

Eye Health Services of South Weymouth will have representatives in attendance; information regarding AIDS will be available; lung capacity testing will be conducted again this year by Norfolk County/ Newton Lung Association; Creative Lifts of Scituate will demonstrate adaptive equipment for the handicapped; and the local fire department will demonstrate CPR and the Jaws of Life rescue equipment.

Business asked to take lead in managing solid waste

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition wants the region's businesses to take the lead in solid waste management.

Meeting with the heads of area chambers of commerce, the coalition and state Sen. William Golden said they want businesses to spearhead a campaign for controlling the waste stream.

They proposed implementing measures such as recycling, composting and incineration on the South Shore.

Last week the coalition announced it was awarded a $125,000 state grant to develop a comprehensive solid waste management pilot program for the South Shore.

"We want to begin immediately," Golden said. "and we want to begin with the business community. We would like each chamber to adopt the policy reduce, replace and recycle and ask each of your members to take the pledge."

Golden said that when the coalition was formed about two years ago chambers of commerce from each of the organization's 10 towns were asked what they believed to be the greatest problems faced by their communities. Solid waste disposal was among the top three problems in each town.

"Growing up in Cohasset, all I knew was that the trash went in the basket and to the Cedar Street landfill and that was that," he commented. "The town had complete control.

"But when I first ran for office, I learned that Duxbury had to pay $13 per ton to have its trash hauled away. Now they pay $96 per ton."

Golden said the cost of waste disposal is taking its toll on local budgets, infringing on other items such as education.

The coalition will hire a consultant to devise a plan that could make the South Shore self-sufficient in solid waste disposal.

Paul Barry, a Cohasset chamber member and owner of the private Cohasset Heights landfill, said implementing some facets of waste disposal could be difficult.

He noted that the proposed construction of an incinerator on the Weymouth town line has drawn sharp criticism from area residents.

Golden said public education about waste disposal will be a key element of the regional program.

The state will be cracking down on communities to control waste and is expected to impose regulations for solid waste disposal, Golden said.

"If we can as a region work to solve the problem ourselves," he said, "then we can control costs and unwanted environmental impacts."

Golden said the region could avoid state coercion if it tries to solve the problem itself.

"I think we can put together a program that all the towns can join on a voluntary basis," he said. "It will not begin and end with recycling or composting or trash-to-energy, but will incorporate all these things."

A main concern, he said, is to remove bulk and toxicity from the waste stream. If toxicity is removed, the region can more easily meet environmental regulations.

If toxicity is culled out of the waste stream, incineration will be a more viable alternative for the South Shore, because the ash could then be buried in local landfills, he said.

Golden noted that ash would take up less room than bulky trash, so the valuable resource– landfill space– could be preserved.

Janet O'Brien, a Hanover selectman, said another measure to preserve landfill space would be the use of degradable plastic bags.

Plans involve having South Shore Industries package the bags.

The coalition asked chamber leaders to promote their use among their memberships and to replace

Voters grudgingly approve warrant articles

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

As the time approaches to face several override proposals, voters may be feeling a little stingy.

At Monday night's special town meeting, voters grudgingly approved a sprinkler system in the town hall addition. And they carefully questioned expensive clean-up costs for two oil spills.

But in the end, they approved all appropriations.

Voters were asked to appropriate $32,000 for the installation of a sprinkler system in the new town hall addition. The system was not included in the architects's original drawings for the addition, because he failed to take in account the square footage of the basement.

The fire chief noticed the discrepancy and ordered the plans to include a "dry" sprinkler system throughout the addition.

Roy Fitzsimmons of Doane Street suggested the architect could be held liable for missing this requirement. But Selectman Rocco Laugelle said it was simply a misunderstanding between the fire chief and the architect, explaining the chief had not seen completed drawings which included the basement measurements until construction was set to begin.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock informed town meeting that the sprinkler system is a state law "that's been on the books for quite a while."

And Sohier Street resident Stephen Bartow contended it was the architect's responsibility to supply the fire chief with accurate and up-to-date information. "If he did not do this, the responsibility lies with the architect and not with the town to supply an additional $32,000," Bartow stated.

Despite the charge, town meeting approved the appropriation by a 190-117 margin.

Voters did not happily appropriate more than $130,000 for the clean up of oil spills at the high school and at Lily Pond. Several voters questioned whether only one environmental firm is always utilized in such instances.

And one resident asked whether the contaminated soil from the underground oil tank leak at the high school had been removed.

Executive Secertary Donald Andrew said the soil had been transported to a Maine resource recovery facility. But he was corrected by Supt. Stephen Hart, who explained that the contaminated dirt is still on school property. The school is attempting to gain DEQE permission to treat the soil on site, so the resulting product can be disposed at the local landfill for much less money.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby also noted that Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray just recently filed legislation to reimburse the town for the $100,000 Lily Pond clean-up and the $26,000 project at the high school.

Regarding the oil spill last fall at Lily Pond, King Street resident Sumner Smith suggested the oil leak had not been totally removed. He said there was still a sheen on the surface of the water by the shore.

Water Supt. Ben Curley agreed with the assessment, but noted that at no time had any oil entered the intact area of the water treatment plant. Water commissioner William Montuori noted that testing of the water will continue to be tested each month for another eight or nine months.

Residents approved the clean-up by a voice vote.

Voters also approved $80,000 for the operation of the town's transfer station at the landfill. This amount, which must also be approved as part of the general budget override question May 14, was not included in the health board's budget for the landfill during the next fiscal year.

There were some questions by voters concerning a $6,000 pad mounted transformer for the town hall addition. Some residents, including Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood Street, questioned whether it was essential to hide the electrical wires running to the town hall. "My feeling is that $6,000 could go a long way to other things, especially improving the common," he stated.

Selectman Laugelle said town officials have long supported the idea of burying all utility wires around the common, but the expense has been prohibitive. He said the transformer pad was not among the specifications in the architects plans, adding that "no one is perfect. We tried our best."

By a voice vote, the proposal was adopted.

And although the advisory committee did not support the purchase of a $20,000 truck for the tree and park and the highway depts., voters approved the request. Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle detailed the horrendous condition of the department's current truck which was purchased in 1981. During a snowstorm the truck was involved in an accident and the frame was bent. The truck can not be used for anything, Laugelle said, "except for hauling feathers." Only 35 of the 286 voters present opposed the purchase.

Among the other items approved at town meeting Monday night were: $4,000 for repair and replacement of a section of the slate roof on town hall; adoption of a $20,000 minimum salary for teachers; $3,2000 for repair of the North Cohasset fire station roof; $63,155 to supplement the budgetary accounts in two two departments; and $27,000 to close the bond issue on the town hall addition. That sum was omitted from the total project cost approved by voters at the special town meeting in 1987.

Community Garden Club events

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is sponsoring two events in May.

May 10 from 1 to 5 p.m., the Garden Club will hold a standard flower show done in the traditions of "Art in Bloom." Each flower arrangement will compliment or interpret a painting on display at the South Shore Art Center on Ripley Road.

The theme of the show is "Genesis" meaning beginnings of the art center, of the tradition of holding standard flower shows in the club, and celebrating the beginning of a new growing season (spring). Tickets are $5 and are available at the Cohasset Community Center in advance. Tickets will also be available at the door. Everyone is invited to attend.

The second event will be a fashion show and the annual luncheon held at the Barker Tavern Tuesday, May 24 at 11 a.m.

The fashions will be done by Talbots of Hingham and the furs will be presented by Kakas of Boston. Cost is $16.

□ Professor and Mrs. Andrew Pettigrew formerly of Cohasset, recently spent five days visiting in the area, spending time with the Fitzsimmons Family of Doane Street. Professor Pettigrew was in the United States to lecture at Harvard and M.I.T.

The Pettigrews, now of Leamington Spa, England would like to swap their huge five-bedroomed Victorian home, and car, with a local family for three to four weeks this summer. Flexibility lies between mid July and September. Leamington has a main line British Rail Station, with easy journeys from both Gatwick and Heathrow airports in London. The house is one mile from the station, with taxis abounding. They are located 15m south of Coventry, 12m from Stratford, adjacent to the Cotswolds, and only 4m from medieval Warwick Castle. Leamington's excellent shopping district with pubs, restaurants, banks, and even a MacDonalds is only a five minute walk. Contact Christine Kelly of Norwell, 659-7221 for information. Mrs. Kelly's family swapped with the Pettigrews three years ago with great success!

□ If you heard that Walter Sweeney was in town right after Easter, you heard correctly. As everyone knows, Walter has worked hard in his crusade to get kids aware and away from drugs, and he surely deserves all of the honors he received.

Passing one hurdle

Another hurdle has been completed, and the Ward sewer plan faces its final test May 14. After six years, the town may finally be nearing that elusive goal of sewering at least a portion of this town.

One need only ask the sewer commissioners to learn what an enormous task this has been. To defeat a major proposal such as the Metcalf and Eddy project, one that would have easily passed in most towns, was historic for little Cohasset. We didn't realize then the consequences of our actions as the state continued to punish us for our independent actions.

Although we tried to create a sewer system best suited to our community, the state pushed us against a corner each time. One commissioner estimated that $50,000 has been spent trying to convince the state we had a grant-eligible system developed for the town.

And now we have a plan that is reimbursable by the state - albeit not for the 94 percent we originally counted on. It is not a plan without problems, as was evident by a strong showing of opposition at town meeting.

But one thing we should remember. Our fight to sewer Cohasset should never be seen as a personal conflict between personalities within the town. The sewer commissioners, after all, are not receiving any compensation for their endorsement of the Ward Plan. It is not something they won, nor is it something they received monetary rewards to support.

It is simply the plan selected as the best suited for Cohasset by the commissioner and members of the citizens sewer advisory committee. No one has a personal stake in the Ward Engineering company, and no one should hurl accusations that assume such a thought.

Listening to opponents of the Ward Plan, one receives the impression that it's us against them. There seem to be people endlessly supportive of the Ward Plan, and those who never tire of opposing it. That's fine, as long as personalities are left out of the disagreement.

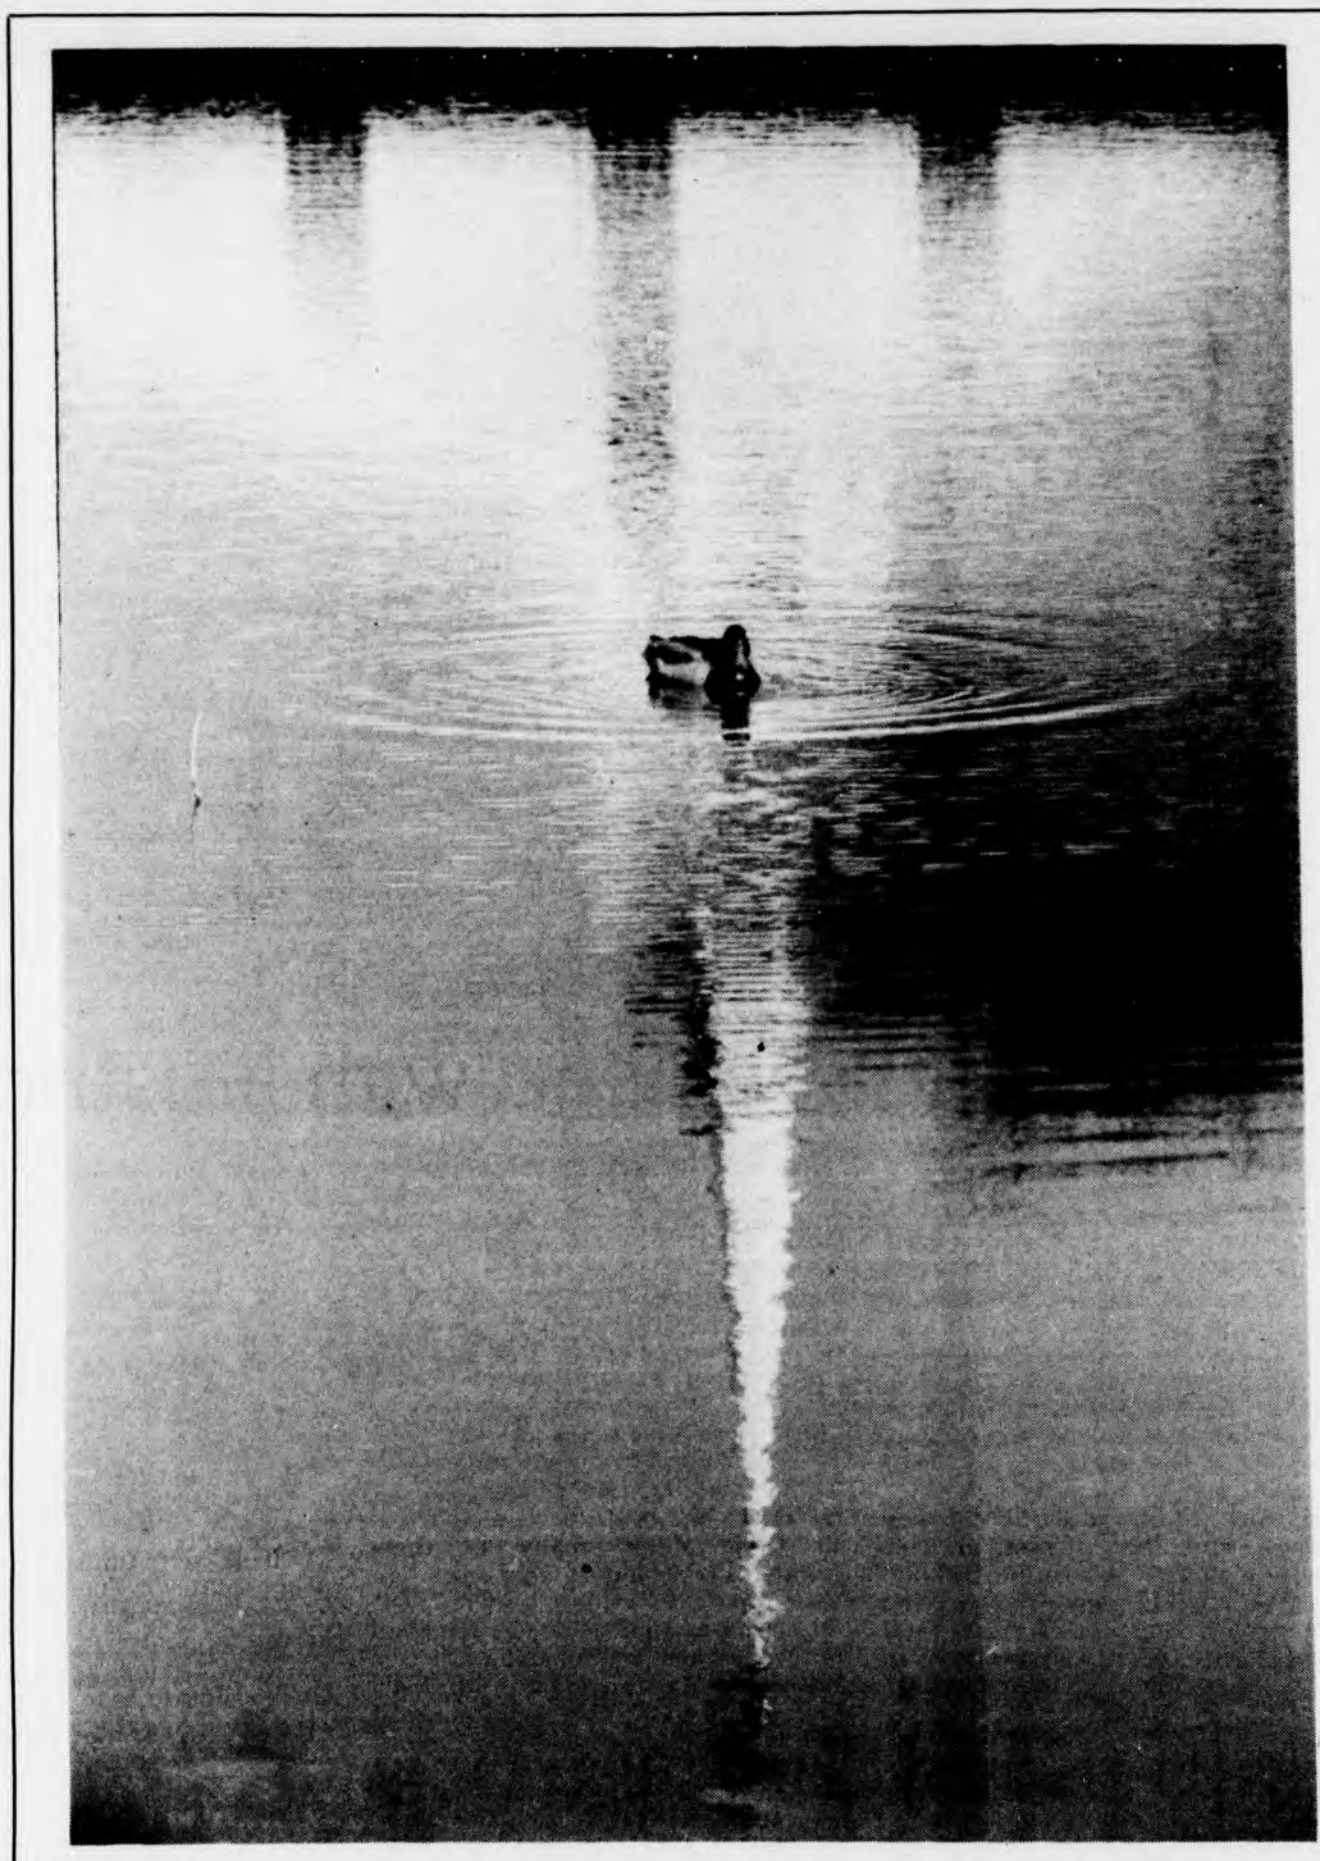
The sewer commissioners, whether they are right or wrong about this plan, are not in this involved process for monetary gain, or personal satisfaction. They are simply residents eager to serve the town in the manner best suited to their interests and expertise.

They sincerely believe this is the best route for the town, and no one should think they are leading us down the wrong path for some deceptive reason.

Either you are for the Ward Plan, or you are not. Hopefully, the fine character of this town will be preserved, without sending us into bankruptcy.

As voters were reminded continually during Monday night's meeting, because the two sewer articles were approved, it will now necessitate a majority vote on the special election override ballot. If you voted to support the Ward Plan, you are obliged and responsible to cast an affirmative ballot for a debt exclusion override.

Just because we passed one hurdle in this marathon doesn't mean we won't be up against many more. Support for the override to construct the Hull pipeline with more streets added to the sewered areas may mean we are one step closer to beginning this long-awaited project. But it is only a beginning.



The solitude of spring was found by this lonely duck in the midst of the pond at Cohasset Common. The familiar steeple of the First Parish Church is reflected in the water. (Alan Chapman)

Resident questions Ward sewer plan

Letters

To the Editor:

Some more questions needing answers about the Ward Plan.

1. When, under the Ward Plan, the present plant is converted to a pumping staton, will sewage from present conventional sewers have to be "desludged" so only effluent goes to Hull? Who will pay for this?

2. On Articles 16 and 17 of May 2 Warrant, is it fair for the "to-be-sewered" area to be expected to pay entirely for a piping system (laterals) that they do not want, and a system involving septic systems, they do not want? The vote on Article 15 should be taken before any action on 16 and 17. According to "pipe companies," the difference in price per foot is minimal, less than $1 a foot. Since this project is a long-time investment for homewners, they should be the ones to decide on what they should have and pay for.

3. The Commissioners, in discussing an override of Prop. 2½ say Article 16 and 17 should not be considered for debt exclusion since they will be paid entirely by the users. Article 16 and 17 as written in the warrrant can be construed as a true case of discrimination — why one part of the town should pay for a sewer project, mandated by the entire town, and when another part of town had its system paid for by the town. A possible class action suit that could cost the town both money and precious time.

I took Charlie DeSantis' advice at town meeting Monday night, and called checking on "innovative sewers." Williamstown, MA has 2 houses with effluent systems hooking into the conventional system of the town. Granby, MA, of which we heard so much in 1984 and 1985, is still "studying the Ward Plan," to tie in two or three streets.

So much for the highly vaunted small diameter effluent system.

Caravel-by-Sea filled with illustrious history

By Merilyn de Vos

The building of the new Caravel-by-the-Sea residences at 131 Nichols Road, Cohasset, has had the rumor mills churning for months.

Sitting smack on Little Harbor with the ocean across the street, the estate boasts a very high-priced, if not priceless view. Add to that a lovely mansion which shares its history with some of America's illustrious families, and the interest in The Caravel's recent renovation is not surprising.

Named for the type of vessel that was wrecked in the 17th century on the adjacent beach (the mast and tiller of which adorn the writer's apartment) the estate has always had a special quality.

The original mansion was built around 1900 by the estate's first owner, Albert C. Burrage. Burrage, a spectacular success story in both his public and private business ventures, was also a gardener par excellence. His horticultural collection of 40,000 plants was the largest such private assemblage in the world.

The Burrages spent summers in Cohasset until 1915, when The Caravels was sold to Cyrus H. McCormick Jr., son of the inventor of the reaper.

Cyrus Jr., his wife Harriet, and his sisters Mary Virginia and Anita would travel to Cohasset for the summer season from their Chicago home.

Their June 30 arrival was an annual spectacle for which much of the town would turn out. Arriving by train, they needed four cars to hold their luggage, sporting equipment, livestock and staff of 60.

Fourteen were house staff and the balance were for the then huge (100 acre) grounds. Seems they ate a lot of eggs, too, as a gross a week were delived just for the staff's nourishment.

The McCormicks thought nothing about indulging in any whimsy or excess that struck their fancy. Tales of their colorful residency abound in the town to this day.

Mary Virginia was the most spoiled. In fact, her outrages were so widely known that because of them the McCormicks were "refused" residency in Newport and came to Cohasset as a second choice.

For example, it seems Mary Virginia dearly loved playing tennis, at least if she could win, and went so far as to always travel with a partner whom she was likely to beat.

Once, she decided she would like to play tennis at night and had a court built for her pleasure. She overlooked the presence of nighttime bugs, however, and after her first and only game decided she didn't like playing at night after all and had the court torn down the next day.

After 10 years, the McCormicks left Cohasset and the estate was sold to a series of year-round owners until 1953. That year Charles Orchard Smith, the sixth owner and an architect, redesigned the interior of The Caravels into 11 apartments.

Long-term residents were the rule in these units, many of them wonderfully colorful characters in their own rights.

There was Mrs. George Felton, who outlived her automobile-collector husband. The man had 14 Rolls Royces and an undermined number of Bentleys and Rovers, only one of which could carry him to his final resting place. Some of the remainder were stored in the barn.

Edith Baker, known as "The General" for her strength of character, was one of the first competitive golfers. An unusual woman, her elaborate parties were the stuff of legend.

Dorothy Rocray had no intention of moving when she happened by The Caravels one day in 1956. Enchanted by the place, she took a vacant unit and informed her boyfriend that they could now be married as they had a place to live. Widowed, she lives there to this day.

The list goes on to include a silent movie star whose butler served her lunch on the beach from a silver platter, the top designer for Talbots, a gypsy, a radio personality and, now, perhaps, you, yourself — if you care to purchase one of the six new condominium units fashioned out of the old apartments in 1987 and now on sale.

In 1974 the estate was sold to the present owner, Caravel Cove Limited Partnership shared by Walter Winchester, a big Boston and South Shore developer, and Anne Preston, also a developer and a native of Belguim.

For 12 years Preston managed the rentals at The Caravels but three years ago Winchester decided he wanted to live in the building himself. Preston designed a unit for him overlooking Little Harbor that was modern in design and used the best materials she could find, almost all of them from Europe.

Enticed by the stunning results, the partners made a commitment to create six similarly lush units in the rest of the building because the place was falling down and they had to do something with it anyway.

Preston said it was her dream to build a place to European standards and design. "We did this because we thought there were six other people who were willing to pay to live the way Walter does."

By European design Preston means "built for a lifetime, customized, private, and having an atmosphere of subdued elegance." As for the way this translates into the way Winchester lives — it knocks your socks off.

Winchester says, "I've had a hand in building 10,000 dwelling units and have had only one chance to take an estate like this to do something so special.

"It is very unusual to live in a place you develop and when the chance came, because of turnover, to do this we grabbed it.

"It was Annie's dream and she pushed me to take the chance. You could never do this if you didn't have the water."

It is the mansion's water site, of course, that allowed for development that is selling at about $400 a square foot.

Preston took a year just to research the market for the materials she wished to use. Winchester, who refers often to the priviedge of working with her, says her dedication gave him the chance "to share in something like this myself. All the European stuff was her idea. She was 100 percent committed and when have you ever heard of a contractor who picked out every piece of building material herself."

And despite the inevitable anxious moments, the year-plus rehabilitation seems to have been fun, a dream come true for both of them.

In keeping with the history of The Caravels, the six finished units are special. Named after some of their former tennants, the "suites" are called McCormick, Felton, Baker and the like.

All but one unit is two bedrooms and they are big enough to live in without serious compromise if you are moving into them from a house.

Each unit has a marble bathroom with an ocean view from the tub. Preston feels the bathroom is a most important part of a house. Fitted with an eight-inch wide, brass shower head, cable-TV hookup and ample marble shelving on which to rest a glass of whatever, the master bathrooms are meant to be lived in, not just used.

Otherwise restrained people, who usually measure their words, struggle to find fresh ways to express their enthusiasim for the new units.

Joe Crossen, a developer who describes himself as "deeply involved in the building business" said he has never seen "anyone put so much effort into doing it right. As far as the competition goes, there is none."

Crossen just happened to be visiting the day Winchester was being interviewed but the day of the formal open house, April 10, some 500 invited guests vied with one another to squeal and gasp their approval of the design and materials in the new units.

The open house was quite an event in itself as the guests indulged in $4000 worth of hors d'oeuvres that included lobster, Beluga caviar and smoked mussels. The champagne added another hefty tab.

"We wanted to share the food, wine and atmosphere that have been a Caravel tradition," Anne said. Indeed.

The two-bedroom units start at about $600,000 and go up to $925,000 for the model unit that comes with its own lot and a private entrance. The penthouse defies all superlatives. Suffice to say that it has everything that fancy and taste can offer to make it sumptuous and fun. The price for about 4,000 square feet of living space is $1,350,000.

Codman Association, in defiance of its policy of not handling anything smaller than 30 units, is doing the marketing. Jay Grossman, executive vice president, said, "We (Codman) have to be associated with this property."

So now, only 10 days from the open house Walter Winchester and Anne Preston are waiting to see if their gamble will pay off. The positive feedback they have received is gratifying but, Anne said, the big question remains, "Will people pay for what they like?"

A current South Shore project by Winchester's firm, State Street Development, is Mariner Hill apartments in Marshfield.

issues that resulted in a lack of agreement between the two commissions. "And a lack of an agreement, would preclude the whole arrangement," DeSantis said. As of Monday, two issues had been resolved, with two unsettled items dividing the towns.

Monday morning DeSantis stated, "There has been substantial progress in the last day or two and I suspect that by today we will have bridged that gap."

The first issue which temporarily blocked the passage of an intermunicipal agreement was the actual cash amount Cohasset would pay to Hull for treatment of its sewage. The amount originally quoted by Hull commissioners was $392,000 - an agreeable total for both parties, DeSantis figured.

"But due to revised calculations by their engineer that they just arrived at, our costs were substantially underestimated. This news came about last Thursday and it hit us hard," DeSantis said. The new amount proposed by Hull was $460,000 - an unacceptable total according to the Cohasset officials.

"Our position is, that regardless of how the calculations were made, we agreed to $392,000. At the 11th hour we are unwilling and unable to make such an adjustment," he added. The Cohasset commissioners did make some adjustments, however, as the newly revised total was set at $409,000. DeSantis explained that closing costs of Hull's bond project were not calculated into the costs, an amount Cohasset was always expected to share. "We agreed to increase our payment by $17,000 but not a penny more," he added.

Of the four issues which were most difficult to negotiate, the most significant concern to Cohasset officials was the definition of "average daily flow" within the municipal agreement.

"Our definition since 1983 has been the total amount of flow divided by 365, equals the average daily amount," DeSantis explained. "But on Thursday (April 28) Hull changed that definition to a monthly average. The flow for the month was to be calculated by dividing the total by 30 days. The effect of this would severely reduce the amount of the new sewer service area. We have some months that by an act of God, we have lots of rain and our flows are increased proportionately. That would have been an unfair definition for Cohasset, and we would not accept it. Hull has decided to accept our definition."

The third issue which divided the towns were the terms of payment by Cohasset to Hull. Hull intended to require the entire $409,000 payment within 30 days of a signed contract. Cohasset refused, saying until services are rendered, the town would not expend any appropriation. "As an elected body, we are unable to make expenditures of appropriated monies until that service is rendered. Therefore, the Cohasset Sewer Commission can not and will not make payments to Hull unless authorization for aspects of that project have been approved and assigned grants by the state. At that time, all monies due Hull for the particular aspect of the project will be forwarded immediately," he stated.

DeSantis was optimistic that before the special town meeting, this matter would be resolved.

The fourth issue which remained unresolved until the day of town meeting was the "breaches and remedies" clause within the agreement. DeSantis said this was an item that needed the most work, simply because it had received the least attention by negotiators.

This clause would allow Hull to issue a penalty to Cohasset for exceeding its maximum daily flow. The legal and monetary aspects of this clause were agreed to by town meeting Monday night.

Visitors from Egypt

Recent headlines have announced, "The Egyptians Are Coming To Boston."

Mrs. Marie Price's afternoon kindergarteners waited with great anticipation to greet their Egyptian guests. The classroom was overflowing with Egyptian memorabilia and music as Mohamad Hussein and his cousin Karima Mohamad Hussein of Cairo, Egypt entered.

Mohamad and Karima brought magnificent artifacts from their country. They brought a hammered copper and brass wall hanging of the Mohamad Ali Mosque at the Citadel, Egyptian Battle Shield and vases. The children enjoyed the interior cedar smell of an intricate designed shell box. Mohamad shared a piece of papyrus. He explained how ancient paper was made from the papyrus plant. He demonstrated how it was sliced, dried and woven into paper which lasted for many centuries.

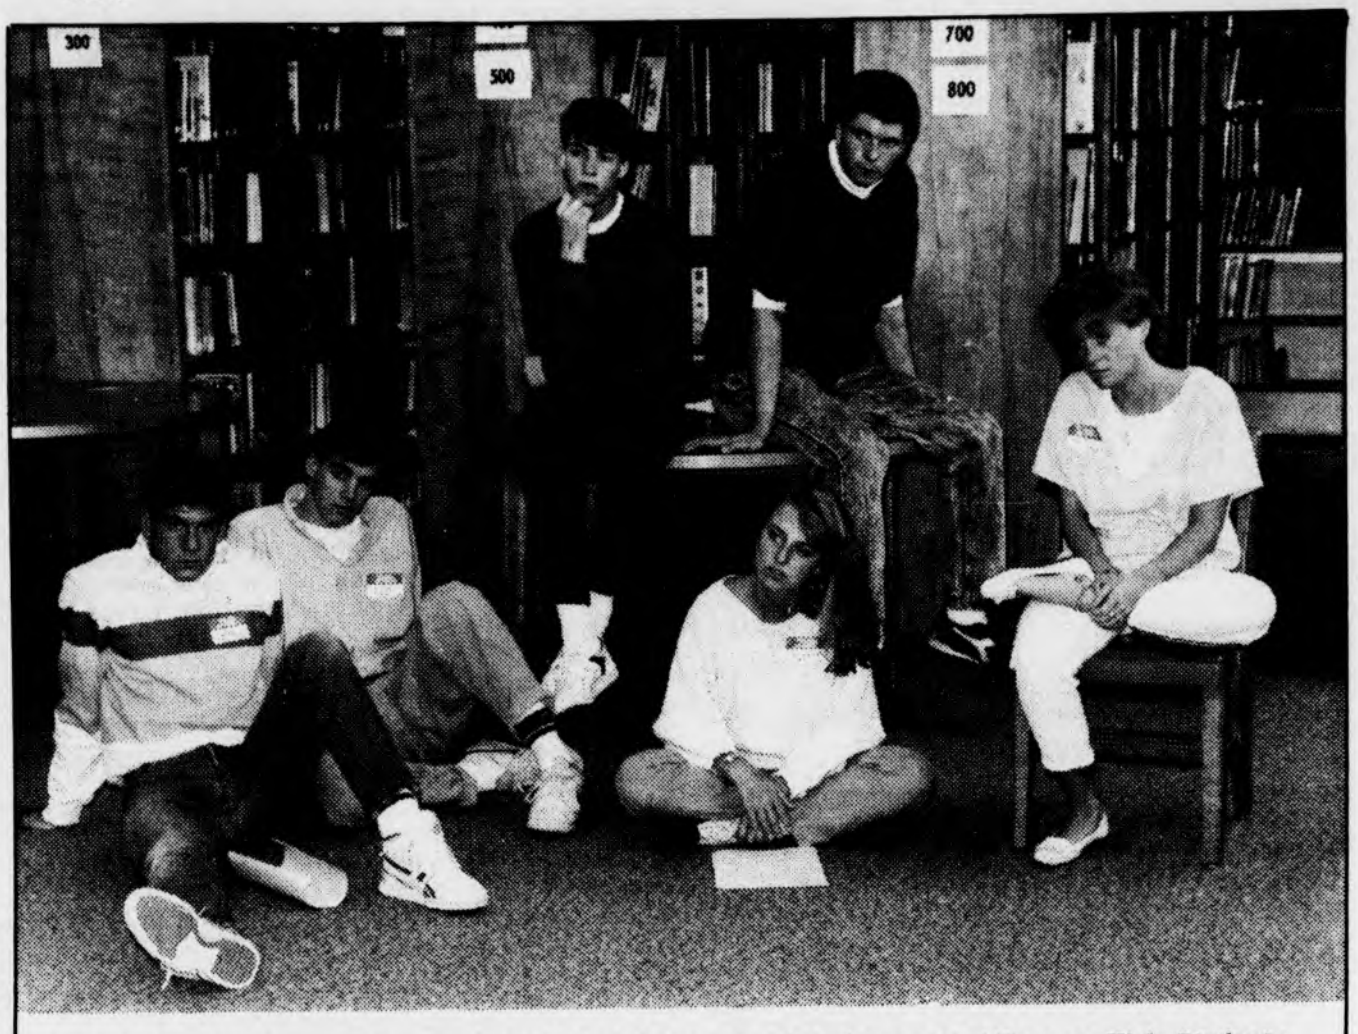
Among the highlights of the visit was when Mohamad donned his traditional country dress — a loose fitting, floor length robe (dress) called a galablia. Mohamad explained that it was long and loose to facilitate the circulation of air around one's body as Egypt is a desert land.

The children were delighted with Karima and Mohamad carrying on a conversation in their native tongue — Arabic.

Karima enjoyed teaching the children their favorite words in Arabic. They learned awya for yes; montshaker — thank you; salam — hello; salam aleko — good bye; inshallah — if God wills.

The visit ended all too quickly when the children waved salam aleko to their guests.

Our visitors so enjoyed the manners and wonderful questions from the afternoon group they asked if they could return to meet Mrs. Price's a.m. group. The children were delighted to answer aywa!



Students from Cohasset High recently participated in a peer education group at Hanover High. Students from Hanover, Duxbury and Norwell also took part. (Kym Marcella)

Arbor Day celebrated

To commemorate Arbor Day, the Junior Gardeners of Cohasset planned a special tree-planting ceremony at the Deer Hill School.

"Junior Gardeners" is the sponsored group of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. The group meets monthly during the school year to learn the arts of herb-gathering, flower arranging, horticulture and related crafts. Comprised of students in grades four, five and six, the group has adopted the nurturing of the gardens in the Deer Hill School quadrangle as a special project.

Under the directon of Garden Club Betsy Good and Regina Schultz, the young gardeners have planted dozens of springtime bulbs, fall marigolds, and a harvest of snow peas.

For the Arbor Day celebration this April, the Junior Gardeners sponsored a tree-planting ceremony at the Deer Hill School. Several maples had been blown down during the hurricane of 1985, and Mrs. Schultz and Mrs. Good urged the Tree and Park Dept., headed by Peter Laugelle, to replace the trees. The Tree and Park Dept. replaced the trees, and a ribbon-cutting ceremony and dedication were held last week at the Deer Hill School.

Current members include Meredith Equi, Keeley Dwyer, Liz Good, Erin Devine, Danielle Nohe, Stephie Lubitz (4th grade), Caitlin Hurley, Molly Hammill, Jessica Jenkins, Brooke Lombardy (5th Grade), Sarah Atherton, Sarah Kirk, Cilla Goff, Renee Prisble, Courtney Schultz, and Julie Good (6th Grade).

Volunteers will meet in the Osgood Parking lot at 10 a.m. Coffee and Donuts will be provided. Volunteers will work in teams and should bring a picnic lunch, gloves and clippers. Get your own team together, if you'd like! If you can help or would like more information, please call Debbie Cook at 383-6313.

Second grade poets

The children at the Joseph Osgood School have been creating stories and poems. The following poems have been written by Mrs. Collins' second grade students.

Sunshine

The sun shines in my face,
Like a beautiful breeze
And I hear the bees when I ride my bike.
I hear the tweet, tweet, tweet of the birds in the trees.
I hear the green grass blowing in the breeze.
The flowers grow.
Now I go back to the Sunshine!!

Patrick Leahy

Birds

Birds I like.
They fly and fly.
They almost reach the sky.
I almost wonder if I could go.
Ho, Ho, Ho.

Gregory Bilton

April

April is the joke month.
The joke month indeed
A time of pranks and a time of silliness
When you watch the pink ant go by
And the pennies that stick to the ground
Then you know
April Fool's Day is here.

Andrew Hamilton

Blossoms

Blossoms are nice
Yes sir ree
They're so nice
It hardly could be
Try not to step on them
Wops! Dear me!

Spring is Half the World

Spring is half the world
Shining from the sky

I Like to Play

I like to play,
I like to play,
I like to play everyday.
Today I would like to play in the woods
But I'm so busy I can't!
I'll ask and I'll ask
But I know what I'll get
Just between you and me
I'll do it anyway.

Aaron Sawchuk

Birds Can Fly

Birds can fly
That's a point
If they didn't
What would they become?
An ostrich
What would they become?
But I'm glad
They still can fly.

Nate Cotter

Spring

Spring is nice.
The flowers are great.
You are too
And so am I.
The sun shines almost every day.
It makes us feel wonderful in a special way.

April Vacation

April vacation is very soon,
On Monday we're going in a big balloon.
On Tuesday we're going to have steaked baboon.
On Wednesday we're going downstairs.
On Thursday we're hunting bears.
And on Friday we're going to retire.

Girls remain undefeated in CHS track play

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Jen Coley walked away with four first-places and Sonia Bulter placed in three events to lead Cohasset (2-0) to its South Shore League victory, 86-50, over Hull (1-1) at Norwell last Wednesday.

Coley captured first-place in the 110 hurdles with a time of 17.3. She then won the 330 hurdles (52.2 time). From there, she was victorious in two field events —long jump (16') and triple jump (32'7½").

Butler got things rolling for the Lady Skippers when she was a double-winner in the 100 and 200-yard dashes. In the 100, she crossed the finish line in 13.5, and in the 220, 26.7. She placed behind Coley in the long jump event, giving Cohasset a clean sweep with Cindy Dormer taking third.

The other multiple winner for Cohasset was Kerry Kirkendall. She won the two-mile event, outdistancing her opponent in the time of 13:04.5. In the javelin, she tossed the metal rod approximately 23 yards or 68'10" for the victory.

Cohasset also receive first-place finishes from Dormer (440, 1:09), Liz O'Leary (880, 2:35), Tisha Wallace (shot put, (29'3") and Nancy Reilly (discus, 89'6").

Cohasset also swept in two events on the sunny, humid afternoon. In the 100-yard dash, Cindy Smith placed third behind Butler and O'Leary, and in the 220, Butler, Amy Craft and Dormer teamed together (one-two-three position respectively) to take the event.

Hull managed to keep the score respectable when they grabbed the final three events of the meet. The Pirates swept the high jump along with the relay — 4X110 and 4X440.

Square Dance the Night Away — Come enjoy and learn to square dance Friday evenings May 13, 20, and 27 at 8 p.m. here at St. Stephen's. The cost is $1 a person and open to all ages. The idea behind three sessions is that by the time we get to the 27 we'll really know how to do-si-do! Come to all or as many as you wish.

The square dance calling will be by Bucky Donaher of Kramer's Hayloft in South Weymouth. The square dances are sponsored by the Fellowship Committee of St. Stephen's and will be held in Walton Rodger's Hall.

Another fellowship event to place on your calendar is the North River Canoe Trip planned for Saturday, June 11.

Pentecost Gospel — Pentecost will be celebrated Sunday, May 22 with baptisms, balloons, and the Gospel read in different languages. When the Spirit descended upon the apostles they proclaimed the Gospel in different languages so that all understood reversing the consequence of the Tower of Babel. If you would like to read the Gospel in a language other than English on this day, let the Rector know and he will see that the reading is given to you. In years past we have had the Gospel read in French, Spanish, Latin, Welsh, German to name a few.

Church school teachers and others interested in crafts will meet at three times to augment the craft segment of our church school program. These meetings will be at different times so that no matter what your schedule you may be able to make one or more of them. The times are Tuesday, May 10 from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m.; Wednesday, May 11 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.; and Saturday, May 21 from 9 a.m. to noon. Committees are in the process of forming and plans are underway for a delightful fair.

Our goals for the fair are fellowship and working together with our friends from other churches, not pressure and trying to outdo last year. After all how can the Rector top Fr. Keohane's diversion of a snow storm last December! Let's all pitch in, do what we can, work together, and have fun!

Classes range from a special workshop for children entering kindergarten in the fall, a 5-6 year old group, 7-8 age group and the 9 year old to 12 year old group will meet evenings 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Each session will provide a different creative experience using varied materials from printing making, nature drawing, clay, painting, collage and a few surprises.

Classes are kept small to provide individual instruction. Prepaid registration is required to insure placement. Closing date is June 10 for registration.

On exhibit during May at the Hingham Public Library are mono-prints created by the spring workshop students.

At the recent art exhibition held at Hingham High School many students art work from the Children's Creativity Workshop program were recognized.

As part of the summer series all students will be able to participate in the annual Clothesline Art Exhibit held in the fall. In the past this has been a celebration of the children's delightful adventures as young artists.

Fitness makes a difference

As reported in the Hingham Herald, a monthly newletter of the Hingham based Mormon church, three members of the congregation ran in the Boston marathon — and finished. They were: Bruce Germinaro of Duxbury who completed the 26 mile race in an excellent time of 3:38. Veteran marathoner Heber Nielsen of Hingham, competing for the first time as a "Master" (runners over 40 years old) did outstandingly well, setting a personal best. And church bishop, Brad Johnson, finished in a bit over 4 hours.

News editor, Bob Edmunds announces, too, that the church's 5th Annual Century Bike Ride is set for May 14. The ride will start this year in Norwell and finish in Rockport. Anyone interested in joining the group may contact Bob at 834-6421.

A women's aerobic class will continue, held in the church gymnasium, 379 Gardner St., Hingham, three times a week (Monday, Wednesday and Friday) at 9:30 a.m. Jill Valentine of Scituate is conducting the class. Women of the community are welcome. Call Jill if you are interested at: 545-1613.

Three winners from each region — South Shore, Greater New Bedford and the Cape and the islands — will be chosen, and one entry will be framed and sent to Washington where it will be hung in the Capitol Building for a full year.

A reception for all participating artists will be held at 4 p.m. Saturday, May 7, at GAR Hall, where Studds will congratulate the winners and meet all the artists.

The art exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday.

Local protection is goal of state agency

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

When developers need state permits to build their projects, the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs makes sure they build with environmental protection in mind.

Local representatives to the South Shore Coalition learned about the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) last week from Stephen Davis, assistant secretary for environmental impact review at the EOEA.

"MEPA is a substantial environmental review program that places a directive on all commonwealth agencies to take all feasible means to avoid or minimize damage to the environment," he said.

Not all development is subject to environmental evaluation by the state, he added. "Theoretically, any project that requires state action is subject to MEPA, but small projects that require a sewer connection permit, for example, never come to us. They do not meet the review thresholds."

Very large projects—over a half-million square feet of space or more than 350 residential units—always must file an environmental impact report with the state, he said.

Projects that are "direct state actions" or projects that are paid for by the state may also have to file environmental impact reports if the EOEA deems necessary, Davis added.

The MEPA review consists of three phases and allows for heavy influence by local authorities and concerned citizens.

"First," he said, "is the filing of the environmental notification form. We then publish a notice in our Environmental Monitor, a bi-monthly publication which lists what's happening at MEPA and also starts some legal time clocks."

Davis explained that when a notification form has been published, there is a 30-day review and decision period.

During that period, MEPA staff consult with various agencies, and with citizens and local government officials, he said, to determine whether a full environmental impact report is required.

At this point, town officials, concerned citizens and regional groups such as the coalition can respond to the developer's proposal.

If an environmental impact report is not required, he said, "then the project may move forward at that point and MEPA is done with it.

"If we decide that an environmental impact report is required, there then starts a much more complicated process, the review of draft and final environmental impact reports."

Davis said his staff of six determines the range of issues to be addressed in the report, based heavily on town officials' and citizens' concerns.

"The proponent then, with his or her own resources—usually by hiring consultants—prepares that report and files it with us.

"That report is also noticed in the Environmental Monitor," he said, "and that starts the 30-day review period where we accept comments on the environmental impact report."

Once the final environmental impact report has been successfully concluded, he said, the project can go forward for permits, and state agencies will be assured the proponent has taken all feasible measures to minimize damage to the environment.

In addition to reviewing particular development proposals, the EOEA team studies issues such as aquatic weed control, use of salt on state highways and small private treatment plants.

Davis recalled that when the 68-unit Sudbury development "Willis Hill" was proposed with a small private treatment plant "there was a question as to whether or not we should issue some sort of moratorium on these projects—legally, we didn't have the authority to do so.

"But we did have the authority to require that each (developer) go through MEPA," he said. "We effectively categorically included all of them. We said, 'Surprise guys! You're all going to do an environmental impact report.

"We had hoped we would stem the tide through the MEPA process and we slowed it down pretty well," he said.

Davis noted that officials from a number of South Shore towns including Weymouth and Norwell commented on the proposal because they saw the "package" treatment plants as a "coming thing."

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering denied the Willis Hill application based on the legal and institutional concerns outlined in the MEPA review, he said.

"We now have 14 similar projects in front of us that have come in within the past few months."

Davis said some of those proposed developments are located on the South Shore.

"The Willis Hill decision will circulate to all 14 of these proponents," he said. "and I hope it will serve as a word to the wise."

items such as styrofoam cups with degradable substitutes.

Coalition chairman John Silva, a Hull selectman, said he believes "a lot of consumer habits are directed by what businesses are doing."

O'Brien agreed. "We have to get businesses to realize the economic benefit. There are not just environmental benefits—this will ultimately save you money.

"By looking at this now, we will save ourselves a lot of grief in the future."

Geoff Gordon, president of the Norwell chamber, was enthused. "If you get us 100 boxes (of degradable plastic bags) we'll sell them."

Barry added that Cohasset just voted for mandatory recycling.

Although he is skeptical it will work there "because the basic American is lazy" and won't want to be bothered with separating his trash, he said Wellesley has operated a successful program for years. "They really police it."

In addition to working with businesses, the coalition hopes to work with member-towns to establish regular hazardous waste collection days.

Because the trash of about 500,000 people would be necessary to make the plan work, Golden said communities beyond the coalition could be asked to participate.

"We're going to get this going as soon as possible," O'Brien said.

Ward Plan approved . . .

Article 15

A citizens' petition which preceeded the two sewer articles was defeated by a 179 to 145 vote. That article requested utilization of a conventional six-inch pipe rather than the four-inch pipe as specified in the Ward Plan, from the individual home to the sewer main in the street. The larger pipe, proponent Lot W. Bates explained, would eliminate the need for a septic tank in the yards of those homes being sewered.

Under the Ward Plan, those new homes feeding into the sewer system will retain their septic tank which will be connected into the four-inch sewer pipe.

Sewer commission chairman DeSantis argued against the conventional pipe proposal, saying larger pipes would increase the Ward Plan costs by at least $1.4 million. It would cost individual sewered homeowners $564 per year rather than $408 per year for the small diameter pipes, he noted.

"This is outrageous and the sewer commission can't recommend it," he said, noting the commission and a citizens' advisory committee met for several months in 1983 and 1984 to select a sewer plan they considered best for the town. DeSantis said he contacted many communities in other states that have installed small diameter sewer pipes and officials there remain overwhelmingly supportive of their projects.

Following the article's defeat, DeSantis stated, "the floor of town meeting is simply not the place to design a sewer system. The Ward Plan is something we've reviewed again and again for the last four years."

Selectmen recommended passage of article 15, but a divided advisory committee voted not to support the proposal. According to member Jill O'Donnell, although the conventional sewer pipe proposal would eliminate the need for a septic system, the project would cost too much to the individual homeowners.

Proponents of the conventional system, including Robert Kelleher of Clay Spring Road, said homeowners would be "far better off economically and health-wise if we get rid of the septic tanks. We have an existing sewer system in town. Any new systems should be added to that."

DeSantis continued to argue against the citizens' proposal, noting that leaks from small diameter pipes are negligible because there are no manholes in the Ward Plan. Costs are less with the alternative pipe program, and construction time is less, he stated.

"If this article is approved," DeSantis stated, "it will increase the costs by $1.4 million which is a conservatively low estimate." The individual homeowner cost with the six-inch pipe program would be about $4,500.

"I'd like to remind you that if article 15 passes, it is not funded (by the state) and we will have to go to another town meeting and appropriate an additional $1.5 million and then ask selectmen to submit another override ballot - all this if we decide to shoot ourselves in the foot," DeSantis said. The sewer commission chairman added that if the articles passed without funding, the sewer service areas would have to be reduced. This would be necessary, he said, so the system could withstand additional leaks and not exceed its 300,000 gallon limit into the Hull treatment plant.

R. Murray Campbell of Old Pasture Road, a longtime opponent of the Ward Plan, urged voters to support the conventional sewer plan. "We should not be stampeded tonight," he stated. "This whole project has been Mickey Mouse'd enough without adding these small pipes."

On a hand-count vote, town meeting decided not to support the citizens' petition proposal.

Article 16

After more than an hour of debate Monday night, voters decided to support a pipeline into Hull for $1.4 million. The vote was 186 to 92, exactly the two-thirds majority needed to approve the borrowing.

The article will now appear, together with article 17 for the construction of the sewer services areas, as one debt exclusion override question on the May 14 special election. The two articles combined will cost Cohasset $2.2 million, although sewer users will pay back the $800,000 through annual assessments.

Sewer commissioner Gary Vanderweil presented an overview of the construction costs to town meeting. In addition to the Hull pipeline, the plan will include conversion of the present sewer plant into a pumping station, with a new force main along Main Street to the golf course to Hull Street into Hull.

Two areas of town will be serviced by the new system, he explained, with a reserve area located on Rte. 3A, Ledgewood Drive and Brewster Road. The estimated daily flow of sewage into Hull will be about 292,000 gallons.

There will be 435 new sewer connections in the Ward Plan; ten of those homes will require submersible pumps adjacent to the septic tanks.

Vanderweil explained that because the town will be accepting 50 percent state funding, private homeowners will be required to grant the town an easement between their septic tanks and the collector mains in the street. The actual connections to the sewer main will be paid by those homeowners serviced by the system.

The commissioner said the connection into Hull will cost taxpayers about $45 a year. Individual homeowners will pay about $683 for each connection between the septic tank and the street. The average cost to each sewered homeowner will total about $1,346, he said. The remaining balance of $1,286 will be shared by all taxpayers through bond payments.

Commissioner Ted Guild explained that the annual payments to Hull for the pipeline connection were increased to $409,000. That is a $17,000 hike in the fee to Hull, he said, but it is an amount agreeable to both sewer commissions. Also included in the intermunicipal agreement is a provision which will require a penalty against Cohasset in the event toxic wastes are dumped into the Hull treatment plant.

Lot E. Bates of Beechwood Street objected to the agreement, arguing that for all the money Cohasset is providing to Hull, "we have no voice in what is done" at the Hull plant, he said. "Cohasset is responsible for 16 percent of the maintenance and repair costs to the Hull plant. But in 1978 that plant was under salt water and there was quite a bit of corrosion - and now Cohasset is responsible for 16 percent of the repairs?"

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street recalled the commissioners recently assured selectmen they would be able to renovate the Cohasset treatment plant as a viable and legal alternative to the Hull connection. "I'd like to know why they are not going that way," he asked.

The Hull connection, according to commissioner Vanderweil, has always been the preferable alternative. The original Metcalf and Eddy plan called for a major ocean outfall off Sandy Beach. The Ward Plan does not include a major treatment plant nor does it discharge treated sewage into the harbor or ocean. If, in another 30 years, Cohasset does not renegotiate a contract with Hull, the Cohasset treatment plant can be reactivated.

Renovating the plant now to provide enough capacity for the designated sewer areas would result in an "uphill battle" to gain state support, he added.

Robert Kidder of Cushing Road wondered why the individual homeowners were forced to pay assessments when "we all share the costs of a town hall addition or a new fire truck."

"The connection to Hull will be paid by all of us," DeSantis answered. "The entire town is funding a vast part of this total project."

Article 17

It was a rare coincidence that the following article, appropriating $800,000 for the construction of sewers in two service areas, was approved by an exact two-thirds margin. The total vote tally was different, however, because a number of voters departed after the completion of the previous warrant article.

Once again, advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke warned that if voters approved this article, they were obliged to approve the May 14 debt exclusion override.

"If you do not pass this," commissioner Vanderweil stated, "this will be our last chance to take advantage of state and federal grants. If you do not approve this, we will be left dangling in the wind and we'll miss the Sept. 30 (funding) deadline. Think about what you'd be doing to the Veterans' area and the Hillside. This is probably our last chance."

Responding to a question from King Street resident Peter Laugelle, commissioner DeSantis noted there are no guarantees that 50 percent funding will be provided by the state. Cohasset is currently in violation of the state's affordable housing mandate, and the Executive Office of Communities and Development has threatened to withhold all discretionary grants until Cohasset is in compliance with the law.

"All I can say is that this town meeting is doing our share. To date they have told us they will fund this. I doubt very much funds for this project will be withheld," DeSantis stated.

But Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt disagreed. He said, "We will not get the money until the (housing) agreement is signed with EOCD. And we're working very hard for that. I hope by the time this is on paper, we will get the money."

The following article, which called for modifications and upgrading of the Cohasset treatment plant, was unnecessary because of the success of the previous two articles. It was withdrawn from town meeting consideration by the commissioners.

Cable TV volunteers needed

American Cablesystems is offering a set of courses in television news production to community T.V. volunteers in Cohasset and Hingham.

Each workshop, consisting of two sessions lasting two hours per session, will cover the basics of broadcast news reporting. Topics to be discussed include editing news stories, camerawork in the field, improving interview skills, and organizing and directing a newscast.

American's News Production workshop will be taught by Hull program director Bill McColgan. McColgan has produced local newscasts in Hingham and Sharon. Both of those news programs won Massachusetts Community Television Awards in last fall's statewide competition. McColgan will act as producer for American's "Newsbeat 53," set to premiere in the six-town area later this month.

Although the course is open to all area residents, some knowledge of basic television production is required. Those people interested in taking part in the workshop who have not had any experience in shooting video will have to take a basic workshop prior to the start of the news course.

To sign up for the News Production Workshop, or for more information, call Bill McColgan at 925-9473.

The news workshop will be taught at the following locations and times: Norwell Studio — Monday, May 9 & May 16, 7 - 9 p.m.; Hull Studio — Sunday, May 29 & June 5, 4 - 6 p.m.; North Scituate Studio — Wednesday, June 15 & 22, 7 - 9 p.m.

A seafaring ghost haunted museum . . .

This historic structure, dating from the mid 1700s, originally rested at Cohasset Harbor on Border Street, and had been built by Samuel Bates as his chandlery and counting house. Samuel Bates was one of the first of Cohasset's seafarers; his stone wharf and property at the Cove appear on the town's tax records as early as the 1750s. Upon his death the family fishing business, including the chandlery, passed to his son Samuel, Junior. This second Samuel drowned in 1801 when his schooner was shipwrecked on Cohasset's Brush Island with the loss of all hands.

The family business and property then passed for a while into the hands of Scituate seafarer and businessman Samuel Stockbridge. Tragedy struck the owners of the fishing business again when Samuel's brother Hector drowned in Cohasset Harbor during January of 1810. Samuel Stockbridge himself passed away scarcely a month later, in February of the same year. Soon the wharf, chandlery, other buildings and the fishing schooners returned to ownership by the Bates family, with another son of the original Samuel now directing the business.

Before long yet another member of the family came into ownership, this having been John, a son of Boston and Cohasset merchant Martin Bates. By the mid-1800s the Bates family fishing and mercantile venture at Border Street rivalled the largest in the town, that of Abraham H. Tower, just across the street from the old chandlery itself.

John Bates maintained a fleet of fast, modern "clipper Schooners" used in mackerel fishery, and also owned several larger square-rigged vessels engaged in foreign trade. However, the days of the mackerel schooner fleets were numbered, despite their success, and by the time of John Bates' demise in the latter 1800s they were fast disappearing from the local scene.

By the turn of the century the old chandlery and counting house was owned by financier Clarence W. Barron, a Cohasset resident whose estate "The Oaks" was directly across the harbor. For a number of years following, the early building served various functions, until the mid-1950s it was presented to the Cohasset Historical Society and moved from its site at the Cove to a new location on Elm Street at the center.

Here, the chandlery was to become the Society's Maritime Museum, a building dedicated to preserving the maritime history of the town. As it embarked on its new career, a strange visitor seemed to emerge for whom there might not be an easy - or natural -description.

Shortly after the museum opened its doors, certain museum workers began to here strange noises overhead in the small room once John Bates' office. Footsteps of heavy and measured pattern could be heard at times when there where no other people in the building. They seemed to pace the length of the small office and return. Matters regarding the strange visitor came to a head one evening in 1962 when a gathering met to listen to a talk by a Cohasset historian on the subject of the town's seafaring history. The pacing footsteps above were heard by all. Investigation showed that, in fact, there was no one else in the building. Additionally it was found that a small Indian doll, usually securely situated for display, had been displaced as though flung across the small office. Almost immediately the story of the chandlery's mysterious and uninvited visitor began to circulate.

In 1964 an authentic "ghost hunter", Hans Holzer, journeyed to Cohasset to see for himself the site of the ghostly manifestations. The result was a chapter in his book "Yankee Ghosts" titled "The Ship Chandler's Ghost". For it was believed that the strange footsteps belonged to the ghost of the merchant John Bates, last owner of the family business, now deceased for nearly a century. It was obvious that the ghostly presence was disturbed about something; the measured heavy treading indicated the existence of something not to its liking.

Could it be that John Bates was angry because his chandlery had been moved a distance from its ancient and customary site at the edge of Cohasset's Cove? Apparently at least both witnesses and ghost hunter believed so. Following the ghost hunter's visit reports of the pacing spirit seemed to diminish, and it was thought that, perhaps, the spirit of the old seafarer had been satisfied at last with the new site, and use of his beloved chandlery.

At any rate, eerie manifestations seem not to be in evidence at the Maritime Museum today, some twenty five years later though perhaps one cannot ever be quite sure whether or not the old ship chandler really rests at peace, or just might choose to reappear at some time when least expected, as even the friendliest of ghosts have a way of doing.

Ward sewer plan passes . . .

pipes."

On a hand-count vote, town meeting decided not to support the citizens' petition proposal.

Article 16

After more than an hour of debate Monday night, voters decided to support a pipeline into Hull for $1.4 million. The vote was 186 to 92, exactly the two-thirds majority needed to approve the borrowing.

The article will now appear, together with article 17 for the construction of the sewer services areas, as one debt exclusion override question on the May 14 special election. The two articles combined will cost Cohasset $2.2 million, although sewer users will pay back the $800,000 through annual assessments.

Sewer commissioner Gary Vanderweil presented an overview of the construction costs to town meeting. In addition to the Hull pipeline, the plan will include conversion of the present sewer plant into a pumping station, with a new force main along Main Street to the golf course to Hull Street into Hull.

Two areas of town will be serviced by the new system, he explained, with a reserve area located on Rte. 3A, Ledgewood Drive and Brewster Road. The estimated daily flow of sewage into Hull will be about 292,000 gallons.

There will be 435 new sewer connections in the Ward Plan; ten of those homes will require submersible pumps adjacent to the septic tanks.

Vanderweil explained that because the town will be accepting 50 percent state funding, private homeowners will be required to grant the town an easement between their septic tanks and the collector mains in the street. The actual connections to the sewer main will be paid by those homeowners serviced by the system.

The commissioner said the connection into Hull will cost taxpayers about $45 a year. Individual homeowners will pay about $683 for each connection between the septic tank and the street. The average cost to each sewered homeowner will total about $1,346, he said. The remaining balance of $1,286 will be shared by all taxpayers through bond payments.

Commissioner Ted Guild explained that the annual payments to Hull for the pipeline connection were increased to $409,000. That is a $17,000 hike in the fee to Hull, he said, but it is an amount agreeable to both sewer commissions. Also included in the intermunicipal agreement is a provision which will require a penalty against Cohasset in the event toxic wastes are dumped into the Hull treatment plant.

Lot E. Bates of Beechwood Street objected to the agreement, arguing that for all the money Cohasset is providing to Hull, "we have no voice in what is done" at the Hull plant, he said. "Cohasset is responsible for 16 percent of the maintenance and repair costs to the Hull plant. But in 1978 that plant was under salt water and there was quite a bit of corrosion - and now Cohasset is responsible for 16 percent of the repairs?"

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street recalled the commissioners recently assured selectmen they would be able to renovate the Cohasset treatment plant as a viable and legal alternative to the Hull connection. "I'd like to know why they are not going that way," he asked.

The Hull connection, according to commissioner Vanderweil, has always been the preferable alternative. The original Metcalf and Eddy plan called for a major ocean outfall off Sandy Beach. The Ward Plan does not include a major treatment plant nor does it discharge treated sewage into the harbor or ocean. If, in another 30 years, Cohasset does not renegotiate a contract with Hull, the Cohasset treatment plant can be reactivated.

Renovating the plant now to provide enough capacity for the designated sewer areas would result in an "uphill battle" to gain state support, he added.

Robert Kidder of Cushing Road wondered why the individual homeowners were forced to pay assessments when "we all share the costs of a town hall addition or a new fire truck. "

"The connection to Hull will be paid by all of us," DeSantis answered. "The entire town is funding a vast part of this total project."

TIC hosts conference on radio reading services

The Talking Information Center (TIC) hosted the first conference for New England radio reading services last weekend at its Enterprise Drive facility, and, judging from the comments of the participants, it was a resounding success.

"I really think everyone learned a great deal and came away from the conference encouraged and enlightened," said TIC Executive Director Ron Bersani.

Radio reading service providers and would-be providers from throughout the six-state region gathered to share ideas on everything — from recruiting and recognizing vounteers to what kinds of equipment touse to how to raise funds.

TIC was the first-ever service of this kind in New England and began broadcasting out of a tiny studio with borrowed equipment in June 1978.

In July of that year, Bersani submitted a grant that was funded by the state Commission for the Blind on a two-year pilot basis. The rest, as they say, is history!

The weekend's events began Friday evening with a cocktail party at the station to welcome the participants. TIC board members, staff and volunteers played hosts for a fun evening of getting to know people from throughout New England who share a common goal: providing a vital service to the print handicapped.

On Saturday, workshops were planned throughout the day.

Sandy Lopez, president of the Professional Association of Volunteer Board Management at the University of Massachusetts, presented a workshop on recruiting, managing and working with volunteers.

Radio reading services depend heavily on volunteer help to provide their service. TIC has more than 125 active volunteers who provide all of the reading, much of the office work and many hours working on fundraising events.

"We couldn't exist without our volunteers," according to director of volunteers Ann Collins of Duxbury.

Lopez spoke about the need to provide good training and direction for volunteers and always to reward their efforts with a good word.

Ed Perry, owner of WATD and the man who originally came up with the TIC concept, and Frank Stas, chief engineer for WATD and TIC, talked about equipment and modes of transmitting. TIC currently uses closed-circuit radio and cable television audio, and soon it will be using closed circuit television audio in an agreement with WGBH-TV. Perry encouraged the services to petition the Federal Communications Commisison for a new mode of transmitting.

"The FCC is about to pass a measure that will increase the AM bandwidth," he told the audience. "We should petition the FCC to set aside two or three frequencies solely for the use of radio reading services nationwide.

"This would mean people would not need special, expensive radios to hear the program but would be able instead to hear it on AM radio."

"Making it available on open channel radio would be a dream come true for the print handicapped," chimed in Bersani. "This is just the system that I observed last year in Australia and is what I recommended that the National Association suggest to the FCC last year."

Barbara Wilson, director of library services for Rhode Island and president of the National Association of Radio Reading Services, was enthralled with the idea and felt a New England petition would aid greatly in moving the idea along.

Dave Judy, director of the reading service of Connecticut, gave an informative talk on public relations and showed a video featuring all aspects of the Connecticut service.

The last presentation of the day was titled "The Challenge of Fundraising for Radio Reading Services into the 1990's." Michael Sirota, former manager of the Next Move Theatre and a partner of the Associated Grantsmakers of Boston, led this workshop.

A display that really caused quite a stir was the original broadcast equipment and office of TIC. The original reel-to-reel, cassette deck and microphones used when the service first went on the air were displayed."

"This is all we had," said Bersani. "My office consisted of this folding card table and this cardboard box for my files. All of this equipment was already old ten years ago."

"This really gives me hope," commented Dr. Joseph Pease, a blind educator from Maine. "We don't have anything like this in Maine, and I was beginning to think it was just an impossible task. I didn't realize you could start with so little and build so much. "I'm just amazed that this service could come so far in 10 years."

Eileen Keim, director of library services for New Hampshire, was equally impressed. "We've tried so hard to get a service like this started in New Hampshire, and seeing TIC just makes me want to try even harder."

Susan Pirko and Susan Becker of the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind office of information services, talked about the unique partnership between the Commission for the Blind, the Legislative and the executive branch of government, the Office of Secretary of Human Services Philip Johnston and TIC.

The program directors of the operating services in New England, including Karen Prendergast of TIC, told the group what kinds of programs are available on the service.

TIC broadcasts daily newspapers, best-selling books, periodicals, supermarket and department store ads, calendars of community events and educational material 17 hours daily, seven days a week, every day of the year. All with volunteer readers.

Barbara Elliot reads for TIC

Webster's Dictionary defines a volunteer as a person "whose actions are not founded on any legal obligation to act."

At the Talking Information Center, volunteers are defined in terms of their heart, dedication, skill and compassion.

TIC is a Marshfield-based radio reading service for the print handicapped.

One such volunteer is Barbara Elliot of Cohasset. She began volunteering at TIC right after the station went on the air in 1978 and has been with the center eve since.

"Barbara really got involved in TIC in a big way," said Ron Bersani, TIC executive director.

"She not only reads an hour of the Reader's Digest every week but is chairman of our main fundraising event, the annual golf tournament . . . which raises thousands of dollars to help blind persons with the purchase of radios needed to hear our service."

She also is a member of the board of directors.

"Barbara is the kind of person that Cohasset should be proud of," said Ann Collins, director of volunteers. "We're so lucky to have people like Barbara as part of TIC."

Decorators' Show House filled with curiosities

By Merilyn de Vos
Mariner staff

This year's Decorators' Show House is a splendid and elegant tudor-style mansion that has a history filled with curiosities. Eccentric and colorful former owners gave the place a character equalled only by the building's own distinction.

Since 1970, the Junior League of Boston has presented Show House as an annual fund raiser. Its Show House Committee selects a house, chooses a decorating theme, accepts bids from designers and subcontractors to work on the house (this year 400 vied for about 40 spots) and oversees all activites to prepare the house for public tours.

This year's show house is spectacular: by many accounts the most impressive the League has ever done. The Henderson House, as it is known, is a tudor-design, 27-room mansion located in Weston. It is presently owned and operated as a faculty center by Northeastern University.

The mansion was built in the 1890's by the Clapp family as part of a 360-acre estate. In 1908 he sold it to a Mr. Pierce who was in the wool business in Boston. Pierce was a gadget freak and had every luxury installed in the then 35-room home. For example, his garage had a turntable for his limousine so it wouldn't have to be backed out! His whims included additions of a then-novel bowling alley, as well as more usual stables and a pool.

In 1926, when Pierce was in Europe, Henderson House burned to the ground. After being informed of the fire, Pierce sent word that he wanted the place rebuilt so that upon his return he would see exactly what he had left behind, as if the burning had never occured.The present day structure is the slightly modified result.

When Mr. Pierce died in 1949, his widowed wife didn't know what to do with the property. It was decided she should consult with Nostrodamus, a retired race horse which had become fashionable for his ability to paw, err, predict, the future. Pawing with his hoof on a giant-size Ouija-like board, Nostradamus pronounced, "Ask Mabel." The only Mabel Mrs. Pierce knew (lucky there*was* at least one) was the wife of Mr. Babson, founder of the nearby Babson College. The Babsons graciously accomodated the prophecy and bought the property that same year.

In 1959 the Babsons sold the property and it became a country club that retained only six of the original acres.

The property then came to the attention of Asa Knowles, a trustee of Northeastern, and it was bought and used as the university president's home. It later became a faculty center when the president's wife decided it was unwholesome to raise a family in such an exceptional house.

And exceptional it is—even more so as "done up" by this year's group of decorators.

A commitment by a decorating team to do one of the home's 47designated areas is a huge undertaking. Those interested in participating visit the proposed site, select three areas they would like to decorate and submit detailed plans of what they would do. They may not be awarded one of their prefered areas but, if the committee likes their ideas, they will be offered some space. If they accept, they are pledging to envision and execute the very best that taste and money and imagination can put together.

Henderson House, now a Northeastern University faculty center, is a 1926 Tudor-style mansion on the Weston/ Wellesley line. It is the Junior League of Boston's 1988 Decorators' Show House.

A cynical first line of thought might conclude that participating designers involve themselves in Show House just to promote business for themselves. Just the opposite seems closer to the truth. The five month commitment required by participation keeps the decorators from work they already have or could otherwise take on.

Part of why they do take part is because as Janet Allen of Janet Allen Interiors, 253 Jordan Road, Plymouth said, "It was wonderful in any capacity to be working with this house. There is such quality to the whole place." Allen, a veteran of six decorator homes, was assigned the breakfast room.

She selected as her theme, "A Birthday Breakfast forMother." The atmosphere, drawn from the home's architecture, was that of English country life. The room was planned to focus on the products of a single supplier, the matching fabrics and wall coverings of F. Schumacher of New York. The 10 by 10-foot room was dense with the pastel flowered fabric used in the drapes, table covering (woven by Allen to add interest) and walls. Even a neutral rug was oil painted with a border of matching flowers.

The stemware and sterling was loaned by Tiffany's and these beautiful objects, along with paintings and other lovely decorative items were seemingly left unsupervised during the press previewing. Allen laughed when told of the concern that these costly things might be stolen. It seems she (and all the other decorators) tied large numbers of objects together with near-invisible monofilament. Someone grabbing something on impluse would get a lot more than they bargained for!

Trading Company, Merchants' Row, Hanover were awarded the teenage bedroom. The room, though small, was a confection of pink, saved from "too- sweetness" by the addition of ivory polka dot mint green trim.Linda said they also tried to go along with the period of the house and had as their theme, "Daddy's Little Girl Packing for Europe."

There was an intriguing juxtaposition between the main room, which had a lot of objects from an earlier era (like a steamer trunk, straw picture hat, etc.) and an alcove, viewed as you would leave the room. This smaller space echoed the colors and fabrics of the room in a small boudoir chair but added a jeans jacket, a copy of Lord of the Flies and rock star pinups — all bringing it sharply into the present.

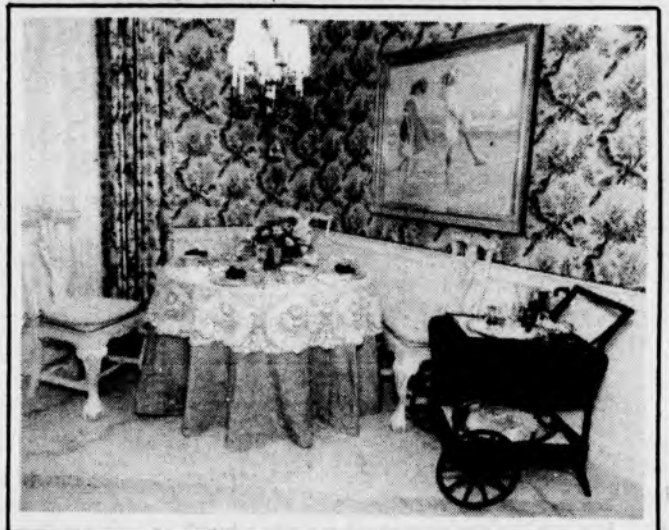
Williams and Garretson were fortunate enough to be given their first choice of rooms to do. They wanted to promote their shop by using accessories they sell and if the three teenagers who saw it during the preview were any indicator, they were very successful.

The tearoom was a beautiful light, airy and large room done by Ingrid Goulston of Ingrid Interiors, 177 Tilden Road, Scituate. As her name might suggest, Ingrid is Swedish and most of the furniture and the beautiful chandelier in her room were also Swedish. Another decorator, Lise Davis, a Danish woman familiar with Swedish interiors, said the room could be anywhere in Scandanavia. Well, not anywhere, perhaps, but certainly whereever beautiful things can be appreciated and afforded.

Goulston had special difficulties to overcome as her container of furnishings from Europe did not arrive in time for the show. The sofa and some chairs were recruited from her own sitting room and upholstered for the occassion in a frosty gold silk. Marcos and Marcos loaned a beautiful sideboard and there was a six-foot artificial topiary that looked real, even when standing next to it, from New England Tree on Highland Avenue in Newton. The room had a clean, uncluttered look. Natural light flooded in from a bay of three large windows and allowed you to view the pretty rear grounds.

A particularly difficult assignment was that of the kitchen. The room, as Ellen Morrissey of E. McAuliffe Morrissey, 183 State St., Boston, was given it, contained a humungous commercial dishwasher that would have required a crane to dismantle and store.

Morrissey took the room no one else wanted because "it came together easily for me since we also do building and contracting." She built out from the dishwasher and added two windowed refrigeration units in front of it. This closed the room and necessitated the use of artificial lighting but all surfaces were kept light to counteract any feeling of confinement.



F. Schumacher fabrics cover the walls, windows and braided table cover of Janet Allen's breakfast room.

The cabinets were a light birch and the floor white oak. Morrissey wanted to keep with the tudor aspect of the house and so avoided a "high-tech" image. There was liberal placement of beautiful tile, painted with an Old World grape leaf motif by Lisa Angelini Adams of Art on Tile in Boston. Clair Tinory, an associate of Morrissey's, talked about the center island and the substantial amount of workspace found in the redesigned kitchen.

For a first time visitor, the most astonishing aspect of the Decorators' Show House is the realization that it is all dismantled, that is to say, destroyed, at the end of the public viewing. One is stunned to realize that what could be permanent, should be permanent, can't be.

These rooms are like works of art, beautifully and lovingly crafted mostly for the aesthetic pleasure it gives to the creator. Anyone would be shocked and offended if a painting, framed and hung, were taken down and slashed to ribbons after 30,000 people had seen it. But that, in a sense, is what happens here.

And if its hard on the viewing public to face a room's demise, "It's a lot harder on the designers," Janet Allen says. "I can't stand it." she goes on, "You're there with your crew, January through May. It's a five month commitment and then it's over in two hours."

Wall and floor coverings do remain behind and the university has elected to purchase some of the new fittings, like the tub and sink fixtures in the master bedroom's bath. But Ingrid Goulston's furniture will return to her parlor and Ellen Morrissey's birch cabinets will go into a home she is doing in Hull.

A woman professor will have her office in the teenage bedroom and the tea room will go back to being the coffee room for the kitchen workers. Some of them have already seen and approved of their new wallpaper. Others of the staff can't wait to return to their new-old quarters to enjoy stars painted on the floor or seascapes on the walls.

As for the loss felt by those who feel a work of art has been tampered with, an analogy with a dance performance may provide some consolation. Once the artistry of dance movement is completed, it exists only as a memory. But no one who has seen Suzanne Farrell or Rudolf Nuryev doubts that what they have seen or felt is less real for having been short-lived. So enjoy this year's special home and make it part of your storehouse of memories because this one will be the standard for the years to come.

The Show House is open through May 22, Tues. - Fri., 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Mon. - Fri., 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., Sat., 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sun., noon to 4:30 p.m. Tickets are $14 at the door or $10 in advance by writing to: Decorators' Show House, P.O. Box 153, Sherborn, MA 01770. Enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope with your money order.

Coalition awarded grant to develop pilot waste program

The South Shore Coalition has been awarded a $125,000 grant to develop a comprehensive solid waste management pilot program for the South Shore.

"This grant will place the South Shore in a leadership position to solve the problems of solid waste disposal, both in our own communities and across the state," said Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth.

"Today, the cost of disposal of our solid waste is the fastest growing expense to communities throughout Massachusetts and has forced cuts in municipal budgets in the areas of education, public safety and other necessary local services," Golden said.

The money will come from the recently enacted solid waste legislation, said L. James Miller, director of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering's Division of Solid Waste Management.

In addition, DEQE also has agreed to commit an additional $50,000 to cover the administrative costs related to the development of this pilot program.

"The South Shore Coalition is very excited about this grant award," said Jean Christensen of Marshfield, director of the coalition.

The coalition was formed in 1985 as an organization of 10 towns — Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Marshfield, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth — to address the regional needs of the South Shore, including water supply protection, transportation and solid waste disposal.

For the past 26 months, a solid waste task force has been meeting regularly to study the various options to solve the solid waste problems on the South Shore.

Last year Golden succeeded in amending the solid waste bill which earmarked $175,000 for the program. And, in recent months, the selectmen from the 10 towns approved the grant application.

When implemented, the South Shore will be the first region in the state to address the problems of solid waste management in a comprehensive manner.

The scope of the program will include the following:

- Reduction and pretreatment of toxic and hazardous material.
- Packaging reduction.
- Pricing for true disposal costs.
- Household hazardous waste collection.
- Recycling.
- Composting.
- Efficient and environmentally sound utilization of existing landfills.

The coalition has contacted Leagues of Women Voters and Chambers of Commerce in the 10 towns as well as South Shore Industries to work together on the project.

"This model plan is intended to give South Shore communities control over the costs of waste disposal while ensuring that the process protects the health and environment of South Shore residents," Golden said.

He praised the selectmen in the coalition, the technical advisory committee and the solid waste task force, as well as the Metropolitan Area Planning Council who worked to obtain the grant.

Coalition members include Jim Gallagher and Dan Cotton of Cohasset; David Vogler of Duxbury; Jan O'Brien and Marge Abbot of Hanover; John Brady and Dick Cook of Hingham; John Silva of Hull, chairman of the coalition; Connie Hughes and Jim Fuda of Norwell; Dick Levin and Len Ruszczyk of Marshfield; Gerry Noonan of Rockland; Gerry Dwight and Marissa Lago of Scituate, and Brian McDonald, coalition vice chairman, and Jim Clarke, both of Weymouth.

The technical advisory group includes Golden, Christensen, Silva, O'Brien, Marshfield Planner Michael Almada, Ann Federico of Marshfield, a member of Golden's staff, Ste Myers of Hull and Judy Wiegand of MAPC.

Members of the solid waste task force members incl de Jeff Power and Priscilla Tebbetts of Cohasset, Gil Burns of Duxbury, Margaret Morris of Hanover, Peter Stathopoulos, Steve Myers, Jack Whippen of Marshfield, Don Dionne and Peter Smellie of Norwell, Mike Embury of Rockland, Paul Scott of Scituate and Wayne Edge of Weymouth.

Reidy hopes community supports override

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Russell Reidy of 162 Fair Oaks Lane is the newest member of the Cohasset school committee.

Reidy presently has three children in the school system. His oldest son is a graduate of Cohasset High School and is now in college.

"I have been living in Cohasset for eight years and felt I should provide some type of community service," he said. "I have a deep concern for education in this community because of my children's involvement."

Reidy said he believes the management skills he has learned in his 15-years of experience in sales management will be beneficial to the school committee.

"I will do the best job I possibly can," he said. "I think I will bring some objectivity to the school committee. I have a concern for the development of the total student."

Reidy noted that his kids have participated in many activities, from athletics to student government.

"The most important thing for me right now is to go through the learning process, to learn about the administration so I can be actively involved in assessing what our real needs are.

"I've been on the outside," he said, "and you really don't understand everything fully unless you're involved."

He has learned some of the ropes from Joseph Nedrow, former chairman of the school committee, who Reidy said was instrumental in his decision to run for the committee.

"Joe is a neighbor and a friend. He told me how much he enjoyed his experience on the school committee and he was very influential in having me run," Reidy said.

As a new member, Reidy has attended three committee meetings so far and has found the group "a very well organized committee with a lot of community support."

Reidy said he is concerned about the May 14 vote, and hopes that community support comes through at the polls.

"The outcome of that I hope will be strong support for the school and the students," he said. "A positive vote is necessary to maintain educational quality in Cohasset– maintaining class size and continuing the development of curricula."

Reidy said the vote will affect programs offered to the students.

"I hope to maintain the quality of education we have right now," he said. "The quality of education affects the quality of life in this town."

Looking at long-term goals, Reidy said he looks forward to discussing the development of a "strategic plan" for the school system.

"I'm enthused about charting the future of the school system," he said. "We have to understand the needs of the administration and of the town. We have a strong administrative team in Cohasset now."

Reidy said such a plan would help the administration continue to improve the quality of education in Cohasset."

Emily Coyne of the Osgood School submitted this interpretation of the Cohasset common in spring.

END OF BALLOT

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The death knell is being sounded by town department heads as the May 14 special election approaches.

If the Proposition 2 1/2 budget overrides and debt exclusions are not approved by residents, many department heads feel there will be no alternative but to slash staff and services.

For the school department, no override will mean 17 less teachers. The police department will lose four officers; the fire department will layoff three men.

And the Ward Sewer Plan will be finished.

"If this fails, we're dead," sewer commissioner Charles DeSantis said this week. If voters do not approve the $2.2 million debt override to finance the sewer plan approved by voters at last week's special town meeting, DeSantis said the results will be critical.

The unique feature of ballot question 7 is that there will be no second chance. Either the town decides to finance its portion of the Ward Plan, or the entire project will be lost, he said.

"The impact of a defeat on this issue will be critical," DeSantis stated. "We will no longer have either town, state or federal funds for the sewer project. For all purposes, the project will be dead.

"The state and federal government will not help us if we decide to back out of our funding," he continued. Even if a second special town meeting approved the same plan, and it was supported by a

Police assist in raid on religious cult in park

Hingham and Cohasset police assisted in a raid this weekend on a "medieval witch cult" believed to have slaughtered and sacrificed animals in Wompatuck State Park.

No arrests have yet been made in what police are calling a bizarre group of 11 young adults who apparently caught household pets, and sacrificed them on a handmade altar inside an abandoned bunker.

Hingham police are investigating the Saturday evening incident and intend to hand the information over to state police for possible prosecution.

Three members of the cult are from Scituate, and the remaining members are from Cape Cod and the Boston area.

During the raid, police confiscated several double-edged knives, machetes and swords. No drugs were found in the raid.

As police entered the bunker, according to Cohasset Det. Brian Cogill, they saw crosses and religious artifacts strewn about the structure. There was an altar with blood stains, and religious statements painted over the interior walls. Some of the members were wearing animal headdresses, with one man wearing what Det. Cogill said appeared to be a coyote head.

"It was very strange," he commented. "There were animal skulls set up on the altar, and there were weapons everywhere. They were dressed up like witches."

Cohasset's week . . .

Good harbor meeting

Selectman James Gallagher reported that a recent meeting between selectmen, the harbor study committee and the town's commercial fishermen was productive.

He said constructive input was gathered by the younger and more experienced fishermen. Fifteen different issues were discussed at the meeting, he told selectmen Monday night. "It was also the first I heard these men volunteer their labor to improve the harbor. Seven or eight fishermen said they will help Steve to make improvements there," Selectman Gallagher reported.

The town official questioned whether Cohasset is eligible to receive a state for repairs to the town ramp. Hingham recently was awarded a similar grant for construction of a ramp at that harbor, Gallagher noted.

He also expressed concern that the Salt House next to Hugo's Restaurant is for sale. The chandlery is under the jurisdiction of the conservation trust, but is currently for sale for more than $400,000. Selectman Gallagher expressed concern that the building, one of the oldest on the harbor, be preserved. Selectmen assured him there are deed restrictions that would prohibit such a change.

Split decision

At a special meeting of selectmen called before the May 2 special town meeting, selectmen Burt Pratt and Rocco Laugelle voted not to support question seven on the May 14 special election ballot.

That question pertains to the $2. 2 million override needed to finance the design and construction of the Ward Sewer Plan.

"I don't believe in it," Laugelle said regarding the vote. "It's something new. Being in the construction business all my life, I just think this is not the thing to do. It's a Mickey Mouse job, with half a septic system on your property, and this pumping out every five years. I don't know anything like this."

Because Pratt and Laugelle are opposed to the sewer plan question, they voted not to support the entire override ballot. The two selectmen emphasized that they supported the remaining six questions on the May 14 override ballot.

Resignations accepted

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of David Wadsworth from the Cohasset Bicentennial Constitution Committee.

Wadsworth, who served as chairman, said he felt his work was completed. Although the official celebration extends until 1991, selectmen will ask the remaining members if they also want to resign from the committee.

Selectmen also accepted the resignation of Emmett Holt from the historic district commission; and Herbert Williams Jr. from the government structure study committee.

Village parking

At a meeting this week, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce was scheduled to address the issue of parking in Cohasset Village.

In addition, selectmen have submitted a suggestion by merchant Ralph Harrison that parking be limited to 30 or 60 minutes.

In a letter to selectmen, Harrison, the owner of Colonial Pharmacy, suggested that the current two-hour parking is excessive. Many of the parking spaces along Main Street are tied up by cars that park there throughout the day. Customers who need to park near the stores often can not find spaces that have been filled for many hours, he stated. Harrison suggested a 30 to 60-minute parking ban be enforced in the Village.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt suggested the Chamber review the proposal. He added, "I'm inclined to take down (the parking limit) to 30 minutes." selectman Cliff Mitman agreed that one-hour parking would be sufficient in the business area.

Barge for sale

If anyone is interested in owning a well-used mooring barge, please contact the selectmen's office.

The mooring barge is considered surplus town property, and is currently being stored on a marsh outside Cohasset Harbor. Although the overall condition of the barge is poor, selectman James Gallagher said the stanchion and the manual wrench are salvageable.

Harbormaster Steven Osborne said last year a few residents expressed an interest in the barge. Selectmen said if more than one person would like it, they will draw names out of a hat. Anyone who wants the barge is responsible for transporting it away from the harbor.

HMO legislation

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has filed legislation to help members of HMO's which contract for prescriptions.

According to Rep. Murray, people have certain pharmacies where they prefer to purchase prescriptions. "They do not want to go to a CVS because of their local preference. In my district, pharmacies such as CVS are a good twenty minutes to a half hour from my towns," she said. "My older constituents in most occasions do not or cannot reach such pharmacies.

Rep. Murray's bill will allow the HMO's to pay for a prescription anywhere, and the client would have to make up any difference.

Raid on religious cult . . .

Department of Fisheries and Marine, lead the raid early Saturday evening.

The Dept. of Fisheries and Marine was notified two weeks ago about bizarre activity in an unused bunker located near Doane Street in Cohasset. According to Officer Comeau, the group may have been using the bunker "on and off for about a year."

The bunker is located in an area frequently used by visitors to the state park, Officer Comeau said. But there were never any complaints issued to park officials.

The altar and various religious artifacts including crucifixes, were taken away from the bunker. The group apparently had their own lock to the building, he noted.

Hingham Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said he had heard rumors about animals being sacrificed in the state park. but had not been notified about the raid. This coincided, he said, with an "unusually high number" of calls regarding missing pets in Hingham.

"About five months ago, I started getting a lot of calls about pets missing without a trace," he stated. "They were disappearing all over town, not just in one neighborhood. Normally, I get about seven to ten calls in a short time, but I've been getting a lot more than that."

Officer Murphy said his curiosity was aroused, although it not unusual for pets to be lost in the winter during harsh weather.

Hingham police are continuing the investigation, but would not issue a statement on the raid. They were involved as a matter of mutual aid to the Department of Fisheries and Marine and will not handle any prosecutions in the matter.

Officer Comeau said six police officers assisted in the call, along with two environmental officers and the park supervisor. As of Wednesday, May 11, no charges have been filed against the group members.

Effects of the override . . .

a second try at a special election this summer, DeSantis speculated it would be too late for the sewer project. The deadline for $4 million in state and federal monies is June 1. And although there is some flexibility regarding that date, the sewer commissioner said additional special town meetings and elections would be stretching it too far.

If the sewer plan is not approved on the May 14 ballot, the town will once again be in legal jeopardy and subject to $10,000 daily fines by the state attorney general's office. An agreement of judgement signed by the town in February, 1980 required the town to seek in good faith a solution to their sewer woes. If the town now rejects the plan proposed and approved during a four-year series of hearings and town meetings, the result may be catasrophic, DeSantis noted.

Costly legal fees would be necessary to fight implementation of the $10,000 daily fine, he said. But any further legal costs would also require an override of Proposition 2 1/2.

"It would be a tragedy to lose a project and make ourselves vulnerable to an extraordinary penalty without a means to defend ourselves," he stated.

In reaction to public officials who have criticized the Ward Plan, DeSantis responded that the town must meet its legal and statutory requirements - to correct its discharge permit. "To suggest that we should not support the sewer override question is the absolute height of public irresponsibility," he stated. "The issue is, what do we do if this question fails. We have no money, we refuse to comply with the state edict, and we have no money to defend ourselves. We have a responisbility to run our own town, to determine our own destiny - never at the hands of the attorney general. To suggest otherwise is totally irresponsible."

DeSantis remains a staunch supporter of the Ward Plan - "a project that will provide a waste water program for the town for many years, that's affordable, and that is right there."

He also sees this agreement with Hull as the first major step in providing regional solutions to common community concerns. "This is a very significant step," he stated. "It is a quantum leap in the regionalization effort. If this vote fails, it could lead to the demise of all our regional efforts, be it solid waste, water or education."

School budget override

Question one on the May 14 ballot requests an override of $659,911. 50 to fund the town's operating budget. Included in that total is about $330,000 which will be cut from the school budget if the levy override is not approved.

That amount could be increased, according to Supt. Stephen Hart. He explained that if such mandatory articles, such as $50,000 for special environmental counsel, $68,290 for leachate control at the landfill, and $70,000 for the town's revaluation, are not approved by voters May 14, it will raise the amount the schools and other town departments must eliminate from their budgets.

Together with school administrators, Supt. Hart has developed a contigency plan if the override fails. It is a series of suggested budget cuts that the school committee has discussed. No final decisions will be made, Supt. Hart emphasized, until the May 14 election proves it necessary.

The first order of business, should the override fail, will be to remove all capital outlay items from the budget, including all new computers and audia-visual equipment. That will reduce the budget by about $30,000.

The second item will be to eliminate all achievement testing throughout the schools - a move that will reduce the toptal budget by $3,000.

Transportation will be the next suggested cut. The number of bus runs will be reduced, slicing $10,000 from that budget.

Activity aides will also be taken from the budget, he stated.

But the cut that will hurt the most, he admitted, will be the reduction of seven teachers from the elementary schools, and seven from the secondary level. That move alons will reduce about $170,000 from the elementary budget and $200,000 from the secondary budget, although unemployment insurance costs have yet to the calculated.

"Since 1985 we have cut 35 1/2 staff positions in Cohasset, including one administrator. They were not all teachers, but the cuts included coaches and custodians.

"Cohasset is not at the point where we should seriously consider combingin the two elementary schools," Hart said, in response to a frequently-heard proposal. "We need 26 classrooms and by combining the two schools, we will only have 17 available at Deer Hill. If we could take away the cafeteria and art room, we could possibly squeeze them all in. But that's not a solution."

Other suggested budget cuts, according to the superintendent, would include $10,000 from the athletic account and a $6,000 reduction in the supplies account.

"Obviously, the only way to accomplish major cuts is through staffing reductions," Supt. Hart noted. There is little to cut from the administrative staff, he added. There are two elementary school principals, one high school principal and an assistant principal, an assistant superintendent and a superintendent. "There are a few people who think there are too many administrators, but that is truly a minimal administrative staff," the superintendent said. "I'm not objective about this, but I feel there are too few administrators as it is right now."

As he looked through the preliminary list of suggested budget cuts, Supt. Hart said many of them will be necessary if the override is not approved. "If this comes about, we'll meet to decide where to reduce the budget - taking into account the academic needs. We will be looking for areas with the least impact upon the student. But even looking at that, there's no way we can't hit hard into our personnel. It will have a major impact, because we're talking about a lot of teachers."

The school department is sponsoring two debt exclusion articles and a portion of the capital outlay exclusion article on the May 14 ballot. All seven ballot questions require a majority vote for passage.

included in question 2, the capital outlay exclusion article, is a request for $16,000 for the purchase of a truck for the school department and $20,000 for repairs to the Osgood School roof.

Supt. Hart explained the truck is used daily to take trash to the dump and to transport school supplies. The current 16 year-old truck has simply "rusted away," according to the administrator.

The Osgood School roof has a number of slate tiles that have fallen off, causing water damage to the interior of the school. If the project is delayed, he explained, "there will be extensive damage to the inside of the school. I want to be on record about that."

Question 4 on the ballot requests $70,000 for the second-half of a renovation project in the junior/senior high school science labs. The amount was reduced by the school committee, so there will not be as much work done as planned. The project, which Supt. Hart said is long overdue, will prevent further water leakage into the labs.

Question 5 requests $32,000 for a school bus, another phased-in school program that has been continuing for a few years. State law requires that no school bus manufactured before 1979 be on the road after 1989. In order to ensure compliance with that law, the school department has been purchasing school buses in consecutive years. If the bus is not purchased this year, Supt. Hart said it will only postpone an additional purchase next year.

Hingham to be involved with CHL

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

The Hingham board of health wants to be involved with proposals to clean up the Cohasset Heights landfill.

Board chairman Catherine Salisbury told Hingham selectmen Tuesday that leachate from the privately-owned landfill threatens the lower Weir River watershed area.

Hingham selectmen unanimously voted to contact their counterparts in Cohasset, and ask to be kept advised on clean up plans.

In addition, the Hingham board of health would also like the opportunity to comment on Cohasset's draft proposals.

While the Cohasset board of health is concerned with diverting the leachate away from Lily Pond, that town's water supply, Salisbury and the Trustees of Reservations fear that the material may be directed toward the trustees' abutting Whitney Woods property, and into Hingham.

Tom Foster, district manager for the Trustees of Reservations said, "No one knows where the leachate is going."

He said a leachate interceptor system has been installed, with the material collected and trucked off site daily to a treatment facility.

But, Foster said, even with an extensive system of monitoring wells, "it is hard to determine how much of that is adequate."

He did note that the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering does not feel there is sufficient information to take any action against the landfill owner.

Salisbury said the landfill was originally for disposal of tree stumps and demolition materials, but in recent years, it has also been used for trash disposal. Although the Cohasset zoning board has ruled against a change in the landfill's permit which prohibits general refuse disposal, the owners of Cohasset Heights Ltd. are appealing that decision.

She noted the landfill has had problems in the past with leachate breaking out and eventually running off the property.

Foster said the landfill owners have applied to expand the facility.

The attorney for Cohasset Heights owner Paul Barry said his client is "doing everything to ensure the safety of the Cohasset water supply."

The landfill "does not present any danger to the public health," he said.

In a May 6 letter to selectmen, Salisbury wrote, "I am very concerned that the owner of the landfill will satisfy Cohasset with their diversion of the leachate away from Lily Pond, enter into a settlement with that town, and be long gone by the time that Hingham wakes up to the fact that we have a major problem threatening the lower Weir River watershed area."

She said Hingham is at a disadvantage since most of the Cohasset meetings on this subject have been held in executive session, due to pending litigation and negotiations for settlement of this issue that has embroiled Cohasset for several years.

Historical Society prepares costumes for gala event

By Sheila Casey
Mariner correspondent

Parasols, fans, capeletts and tea gowns, were all essential parts of a lady's wardrobe in a byegone era, but unfamiliar in today's world.

We now have the opportunity to take a glimpse into the past, through the carefully catalogued and preserved collection of antique gowns and accessories owned by the Historical Society under the directon of Jane "Tinka" McLean.

McLean and her tireless group of volunteers are preparing for a "gala event" as she calls it, to be held May 22 at "the castle" home of J. Arnold Nickerson, on South Main St. Music will be provided by "Brass Rings," who will also be appearing at the Nickerson Theatre, and the costume committee will exhibit some of their spectacular gowns and accessories.

The focal point of the event will be the "Hooper" gown, a stunningly festive ball gown purchased in Paris in 1865 for a South Shore Belle by the name of Maria Barnes Hooper. Made of cherry red and ivory colored taffetta, it has a tiny bodace and very full skirt with a train, and is studded with pearl beads with black lace and fringe trim.

There is a small red velvet wreath of leaves and flowers, meant to be worn on the head. This is a great find, according to McLean, as it is most unusual to have the original accessories.

Most of the items in the collection have been donated by prominent families in the area, such as the Barron Bancroft family (of which heiress Jessie Cox was a member), and the Prescott Lowes of publishing fame.

The oldest gown in the collection is from 1810 and is a higher waisted white cotton with a square neck and lemo lace. The back of this dress at the waist measures only four inches.

Two gowns from the Barron Bancroft collection on display at the Lothorp House were a heavily embroidered ivory crepe de chine afternoon gown and a pearl grey silk embrodered tea gown, which prompted committee member Marth Hurtig to ask, "If this is what they wore for tea, I wonder what they wore to dinner?"

The Cohasset Historical Society is preparing for a May 22 event which will feature many of the exquisite antique gowns preserved and maintained under the direction of Jane "Tinka" MacLean (l) and Martha Hurtig: This particular piece is the Hooper gown — the 'jewel' of their collection.

Besides gowns, there are men's and children's clothing and uniforms, plus hundreds of accessories and lingerie. One of the most intriguing items is listed as "one pair of picnic panties." I have no idea what they are" says McLean, with a twinkle in her eye, "but they sound very naughty!"

Other items include hats designed by famous Paris Milliners, a costume designed by Hattie Carnegie, a cape by Worth of Paris, and beaded flapper dresses.

"Many experts have reviewed the collection," said Mrs. Hurtig, and have acknowledged its value, and are encouraging us."

Some of the experts include Mr. Korda of the Fashion

Time to clean out garage and basement

A regional household hazardous waste collection for residents of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate will be held Saturday, May 14, at the Station Street parking lot in Hingham (near Hingham rotary and behind the Fruit Center) from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Northeast Solvents Services, Inc. will be collecting wastes from the house, garage, yard, and workbench. Household wastes include: drain cleaners, oven cleaners, furniture polish, metal polish, batteries, pharmaceuticals, arts and crafts supplies, photo chemicals, floor cleaners, window cleaners, dry cleaning fluids, radiator cleaners, aerosol cans.

From the garage: gasoline, used motor oil, antifreeze, brake fluid, wax polish, engine and radiator flushes, transmission fluid. From the yard/garden: pesticides, herbicides (except Silvex and Weed-B-Gon), insect sprays, rodent killers, pool chemicals, muriatic acid, no-pest strips, cesspool cleaners. From the workbench: rust preventatives, wood preservatives (except Penta), wood strippers, oil based paint, paint thinners, solvents, degreasers, sealants, and asbestos.

The following can NOT be accepted at the collection: latex paint; gas cylinders; ammunition; water reactive, biologically active, radioactive or explosive materials; tires; dioxin (2, 4-D and 2, 4, 5-T), Silvex and Weed-B-Gon, Penta wood preservative; or PCBs.

Although used motor oil and car batteries will be accepted at the collection, residents should know that they can also be brought to the merchant where purchased for recycling at any time throughout the year.

Wastes should be in original containers, properly packaged, and labeled. Check all containers, making sure lids are tight. If containers are leaking, pack in a large container and use an absorbent material such as cat litter to soak up leaks. Boxes with dividers make good packaging.

Antique gowns . . .

Institute in New York, Mr. Tuchscherer of The Museum of Fine Arts, Boston and Nancy Rexford, an independent consultant whose advice was invaluable according to McLean.

Members of the committee are hoping to hold seasonal exhibits four times a year at the Lothrop House, and are searching for a building to house the permanent collection. The Independence Building in the town center has been home to the gown museum since 1953, but was sold a few years ago. Since that time, the collection has been held in storage, not under ideal conditions, according to McLean. "We are hoping to find a building of our own where we can work on, store and exhibit the gowns," she explained. "We need a display area and a small auditorium for educational purposes. Until that time comes, we have to be content to exhibit where ever we can," she concluded.

around town

□ Mildred Harrington received an interesting clipping from the Washington Post recently, and was kind enough to share it with us. It was a feature story on Ellery Clark, the authority on the Boston Red Sox. As most people know, Mr. Clark is a Cohasset resident, and an avid Red Sox fan! He knows Ted Williams, Pesky and Doerr, Parnell and Tiant, Jim Rice and Evans. His License place even reads "Red Sox". The article went on to tell what he knows about basketball, (everything, it seems), whom he knows in baseball (everyone), and the memories he has of the Red Sox. Watch for a Mercury Wagon with the Maryland Red Sox plate to arrive in town any day. Be sure to speak to this interesting man, you'll be glad that you did. A true Cohasset legend.

□ Patricia Dellorfano has made the honor roll at Notre Dame academy for the third marking period. Patricia is a member of the senior class.

□ Mary Muncey was sworn in as a Notary Public recently, with state rep. Mary Jeannette Murray witnessing it. The Secretary of State, Michael J. Connolly performed the swearing in ceremony, with Mary's husband John looking on. Mrs. Muncey, an assistant manager of a growing company, needs to notarize papers as part of her job responsibilities.

□ It certainly is nice to see Ray Chase up and around town again . . . he sure had a long bout of illness, but all is well now! He looks grand.

□ The fourth Cohasset Health Fair takes place May 12 at the Second Congregational Church and the town hall from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. If you are concerned about your health and taking care of yourself, make it a point to be there. You can get a cholesterol screening, blood pressure checked and learn about eating habits and nutrition. Many people were helped just by attending the fair, so be sure to be there to see what you can learn.

□After you get that done, make plans to attend the PSO annual meeting, where Dr. Tom Cottle will be guest speaker. He will speak about parents and their children, which promises to be an interesting night. Plan your questions and go with an attentive ear, and you will be glad that you did. The meeting will take place at CHS at 7:30 p.m.

□ Tara Valungis, Ann Dockray, Letitia Linsley, Amy Hobbs, and Eileen O'Connor and an interesting day recently. They were part of a group encompassing 36 high schools at the Third Annual Sonia Kovalevsky High School Mathematics Day at Simmons College. The idea behind the program is to introduce young women to a variety of careers in mathematics and the related sciences.

□ CSH is also making its mark in another field, Latin. Matt Drinkwater, Celia Mullen and Michele Casolaro (Summa Cum Laude), Rod Hemassi, Topher Henderson (Magna Cum Laude) and Andrew Ross, Tara Volungis, Krisin Martin, Kathleen Conroy, Dan De Michele, and Cecilia Candia (Cum Laude) all received certificates of honorable merit winners from the American Classical League's National Competitive Latin examination.

□ How about giving me a call to let all of us in on your newsworthy event? Spring certainly seems to be the time for great things to happen.

Selectmen say two grave sites at a time

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Death is now a requirement for a grave in Cohasset.

A shortage of cemetery sites has forced selectmen to require that graves be purchased only upon death.

And even then, the practice of purchasing four at a time will be stopped. Only two graves at a time may now be purchased in Cohasset.

"I think then we'll be able to hold on for another three years," Cemetery Supt. Peter Laugelle told selectmen Monday night. He figured that is when a new cemetery site, proposed for school-controlled land off Pleasant Street, will be available for burial plots.

Since news of the dwindling grave sites has been publicized, Laugelle said many remaining grave sites have been sold. Just last week, he told selectmen, 20 graves were sold.

The cemetery study committee has proposed that a 16-acre portion of the 216 acres controlled by the school department be used as a town cemetery. That land will accommodate 3,000 grave sites with further expansion possible near Smith Place. Supt. Laugelle estimated the new site could provide grave sites for another 100 years.

School committee members reviewed the preliminary proposal at their meeting last week. They expressed the concern that enough buildable land between the Deer Hill School and the proposed cemetery be left vacant to allow for possible school expansion in the future.

They suggested the cemetery land site be shifted closer to the Osgood School. Another consideration was the outdoor nature trails that are being developed along the wooded land between the two schools. They suggested the cemetery site could be part of a multi-use plan including the open space nature trails.

At the selectmen's meeting Monday night, Supt. Laugelle noted that many unused graves are now being held by owners. Until two years ago, many grave sites could be purchased at one time in preparation for a family plot. But according to Supt. Laugelle, even though many of these graves remain unused, people are unwilling to sell them back to the town.

Town bylaw prohibits anyone from selling their graves back to the town for a profit, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew stated. But Selectman Cliff Mitman suggested that people owning unused grave sites might be willing to sell them to another individual at market rate. In such an case, it would be necessary for all private transactions to be recorded with the town.

Andrew will look at the bylaw regarding that proposal, and the total number of unused graves currently owned by individuals.

Supt. Laugelle said 30 years ago, people would purchase 20 grave sites at once. In many cases, those graves still have not ben used. He suggested that unless the requirements are changed to limit the number of sites purchased by an indiviudual, "we'll have an awful mess, I assure you."

Selectman Burt Pratt, the selectmen's liason with the cemetery study committee, suggested that a steeply inclined wooded area off Beechwood Street be considered as a possible cemetery site. But Supt. Laugelle said it would be a "stop gap" measure, and the cost of filling the property would be exorbitant.

"If you go with what I recommend,' Supt. Laugelle said, "we can forestall and be in pretty good shape - if we get something else going in three years."

Selectmen voted to accept the new requirements which will go into effect immediately.

Lawn care offered

Core aeration, once reserved for golf courses, estates and other large expanses of green, is now available for home lawns through Lawn•Doctor of Hingham—Hanover—Norwell.

"Core aeration," according to owner John Clarkeson, "allows air and water to move more quickly into the soil, resulting in a deeper, stronger root system, better root zone response better root zone resonse to fertilizers and other materials and a reduction of thatch."

Lawn•Doctor of Hingham—Hanover—Norwell has been serving the South Shore since 1982 and can be contacted at 659-4180.

Republican club meeting

The South Shore Republican Club will meet Monday, May 16, at Bobby Hackett's Restaurant, Route 53, North Pembroke.

There will be a social hour at noon with luncheon served at 1 p.m.

The program's speaker will be Jon L. Bryan of Marston Mills. Mr. Bryan, a college professor and businessman, is running for the 10th Congressional District Representative seat.

Approve override

Residents have been sufficiently warned, and adequately educated about the effects of their decisions May 14.

They should be prepared to walk into the polls this Saturday completely aware of the choices they have, and the consequences of their actions.

With little time to educate themselves and the public, town officials have painstakingly attempted to explain the procedures of a Proposition 2 1/2 override. It is not a simple lesson, but then state bureacracy has never been accused of simplicity.

Every registered voter in this town has the obligation of casting his or her ballot in Saturday's special election. Major decisions, not affecting personalities who will govern us, but issues that will affect us for many years, will be determined by this election.

A simple majority is all that is required to finance the town's operating budget; to fund the state mandated town revaluation; to begin repairs to the Osgood School roof; to continue engineering services at Cohasset Heights; and to complete engineering at Milliken Field.

One vote will decide whether the highway department receives a new truck; the science labs at the high school are repaired, a school bus is purchased, or the transfer station is constructed.

And a majority of Cohasset voters will decide, once and for all, if the Ward Plan will become a reality.

As for us, the choice is clear on question one. And if only one of our messages is heeded this year, it is this. That first question on the override ballot must include your 'yes' vote. Without it there will be less town services than you would care to imagine.

No one likes paying higher taxes, but everyone loves good service. Everyone loves a quality educational system, a responsive, responsible police department and a well-operated, efficient fire department. Without a yes vote on question one, it is guaranteed these services will be severed. That is not a threat. It is merely the only response these departments can give to major budget reductions.

A negative vote on question one will jeopardize the lifestyle we have grown accustomed to in Cohasset - a lifestyle we demand in return for the taxes we pay.

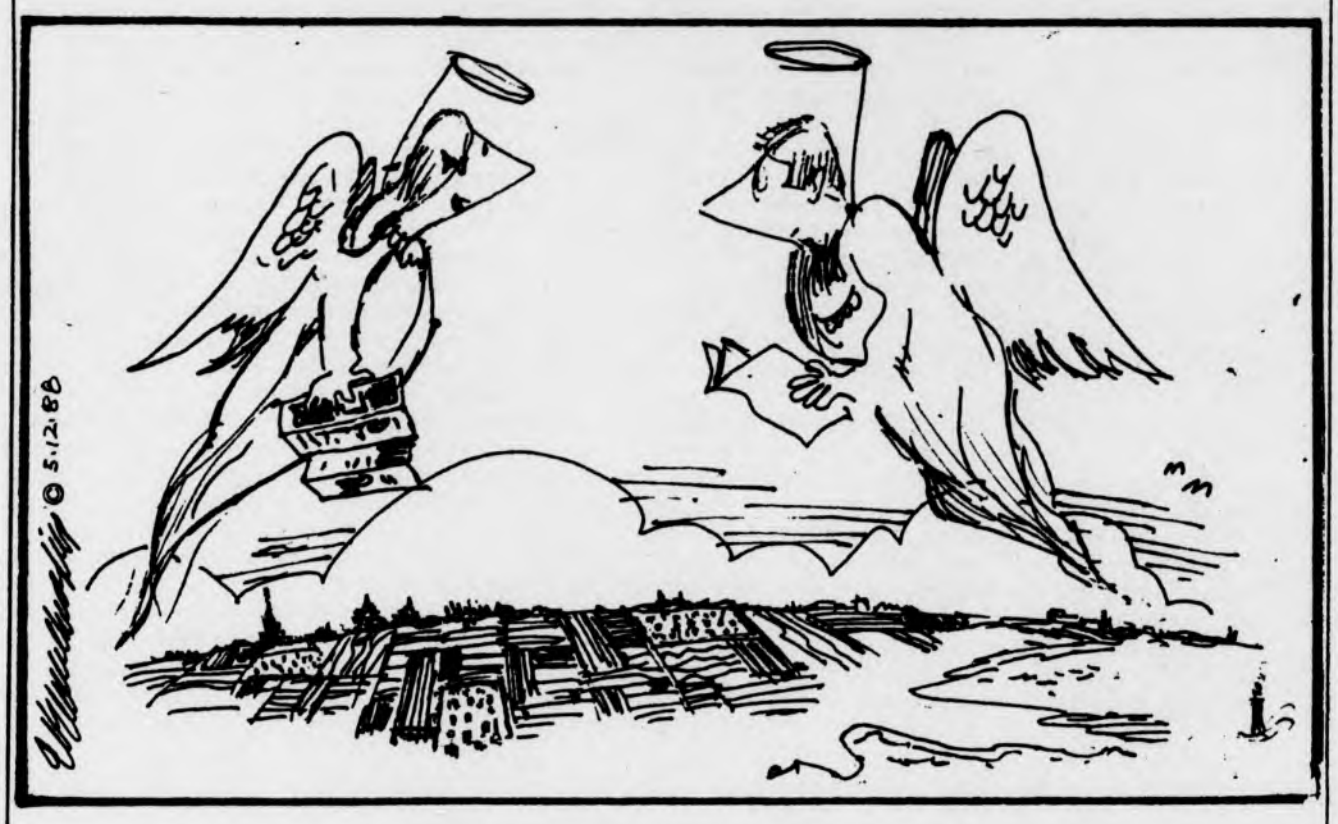
Other questions on the May 14 ballot include articles already approved by town meeting. But they necessitate a second approval by the ballot. We hope everyone clearly understands that many of these items, including the town revaluation, legal services for Cohasset Heights, and a leachate control study at the town landfill are mandated by the state. Without our appropriations, the state will come in and order their completion - at a much higher cost, no doubt.

And if nothing else, we believe voters must approve question seven on the ballot - the Ward Plan. Since 1984, voters have repeatedly given this project their approval. Now it is time to dig into our pockets and finance this sewer plan. If we deny those funds, we are ultimately denying ourselves a sewer plan that has finally won approval by the state.

It would be foolhardy to stop a plan that has repeatedly won the approval of so many voters. We are within a whisper of getting a plan that will guarantee working septic systems for many, and functioning sewers for others. It is the plan endorsed by our sewer commissioners and by members of the citizens' sewer advisory committee.

It may hurt, but our obligation is to keep this town running at an efficient, yet serviceable level. That will continue only by adding our approval to this override ballot.

COHASSET — Cemetery plot space set at a premium. Few available plots left. Space could become non-existant in the not-too-distant future. Special study committee is formed to search for available property to accommodate predictable future burial needs. 'Unoccupied' spaces in existing family plots not available for consideration. 'Could hardly ask families to sell.' Many have moved



"...How about this for an idea...have they considered double occupancy...?"

A lot of questions on school budget

To the Editor:

Questioning the school budget is somewhat akin to attacking moms and apple pie. All kinds of wild accusations are apt to fly. Phrases like "cherish the children," "honor the teachers," and "property values" come to mind and are part of the emotional muddle that cloud rational scrutiny. I must confess that I was afraid to stand up at town meeting and put forth my doubts. Yet I cannot ignore the alarm bells going off in my head any longer.

I have heard that the Advisory Committee did not review the school budget this year because it was submitted too late. School Committee members went before the selectmen to plead that their budget be combined with the town budget on the Prop 2 1/2 over-ride ballot — presumably because they felt it had a better chance of being passed that way. Last week an example of the actual over-ride ballot appeared in the Cohasset Mariner with everything except the school budget clearly identified. We know from town meeting (those who were there) that the figure of $659,911.50 represents the combined town and school budget, but it is not stated as such in Question 1 on the ballot.

You can call it misleading, misguided, or outright misrepresentation. Whatever you call it, I believe the result is the same — townspeople are uncertain of what they are voting for. Don't we have the right to know? Shouldn't it be clearly defined?

I am not unalterably opposed to the school budget as it stands. But I have a lot of questions that have not been answered. What alternatives do we have if this budget is not passed? Superintendent Hart has said that a lot of teachers would have to be let go, and the curriculum cut back. How many teacher do we have? How many compared to the number we had five years ago? Ten? How does the teacher-student ratio compare? What is the comparison of students accepted to college now to students of five and 10 years ago? How do SAT scores compare, state test scores? Are these useful yardsticks? Do we really need the breadth of the current academic curriculum? There are 4-5 levels at the high school (General , College Preparatory, advanced, Honors and Advanced Placement). Are they all necessary in a high school as small as ours?

Mrs. Kornet stated that her focus in the coming year will be to study the declining enrollment and possibility of combining Osgood and Deer Hill schools. Enrollment has been declining steadily for several years. Shouldn't the School Committee have formulated a plan years ago? Mr. Hart recently gave a brief outline of why combining the elementary schools would not be satisfactory. He stated that 23 classrooms would be needed and only 17 available, thus the idea should be dismissed. But he did not even discuss the possibility of moving the sixth grade up to the jr. high. How would that alter the room availability? Whether we like the idea or not, it seems to me that we need to examine all potential solutions thoroughly to be aware of our options.

These are some of the questions that I have, and I feel far from being informed as I head toward the voting booth on Saturday. Many others may be a lot less informed as they probably don't know what they are being asked to vote on in Question #1.

I fear a lack of candor may result in a real disservice to the town, and ultimately to our children.

Sincerely,
Dee DeSantis

Sewer plan design is flawed

To the Editor:

Is there trouble ahead for Cohasset if the Ward Plan is adopted? Under this plan the proposed financing is discriminatory, and the small diameter pipe design is badly flawed. The end result of this plan could be a class action suit because of the financing and a pipe system in place that doesn't work and has no salvage value.

There are two types of small diameter pipe designs for sewer systems. Both require a suitable septic tank at each location. The pressure system also requires a pump to be installed and operated and maintained at the homeowners expense. This unit pumps the effluent into and along the collector system.

The vacuum system calls for a special valve, but no pump, at each service; this controls the flow of effluent out of the septic tank. A bit of solid material in the effluent could cause this clapper valve to fail to close properly and the resulting failure in this one service could cause the whole system to fail because air would get sucked into the system through the defective valve. This high risk system apparently is the design specified under the Ward Plan. If installed it would probably be the only one in existence outside of discussion in textbooks or engineering brochures.

The pressure system has been rarely used but apparently does have a place in smaller systems with unique requirements such as where there is considerable ledge, or in locations in Maine or New Hampshire where it may not be a requirement for every location to join the system if the homeowners existing septic system is suitable or can be upgraded to an acceptable level.

There is still time to get a new plan approved; the revised plan should specify the installation of a full sized pipe in a conventional gravity sewer system. The financing should be the same as it is for the existing sewer in Cohasset.

The activity during the midnight session of the Special Town Meeting on May 2 reflects no credit on any of those involved in ramming through Articles 16 and 17.

On May 14 the voting will be done in the privacy of a voting booth, and in the broad light of day fairness and decency may prevail.

Dismal weather didn't stop dazzling show

By Sheila Casey
Mariner correspondent

Tuesday, May 10 was dismal and dreary, more befitting November than May, but stepping inside the South Shore Art Center was like entering an enchanted garden, ablaze with colorful, fanciful flower arrangements set against abstract landscapes and seascapes.

This was "Genesis," a flower show orchestrated by The Community Garden Club of Cohasset in conjunction with the Art Center's exhibit of "Mood and Motion" a collection of paintings by Cohasset artist Claffy Williams, and the effect was spectacular.

Top awards went to C.G.C. of Cohasset's president Phyllis Peck, with a blue ribbon and tri-color award for her entry in the "Studio Art Class" category. A blue ribbon and the creativity award went to Kathie Carr in the "Mystery of the Sea" category and Vivian Bobo who was awarded an honorable mention in "Mystery of the Sea" received the Sweepstake Award for the highest overall score in horticulture and design.

Peck's award winning entry in "Studio Art Class" was her interpretation of an oriental brush painting by art center instructor Ellie Avakian, using only natural materials, including yellow orchids, Scottish broom dracenda. Second prize went to Mary Larson for her interpretation of a Mary Lizotte painting, third to Betty Madden for her colorful translation of an equaly colorful Ross Farbush painting and honorable mention to Cynthia Wessling for her arrangement reflecting a watercolor by Virginia Avery.

In "Mystery of the Sea," where Carr took first place, he used statis, baby's breath, and dried seaweed-like materials. Second prize went to Rita Kirk and third to Elizabeth Karam.

"Horizons" was a group of horizontal designs using warm, earthy colors: first prize to Tish Grinnell for her exotic arrangement of palms and day lillies on driftwood; second and third to Mary Hickey and Mrs. John O'Toole.

"Opening of a New Show" featured a floral and table arrangement for a wine and cheese party, with first prize going to Claudia Storey, for her eye catching peach, yellow and soft green setting; second to Margaret Chapin; third to Carmen Schramm.

Other categories included "Clay is the Medium," with Joan Shockman taking the blue ribbon for her arrangement of red tulips, calla lillies and Scottish broom. All entries in this category were arranged in pottery containers loaned by art center potters. Second place went to Joan Bagley; third to Susan Reardon.

"Facets of the Art Center" First prize was awarded to Priscilla Clapp of Duxbury for her fanciful creation using neon colored T squares and hot colored crayons. Genevieve Good took second prize for a design that incorported paint brushes and a picture frame. Third prize to Jennifer Wilson.

(Dave Sullivan)

The show also included four educational exhibits, demonstrating garden therapy used in Cohasset nursing homes, an environmental study area to Deer Hill and Osgood School, butterflies and wildflowers and gardening books.

In the very impressive junior category, Caitlin Hurley won the junior achievement award, with first prize going to Tara Volungus and Molly Hamill. Second to Sarah Kirk and Rebecca Kirk, third to Courtney Schultz and Erin Lennon.

Mary Larson, chairman and chief organizer of the show said she was, "Just amazed at the quality of the junior entries," adding that many of these children were entering a show for the first time.

Larson was enthusiastic about the success of the show, and was particularly pleased by how well the abstract art had been interpreted through the more traditional art of floral arrangement.

Noting that this was the first major show in 7½ years, and that it was a major undertaking for all involved, Larson said that the greatest measure of success to her was that "we all felt good about it, we came out of it feeling like we want to do it again."

Little League season begins with festivities

Small-fry baseball returned to Cohasset Saturday April 30 with the annual parade of all participating players, coaches, celebrities, spectators and the Deer Hill School Band.

The parade began beneath leaden skies at the Red Lion Inn and proceeded to the Little League Field under the able escort of the Cohasset Fire Department.

Following an awards ceremonies featuring the '87 champion Hallmark Braves, Rep. Mary Jeannett Murray threw out the first ball and Little League Baseball '88 commenced.

What followed warmed the spirits of everyone in attendance on that chilly day. In a classic opening day pitching duel, the Mets' Chris "Rollie" Rolandelli outhurledstalwart Braves ace Doug Ellinger. The Mets prevailed 4-2 as "Rollie" went the distance and recorded 13 strikeouts. Ellinger also pitched a complete game, striking out 10, but the Mets reached him for 8 hits in a strong offensive display. (see accompanying box).

Rolandelli led the way offensively in addition to his strong pitching. Chris was a perfect 3 for 3 including his first-ever home run - an opposite field shot to right which proved to be the winning run. David Leahy also contributed significantly to the Met cause with a two-run double. Accounting for the three Braves hits were Timmy Conroy and Chris Kondrat. Conroy drove in two runs with his two hits.

The Braves evened their record at 1-1 Monday with a solid 15-4 win over the young Red Sox. The game was played in solar conditions, but the weather didn't seem to effect the Braves bats as they exploded for 13 runs and 10 hits in the bottom of the third to break open a 2-2 game. Eleven successive Braves scored before the Sox were able to quell the uprising.

Leading the offensive parade for the Braves Andy Pozatek, Chris Kondrat, Tim Conroy and Brian Pattison with two hits a piece. Kondrat had a triple and 3 RBI's and Pozatek had an RBI double. Collectively the Braves totaled 12 hits.

On the other side of the ledger (baseball scorebook in this case) Ryan Freeman contributed the only two Sox hits and 2 rbi's of his own. The Sox were aggressive at the plate, but they just couldn't get the ball to fall in the seams between fielders.

Defensively, however, the Sox outshone the Braves, and well they did or this could have been a real blowout. Brendan Leung made several slick plays around second base as did Ryan Freeman at short. Michael Riley was a standout in center field and narrowly missed a diving catch of a sinking line drive to left center of the bat of Pozatek to start that third inning uprising. Kris Kondrat picked up the win for the Braves in a solid two-way outing.

The Yankees open their season Tuesday night versus the Sox. We'll report on that next week. Come out and see us when the weather warms.

Team results in first week of new season

Cohasset Little League
Week 1

The Mets and Yanks have jumped off to 2-0 starts at the expense of the Braves 1-2 and the Red Sox at 0-3.

Chris "Rollie" Rolandelli has been the dominant player in the league to this point. Opening day he went the distance on besting the seasoned Doug Ellinger 4-2. Rollie registered 12 K's while allowing only 3 hits and 3 base-on-balls. Offensively he accounted for the lion's share of the Mets' offense going 3-3 including a mammoth home run to right that proved to be the winning run. Eric Henry with a single in his first Little League plate appearance and David Leahy with a key double also contributed mightily to the Mets' offense. Timmy Conroy and Chris Kondrat accounted for all the Braves hits and rbi's.

Thursday, May 5
Mets 5 - Braves 1

Rolandelli continued where he left off on Saturday. Again he went the distance on the mound and recorded even better numbers as he beat the combined pitching efforts of starter Tim Conroy and reliever Doug Ellinger. In this masterpiece he picked up 14 strikeouts and yielded only two hits. Following his offensive pattern he lashed a two-run double after walks to Eric Henry and Scott Therault and an rbi single by the other big Met, David Leahy.

Monday, May 21
Braves 15 - Red Sox 4

Sandwiched between losses to the Mets was a thrashing of the Red Sox. Chris Kondrat pitched effectively for the Brave's but the Braves bats were the real story in this one. Pozatek, Kondrat, Conroy, and Pattison all had two hits apiece. Four other Braves also contributed singles for a total of twelve hits. For emphasis Kondrat had a two-run triple and Pozatek a run-scoring double. Ryan Freeman had the only two Sox hits of the the night, but things should improve in this area of the Sox game.

Tuesday, May 3
Yanks 17 - Sox 4

Red Sox pitching woes continued as the hurlers issued 18 base-on-balls. Mike Reynolds was the chief beneficiary of the Red Sox largesse as he picked up the win despite giving up seven Sox hits including a booming triple to deep center by Nick Welz, two solid singles by impressive first-year player Jim Magner, and two singles of the infield variety by Matt Larson.

The Yanks needed only five hits to go with all their walks. All five were produced by pitcher Mike Reynolds and shortstop Tim Brister. Mike had 3 hits, two for doubles and drove on 3 runs. Brister had a triple to right - center to go along with a single and he too produced three runs.

Meanwhile the Sox defense played effectively given the chance and probably produced some Little League history around these parts. The Sox alertly recorded a double play and a triple play - quite unusual for Little League Baseball. Both plays were keyed by the mind and arm of first baseman Jim Magner and, of course, kept untold runs from scoring.

Friday, May 6
Yanks 13 - Red Sox

In this return match the Red Sox finally got some decent pitching by Ryan Freeman, but his stint was limited to three innings and he left trailing 3-1, a decent game by any measure. Chris Stevens who relieved could not find his good control and the Sox suffered thereafter as the game (called after 4 innings due to darkness and drizzle) got away.

The Yanks got 5 hits among which were a triple by the speedy Charlie Endris, a double by Chris Goodman, and Tom Greco's first Little League hit. They parlayed these with good baserunning, nine base-one balls, and several Sox fielding errors into the final tally. The Sox could muster only three hits one by Jim Magner and one each for the good hitting McKenna brothers, Chris and Kevin. I"ll be looking for the Sox to starting hitting on all cylinders this week. See you at the field!

Housing Partnership asks for guidance

A representative of the newly-formed Housing Partnership Committee urged selectmen this week to assist the group in formulating plans for affordable housing in Cohasset.

Chartis Langmaid is a member of the committee who was delegated chairman by selectmen earlier this year. She requested that selectmen fill out a questionnaire to the state that would give official sanction to the committee.

Langmaid also asked if a professional planner is hired through state grant money obtained early this year by the housing authority, that his expertise and guidance be shared with the Housing Partnership Committee.

The new committee is responsible for working with developers to create affordable housing units through state grant programs such as Housing Opportunity Program and the TELLER program. Although they have held a preliminary meeting with a developer from Deck Point Inc., Langmaid said the committee needs more direction and expertise in order to responsibly comment on these plans.

The Housing Partnership Committee is not yet an official committee because selectmen have not yet filed a form with the state, she added. And in conversations with a state Executive Office of Communities and Development officials, Landgmaid was told the local committee must be given guidance by selectmen.

"I'd like to see that person work with use from the start. You can't expect a bunch of amateurs to see our way through this," Langmaid stated.

Selectmen noted that no one has yet been hired by the housing authority to help oversee the development of affordable housing.They also explained that no memorandum of agreement has been signed with the state yet. EOCD officials have not answered telephone calls, they noted, and an anticipated meeting with director Amy Anthony has not been scheduled.

Langmaid explained that because of other responsibilities, including Cohasset's respresentative to the South Shore Coalition Housing Task Force, she will be unable to continue as committee chairman.

In their discussion regarding Deck Point, Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said he would not support any plan not approved by the planning board. Langmaid explained that under the Housing Opportunity program, the developer may request selectmen sign an agreement "that they can live with this plan." The developer then goes to the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency for subsidy. And then the plan goes before the zoning board of appeals for a comprehensive permit. There is no need for planning board approval under this program, she explained.

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy told selectmen that the current Deck Point plans are incomplete and that a walk-through past town officials "is a complete farce."

Selectman Pratt said it would be a shame for the state to issue a comprehensive permit to an incomplete plan.

Despite their concerns, Langmaid said the state will not allow Cohasset to develop a few scattered affordable housing sites. "It's best to work things out with a good developer," she said, agreeing the town does not have to approve a "lemon" of a plan. "But it's not right to keep saying no, no, no."

Selectmen agreed to select another chairman, and to file the committee's notification form with the state.

In other business this week, selectmen discussed a request from Hugo's Restaurant to lease the Government Island parking lot.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson advised selectmen there was no zoning restriction which would prohibit such a lease. But specific provisions of the lease would have to be worked out.

Restaurant owner Paul Logue said the lot would be used as valet parking, particularly during the busy months of May through September. He suggested that about 30 cars could be parked in the lot. Responding to a request by selectmen, Logue said he would accommodate any resident who needed to park in the lot while he was using the property.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said before she made a decision, she would like to discuss the proposal with the harbor study committee. Selectman Cliff Mitman sugested that because there is a policy against selling any town land, perhaps more thought should be given to leasing town property. Perhaps, he said, there could be a trade-off arranged whereby parking along Border Street would be prohibited in return for the Government Island parking.

Another stumbling block to a lease may be liability. Atty. Henderson suggested the town's insurance committee be contacted.

Selectmen also suggested that concerned residents along Parker Avenue be notified about the proposal, along with members of the Government Island committee. Logue requested that selectmen notify him immediately if there was a problem in gaining a consensus about the proposal.

Classes begin at center

Gymnastic classes will be starting Monday, May 9 at the Cohasset Community Center 3 N. Main St.

Tennis classes will be starting Monday, May 16. Each class is limited to four players of equal ability. Call the Center at 383-0088 to arrange for a class to match your ability.

CPR will also be offered for the last time before fall Wednesday, June 15 from 6:45 to 11 p.m. This class will complete certification in one evening. Cost is $10 for center members and $20 for non-members.

Exercise is offered at 9 to 10 a.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 to 10:30 Saturday morning. Evening exercise is offered at 5 to 6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. New members will be accepted.

Beginning and intermediate yoga is offered Monday evenings from 7 to 8:30 with Mary Thomas of Hingham.

The Cohasset Community Center is a non-profit organization serving the South Shore area. While membership is higher than ever and people are attending more classes than ever before, class costs alone do not begin to meet our operating needs. This is because class prices are kept at artifically low prices to keep them affordable.

The gap between class prices and expenses is met by donations from individuals and foundations, government funding agencies, and corporations. More importantly, it is the individual donors who are the largest single source of contributed dollars. Gifts help meet the Community Center's yearly operating needs, and help to cover those expenses not provided for by class fees.

Rep. Murray fundraiser

The annual fund raiser for State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R), Third Plymouth District, will be held next Sunday, May 15 at the South Shore Country Club.

This year's fund raiser which will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. may set the stage for Murray's 7th Campaign for State Representative for Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

TO THE VOTERS OF COHASSET

The Cohasset Firefighters ask for your support on the override ballot.

Do not jeopardize the public safety of the Town.

FACT: The Police Department is working with 2 less uniformed Police Officers on the street than 10 years ago. Without the override, a 15% budget cut would mean a loss of 4 more Police Officers.

FACT: The Fire Department is operating with 4 less Firefighters and 1 less engine than 7 years ago. Without the override, a 15% budget cut would mean a loss of 4 to 6 Firefighter/EMT's and probably your ambulance service.

Postponements take toll on softball team

By Bill Modestino

SOFTBALL

Because of the postponments early in the season, the Cohasset varsity softball team was in a position to make up those games once the squad had an open date available.

As a result, the Lady Skippers played three games in three days last week.

The string of consecutive contests took its toll on Cohasset as they went down in defeat all three tries. Presumably, the Cohasset girls might have enjoyed the constant April showers more than most people would.

Monday, Cohasset was limited to four hits as Abington hung on to a 5-3 victory.

Abington (4-4) scored two runs in the second inning on throwing errors. In the third, two bases-loaded walks forced several runs and in the fourth, Abington tallied home another run on a run-producing triple.

Down 5-0, Cohasset narrowed the deficit by scoring three times in the fifth. Marge Murphy, a senior who allowed only two hits, took the loss of Cohasset.

Tuesday, Cohasset once again ran into another four-hitter performance as host Scituate (2-5) cruised to a 6-2 victory.

The only bright spot for Cohasset was Sara Bishop who collected two doubles, one of them a run-producing hit. Teammate Allison Ludlow, a catcher, played well defensively.

Wednesday, Cohasset managed to bang out seven hits this time but it wasn't enough to assure a victory. Instead, Rockland clobbered Cohasset, 19-4, on a 13-hit

What's wrong with this picture?

This is the home of an elderly resident.

If you were one of Eastern Edison Company's field personnel, you would have noticed warning signs that indicate this elderly resident may be in trouble.

At Eastern Edison, we're looking out for our elderly customers. That's why we have taken the time to carefully train our field personnel as Gatekeepers. Our Gatekeepers look for signs such as newspapers piling up, sums of uncollected mail, unkempt lawns or a sudden change in the resident's routine. Each of these significant signs may indicate that an elderly resident needs help.

Eastern Edison Gatekeepers make an extra effort to contribute to the well being of our customers. When Gatekeepers recognize warning signs they will call the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs hotline. The state agency will do the rest. They will contact the elderly customer and provide help if a problem does exist.

The Gatekeeper Program represents another aspect of Eastern Edison's partnership with the community. We use our everyday resources to lend a hand.

attack, to improve 4-1 in the South Shore League and 5-1 overall. Cohasset drops to 1-6 on the year.

Bishop had two of Cohasset's seven hits on the afternoon.

Cohasset will try to snap their three-game losing streak today (May 12) when they travel to Whitman-Hanson-Regional High School.

BASEBALL

The boys' baseball team also fell victim to Rockland last week, suffering a 8-1 decision to the Bulldogs (4-4).

Cohasset (5-4) scored in the fouth inning when Steve Maguire singled home Peter Sandblom, giving the Skippers an early 1-0 lead.

Cohasset had a chance to widen its lead when they loaded the bases in the fifth.

However, Rockland's junior left-hander David McCarthy, considered the best pitcher in the South Shore League, worked out of the no-out jam by retiring the next three batters. From there, Rockland added eight unanswered runs to coast to the victory.

The baseball team takes on Whitman-Hanson today (May 12) behind Cohasset High School.

BOYS' TRACK

Cohasset (1-4) could not overtake Abington's Brian Cox and Joe Ranahan each winning two events, leading visiting Green Wave (1-3) to a league victory, 75-61. Meanwhile, Sean Fitzsimmons won two event for Cohasset.

GIRLS TRACK

Cohasset remains undefeated (4-0) with impressive victories over Abington, 86-49, and Hanover, 112-23, last week.

Tuesday at Cohasset, Jen Coley took first in four events 110 hurdles (17.8 seconds), 330 hurdles (53.0), long jump (distance of 14'7") and triple jump (33'3") and Liz O'Leary (100 yard dash and 880 (2:40) and Sonya Butler 220 (28.9) and 440 (1:05) each won two, powering the host Skippers to a league triumph.

Other winners include two-miler Kerry Kirkendall who crossed the finish tape in 13:58; Tisha Wallace, tossing the shot put 28 feet and 10 inches for the first-place victory, and Nancy Riley, who walked away with the discus category (91'8").

Cohasset also grabbed the 4X100 relay event when Amy Crafts, Maria Kierce, Tisha Wallace and Patricia Smith raced home (1:01) with the decisive victory.

Brook Street is 1 year old!!

Mrs. Gretchen Billings

Blossoming in all the beautiful colors of spring is a wonderful boutique hidden in Scituate Harbor. The Brook Street Boutique, the life long dream of owner/manager Gretchen Billings, is celebrating its first anniversary. She attributes the success of her store to advertising in the Mariner papers and her extensive retailing and buying experience.

Exploding out of its beautifully decorated windows are all the flowers fit to print. Gretchen has brought together a unique collection of spring and summer fashions from the very popular Sarah Arizona cotton knit sweaters in pastel Aran style textures and the sporty mix and match cotton knits of Boscali to the exquisitely tailored linen/cotton skirts, slacks and jackets by David N. She has polo shirts by Classic New England, more sweaters by Kenneth Too!, short skirts, long skirts, walking shorts and brightly colored rayon dresses.

Gretchen has chosen accessories to complete all your fashion needs, whether you are attending a prom, business convention or travelling for fun. You will find sterling silver pins, perfect for the lapel of a linen jacket, also earrings, bracelets and collars in very modern designs or traditional designs decorated with onyx or marcasites. Lots of colorful costume jewelry and rhinestone hair combs fill the cases along with the newest fashionable favorites - silk scarves flowing with flowers and silk roses for pinning to a dress or clipping in your hair.

Straw handbags, beaded bags, hats, belts and stockings have been selected to match the fashions Gretchen has chosen.

For your traveling needs there are padded cotton print bags in all sizes for cosmetics, jewelry, lingerie, and eye glasses. To perfume your suitcase, closet and bureau or to give as a gift for your hostess, there is a variety of potpourri decorated with lace and pearls.

Gretchen's beautiful Brook Street Boutique is open everyday and is located at 3 Brook St., across from Angelo's supermarket. Be sure to ask about the upcoming Color Clinic, to be held May 21 and 22.

Thursday, at Cohasset a toss of 101'10" by discus thrower Nancy Riley set a school record while Jen Coley still remains undefeated in the long jump (15'5"), triple jump (33'3"), and low (16.6 seconds) and high hurdles (53.7), to pace the Lady Skippers to another league victory.

O'Leary captured the 100 with a personal best time of 12.4. Teammate Alyson James took second for the Skippers. Amy Crafts was a double-winner in the 220 (30.3) and 440 (70.6). Cohasset swept the 440 event when Michelle Hartley and Nicole Haefner took second and third respectively. Cohasset also swept the 880 as Lisa Coates (3:02), Allegra Snyder and Stacy Pierce each placed first, second and third.

Kirkendall won the javelin contest, unloading a throw of 83'5".

Capping off a successful afternoon, the Cohasset girls won the two relay events, 4X100 and 4X400. In the 4X100 the tandem of Megan Flores, Maria Kierce, James and Patricia Smith crossed the line in 60.7, and in the 4X400, the unit of Pierce, Snyder, Coates and Kirkendall made it a sweep with a 5:33.

The Cohasset girls will be on the road for three straight track meets. They travel to Rockland today (May 12) in a league match.

Youth soccer results

In one of the biggest victories in Cohasset youth soccer history, Under 19 girls upset league power Duxbury, 3-2 Sunday afternoon at Milliken Field. "The girls have lagged somewhat behind the boys in this town," said league coordinator Larry Shultz, "until now. This is a great win."

Coach Irene Lord's squad was led by Jen Coley, who scored the winning goal, and defenders Nancy Riley and Katie Ryan.

Another exceptional victory was registered by girls Under 14-1, beating Marshfield, 4-0, for their second win of the Coastal League season. 14-1 girls had lost to Marshfield 1-0- in the season's first half, and coach Jim Gallant praised goalkeeper Michelle Woodland. Scoring for 14-1 were midfielder Jen Reidy, striker Heidi Lincoln, and with two goals — Alison Ludlow.

For the boys' teams, Under 10-1 and Under 12-1 continued to demonstrate they're two of the stronger teams in their divisions, while Under 19 tied Duxbury 2-2. Under 10-1beat Plymouth,4-2, with four different players scoring. Jonathan Crafts, Matt O'Connor, Ely Kahn and Schuyler Doten all got goals for coach Terry Kahn's team. "We won at Plymouth," said Kahn, "which is vei unusual. Striker Joey Magner and reserve forward Justin Buckley played very well, and Doten's first goal of the season was a great shot."

Under 12-1 whalloped Halifax, 6-2, with Jeremiah Stevenson registering the team's — and town's — first three-goal hat trick. Chris Kondrat added two, and Scott Theriault one. Coach Steve Endris singled out goalkeeper Adam Reid and back Brendan Kinchla as well.

Boys Under 19 scored with 90 seconds left to tie Duxbury when striker Jim Reidy lifted a chip shot over the goalie's head. Brother Joel Reidy stopped a penalty shot earlier, and Mike Suhrbier scored in the first two minutes to give Cohasset a 1-0 lead.

In other boys' play, Under 10-2 lost to Carver, 4-0. Playing well for Paul Cotter's team were Colton Ralston, Steve Kovach and Bobby Meehan.

Under 14-1 was edged by Marshfield 2-1. Bill Bruns scored on a penalty shot, and both Doug Schultz and Steve Cahill turned in strong games. Under 14-2 had a tougher time, losing to an undefeated Marshfield squad, 8-0. Nevertheless, said coach Ed Gromada, goalkeeper Chris Brown played a good second half.

Under 16 boys lost to Pembroke, 6-1, and Under 12-2 had their game rescheduled.

In girls' play, Under 16 was edged by Norwell, 1-0. "The whole team worked effectively," said coach Steve Hague, "and we're really looking forward to the rest of the season."

Girls 12 and Under

Girls Under 14-2 fell to Marshfield, 3-0, but coach Jack O'Brien said he was encouraged. "We're shooting more," said O'Brien, "but we hit the goal posts five times, and kicked over the net another five." Standouts for 14-2 were back Sara Douglas, Erin McAllister and Robin DeVito.

Coach Don DeMichele's Under 12-1 earned a 1-1 tie at Hingham behind Emily Spencer's third goal of the season. Katie Carroll assisted on the score, while Sara Atherton and Tina Rousseau led the defense.

Under 12-2 lost to Plymouith, 5-1, despite Melinda Johanson's goal. "They scored four early goals," said coach Nino D'Urso. "After that, we passed well." D'Urso singled out Liz Corcoran and Jessica Snow for their play.

Under 10-1 lost 2-0, but coach Sandy Theriault got strong games from Liz Good, Jen Ripley and Chloe Chittick. Under 10-2 had its game against Kingston postponed until June 11.

"There's a big game this Sunday at Milliken," said coordinator Shultz. "Under 19 boys against Marshfield. They beat us, 4-0 at the beginning of the season, and we're looking for revenge."

sets, losing only one match (6-1 and 6-0). Massa also won in straight sets, 6-2 and 6-1.

Teammates Ellen Schramm and Sophie Redfield sealed the victory when they rolled to a 6-2 and 6-3 victory in the second doubles.

The most exciting match occured in the first doubles when Katie Lord and Kate Murphy took their opponents to the three-set limit. Unfortunately, they lost to the Rockland pair. They won the first set in the dramatic fashion, 7-6, winning the tiebreaker at 7-5), but dropped the final two sets by the score of 7-5 and 7-6.

The following afternoon, the Cohasset girls had no problem disposing of Middleboro, 5-0, as the Skippers won every match in straight sets.

Ryan and Massa won their singles matches while teammate Amanda Church chipped in with a victory at third singles (6-0, 6-2).

In the doubles, Lord-Murphy and Schramm-Redfield each walked away with victories as well.

BOYS TENNIS

Cohasset improved to 10-1 last Thursday as Joel Reidy's second singles victory provided the spark for the visiting Skippers and they went on from there to capture a 4-1 decision over Middleboro.

The Willshire brothers, Fred and Frank, were victorious in singles' action as well. Fred cruised to a straight set victory over his opponent, 6-1, 6-2, while Frank beat his opponent by the identical score.

The first doubles pair of Steve Myers and Jason Marsac did not lose a match in their straight-set victory over Middleboro (6-0, 6-0) Middleboro and Cohasset split the doubles' matches as the Sachems squeezed out a 6-2, 4-6 and 7-5 in the final set.

After a league match with perennial favorite Duxbury on Monday (May 9), Cohasset will play their next seven matches on the road.

Committee approves new AIDS curriculum

For the first time in the Cohasset schools, there will be a formal curriculum of family life, sexual education and AIDS prevention.

The school committee adopted the curriculum last week, based on several months of work by members of the health education community advisory committee.

The curriculum, which stresses family involvement and discussion, will begin next year with a film in the fourth and fifth grades. That film, "Growing Up on Broadway," will be shown to grade four and five females and grade five males. It will depict the changes of feminine puberty and feminine hygiene.

As the program progresses into grade six, students will be provided information about physical and psychological development, and reproductive anatomy and physiology.

Michael Gill, director of health education, presented the program to the school committee last week. Gill emphasized the need for teacher training which is continuing with in-service training sessions.

He also noted the need to combine boys and girls in the classroom. "My feeling is that by separating the sexes, students develop an uncomfortable situation when talking about sex in the presence of the opposite sex," he explained. "In high school, many students still feel uncomfortable talking about sensitive subjects."

Gill said in the fourth and fifth gardes, students will view the film and then hand in questions on index cards so their identity will not be revealed.

Throughout the curriculum, Gill emphasized the need for parental involvement. As outlined in the philosophy of the program, "Parents should be the primary sexuality educators of their children and are directly responsible for the conveyance of family values. The schools should function as partners with parents in a cooperative and complementary effort, in providing sexuality education."

A formal curriculum on AIDS prevention will begin in the seventh and eighth grades. Gill will meet with the students during their health education classtime to discuss AIDS, understanding physiology, and the human body. Junior high students will focus on family life and sexuality education, he stated.

The goal of this program, Gill said, is for every high school student to receive this educational program.

By the tenth grade, classroom teachers will not be the primary instructors of the AIDS curriculum. Although they will discuss the sociological aspects of the disease, Gill will meet with the students to teach them about the virus. Some aspects of the AIDS program will be discussed this year with the current 10th, 11th, and 12th grade students.

"A little knowledge is dangerous, but ignorance is even worse. So I want to try and get some of this information into the classroom by the end of this year," Gill explained.

The primary purpose of the AIDS prevention program, he told the school committee, is to prevent infection. Through the active involvement of parents, the program will "discuss the types of behavior needed to eliminate the dangers of infection," Gill said.

The curriculum was devised by Gill and 30 members of the health education citizens' group. Using portions of the state curriculum, they combined it with a number of other available materials and curriculum.

"I feel pretty good about this product," he stated. Every high school student, except advanced placement students who will also attend AIDS information classes in the 9th grade, will receive ten lessons on the subject.

The basic philosophy of the family life program, the director explained, is to "emphasize abstinance until they are ready for a monogamous relationship, hopefully in the form of marriage."

Gill commended the work of the citizens' committee. He added that any parent who feels uncomfortable about the subject matter should contact him about their concerns.

In other business last week, the school committee approved a METCO proposal which will now be submitted for funding by the state. According to Supt. Hart, 48 METCO students will continue in Cohasset next year in grades one through 12.

Among the staffing requests within the proposal is a resource teacher or administrative assistant who will assist with tutorial help at the junior and senior high school and two days in the elementary schools.

Because of Cohasset's participation in the state program, the local school system receives $60,000 each year. That is a direct reduction in the overall budget, according to Supt. Hart. It is money that would have to be found elsewhere if Cohasset was not a METCO participant, he added.

The proposal will now be submitted to the state for final approval and funding.

Effects of override . . .

Police Chief Joseph Kealey has been warned by the advisory committee to prepare for $106,500 in budget cuts.

"That means men," according to the chief.

Reducing a $710,000 budget by 15 percent is accomplished only by cutting personnel. In Cohasset's small department, that means three and 1/2 or four uniformed officers will be taken off the force.

"What I will have to do is take men from the bottom of the roll call - reduce according to least seniority.," the chief said. In a department of 17 officers, a reduction of four is significant.

The chief explained that no officers have been added to the department since 1972. Then, in 1980 with Proposition 2 1/2, that additional man was lost.

"Right now, we only have two officers out in the streets most of the time," he explained. "My only alternative if we have to cut is to have one man out, or none. I hate to see less than three men on a shift, for the safety of my officers and the town. But that's how we'll have to do it.."

The chief continued, "I don't think two officers are enough now. But in order to take $106,500 from my budget, it's the only way. It's not a scare tactic. The only way to reduce the budget is to layoff officers."

Chief Kealey remains optimistic that the budget will be approved by voters. "They said yes at town meeting. Maybe I'm the only one in town, but I think unless people are very confused about this, they'll vote for the operating budget. Most people seem to know what's going on."

Fire department

The advisory committee has not recommended a suggested budget cut, but Fire Chief Daniel Brock has already estimated that a 15 percent reduction will mean the loss of four firefighters.

The easiest approach to budget cutting, he admitted, would be to eliminate men from the department. But that would mean reducing the force by four EMT's, because the newest firefighters all carry that certification.

The loss of four EMT's might precipitate the loss of the ambulance license, which now requires 24-hour coverage. "Without four EMT's, we would not be able to man the ambulance 24 hours. I'm not sure how we could handle that. It's difficult to say. It's possible that we could lose our ambulance," the chief said.

Town's operating budget

Article one on the May 14 ballot is for the general tax levy override. The question, which must be approved by a majority vote, will request $659,911 in additional money for the town's operating budget, plus a number of articles approved by the annual town meeting.

They artciles include $2,000 for mosquito control; $50,000 for special environmental counsel; $12,000 for the lease/purchase of landfill lachinery; and $80,000 for the operation of landfill transfer station.

If approved, that amount will be permently added to the town's tax base. If the total is not approved, several town departments will be asked to reduce their budgets. The school department, which encompasses the largest portion of the town's operating budget, will feel the greatest pinch. Some town departments, too small to make any significant reductions, will be untouched.

The four articles passed by the town meeting must be approved by the ballot, according to executive Secretary Donald Andrew. Otherwise, voters will be asked to go back to a second special town meeting to rescind their original vote. If residents do not vote to rescind, another special election would have to be scheduled, "etc., etc.," Andrew explained. "This could go on for quite a while."

In the meantime, while residents await the election and the results, the advisory committee has recommended many town departments make contingency plans. "We're all hoping it won't be necessary, but we won't know until after the election," the executive secretary stated.

Art center offers classes on waterfront

Art on the waterfront

Paint by the sand and surf of the Cohasset waterfront by enrolling in a South Shore Art Center spring intensive workshop.

Five art-intensive workshops during the month of June are being offered by the Center, 119 Ripley Road as an opportunity for students to concentrate on a particular art medium. Advanced registration is required for all workshops.

Kicking off the month of June is a week-long Design for Printed Textiles Workshop, taught by Amie Ray, from 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. June 6 through June 10. The workshop is intended for students to explore the art of continuous pattern making and to learn the basic techniques in developing motifs on fabric. Designs for the textiles will be taken from nature's patterns.

That same week a three-day Sea Workshop will be taught by Ann Murphy, June 6, 8 and 10 from 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. The workshop is designed for those students with basic draw and paint skills who would like to focus on painting the moods of the sea. Working alongside Cohasset's intriguing waterfront will lend inspiration to the students' works. Oils, acrylics, watercolors or pastels may be used.

For those who missed Virginia Avery's winter watercolor workshop to the Caribbean they can enroll in her spring intensive workshop. One-Week Outdoor Watercolor, meeting daily from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. June 13 through June 17. Her workshop is designed for students with all levels of artistic ability, although a knowledge of drawing would be helpful. She will begin each session with a painting demonstration and then progress to working with individual students.

During the same week well-known regional artist Rosalind Farbush will teach Outdoor Drawing and Painting, from 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m., June 13-17. Students will explore different techniques of creative texture and various methods of paint handling, color and values. The workshop, also designed for all levels of artistic ability, is an intensive study of form using pencil and paint.

The perennials were judged by (l to r) Linda Ladd, Susan Roy, chairman of the judging, Barbara Barnard and Suzette Lebel, during this week's standard flower show at the art center. (Dave Sullivan)

Portrait artist Constance Flavell Pratt will come to the Center for a Two-Day Pastel Portrait Workshop, June 29 and 30 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Pratt will share with her students her expertise in creating successful commissioned portraits through demonstration, lectures and critiques. She will explore how to achieve a good likeness of the subject, keep clients happy while sitting, the use of photography as an aid in portrait painting and planning a studio which lends itself to portrait work.

The five intensive June workshops offers students the opportunity to concentrate on a specific skill and artistic medium.

An additional workshop, Children's Art Week, will be offered for young artists June 27-July 1 from 10:30 a.m. to noon each day. Students will work outdoors doing drawing, painting and mixed media projects.

For information on these workshops, fees and registration, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center programs are supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Science center kicks off capital campaign

On Thursday, May 5, the Trustees of South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell officially kicked off a million dollar capital campaign to build additional classroom space, better house the library and exhibit collections, and strengthen the endowment. This gala event, to be held at the Cushing Center in Norwell, culminates years of careful planning to address the needs of the region and the Center and to prepare for mounting a campaign to achieve these goals.

A Planning Committee was established by the Center in 1985 to complete a needs assessment of the South Shore and the Center. Following their year-long study and subsequent recommendations, a Building Committee was appointed. Building Committee members Pam Vinal of Norwell, Randy Wright of Norwell, architect and Chairman of the Board of Trustees Richard K. McMullan of Norwell, Eric Anderson of Halifax, Faith Burbank of Hingham, and Gaylen Litchfield of Norwell have done careful research for nearly two years.

The two-level addition, which will more than double the existing square footage, will provide needed classroom, exhibition and program space as well as library and store areas.

At present, there is no large facility at the Center to accomodate lecture-style presentations, receptions or special programs.

COHASSET VOTERS!

An important message concerning the Sewer Bond Issue Override in Saturday's Proposition 2 1/2 Election!

THE TOWN NEEDS YOUR AFFIRMATIVE VOTE! SATURDAY, MAY 14

What If The Sewer Override Fails?

- Whatever sewerage plan evolves later, less people will be sewered at a higher cost per homeowner.
- We will lose favorable 90% state and federal government funding.
- Cohasset will be in violation of the Agreement for Judgement, and the state could take us to court again. They could enforce the present plan even though 90% funding would not be available.

History

In 1975 the Town was cited by the State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) for violation of its permit to discharge sewage plant effluent into the Harbor. Planning and negotiations continued for five years. But in 1980 the Town was forced to sign an "Agreement for Judgement" under which it admitted the permit violation, paid a fine of $10,000, and agreed to rapidly pursue corrections.

In November 1982 the proposed corrections (a major and expensive sewerage program) were turned down by Town Meeting. The program included a large sewerage plant between North Main Street and Fair Oaks with an ocean discharge one half mile from Sandy Beach. The Town Meeting directed development of a scaled down program consistent with our small town finances and our delicate coastal ecology.

In June 1984 the scaled down program was overwhelmingly approved by Town Meeting. It included the expansion to our central sewerage district into the adjacent areas, where the highest concentration of poorly functioning septic systems existed.

After additional years of negotiation, engineering and continuing threats of fines, the plan has been modified, agreed to by the state, and re-affirmed by our May 2, 1988 Special Town Meeting.

What Does the Bond Issue Provide?

If question No. 7 is approved, sewers will be extended to 435 new houses and locations. Cohasset will close its small sewer plant and convert it to a pumping station. Our wastewater will be pumped to Hull for treatment in their plant under a 30 year contract. We believe this is most ecologically and financially-acceptable alternative for Cohasset, and it has the state's approval and backing.

Advantages

- Through regionalization with Hull, Cohasset will cease being in the wastewater treatment business.
- The most densely populated areas of town, where sewering is most needed, will be served.
- It will not be necessary to expand our wastewater treatment plant.
- There will no longer be wastewater discharges to the harbor.
- The average taxpayer will have an affordable cost ($45 per year for an average $200,000 accessed home).
- This will end our legal confrontation with the state.
- We can obtain 90% funding for the major portions of the project, prior to the September expiration of this funding program.

APPROVAL OF THE BOND ISSUE WILL MARK THE END OF YEARS OF UNWELCOME AND COSTLY LEGAL CONFRONTATION WITH THE STATE!

WE URGE YOU TO VOTE ON SATURDAY, MAY 14. WE SOLICIT YOUR "Yes" VOTE ON THE SEWER BOND ISSUE (QUESTION NO. 7) – THE LAST ITEM ON THE BALLOT.

BE SURE TO VOTE THIS SATURDAY! THE POLLS ARE OPEN FROM 8 A.M. TO 6 P.M. AT TOWN HALL.

Police continue investigation of state park cult

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Hingham police, along with the Department of Marine Fisheries, are continuing their investigation of an incident at Wompatuck State Park in which 11 individuals, dressed in medieval costumes, were found in an abandoned bunker.

During the raid last week at an unused U.S. Army bunker off Doane Street in Cohasset, police confiscated 25 weapons, including machetes, swords and a double-edged knife. According to police, the group, ranging in age from 18 to 41, had allegedly been using the bunker for about a year. There were medieval paintings and writings on the wall of the bunker which was secured by a lock the group had installed.

No one was arrested during the raid by the Department of Marine Fisheries the evening of Saturday, May 7. No drugs or alcohol were found at the site.

According to a parent of one of the youths involved in the incident (whose name will not be used. There have been no arrests, and therefore no names have been publically released by police), the group is not a cult, as police had indicated. They are, she stated, "good kids - they're the sweetest bunch of kids who care very much for each other."

Their interest in medieval pagentry, and not "devil-worship" as police stated last week, developed because of their disinterest in drugs and alcohol and their refusal to participate along with their peers.

"They became interested in medieval pagentry," she stated, "as their little wall against other kids their age. They don't do drugs and they don't drink. They've steered their interests and their energies into medieval history."

Many members of the group are college students, the mother continued. One is an advertising major at Northeastern University who was completing a school project. Together with the father of another friend in the group who was paid for his services, they gathered in the bunker last week to take photographs for the project.

"They worked very hard on their costumes," she continued. "The kids made them themselves. One was dressed as Robin Hood, another was Sir

New direction for theatre with new executive producer

As one staff member said, "we're still one big family."

But the South Shore Music Circus family has a new leader.

With a new executive producer at the helm, the summer theatre is looking forward to a successful season, some new performers, a few landscaping improvements and mended relations with their neighbors.

The new producer is Edward R. Kasses, a 38-year-old former talent agent who years ago "fell in love with Cohasset." He admitted it has been his longtime desire to become producer of this smalltown theatre.

"I fell in love with this place several years ago," he recalled last week, sitting behind a desk that encompasses most of his small, symmetrical office on Sohier Street. "As an agent, New England was part of my territory. I dealt with the Music Circus and Ron Rawson (former executive producer) and I absolutely fell in love with this place. This is where I always wanted to be."

Kasses was named producer last November, replacing Rawson who served in that position for more than 25 years. Kasses gave up a successful career as an agent to take this job.

"But you know, I would trade all those dinners in the finest restaurants, meeting glamorous stars and travelling all across the country just to be here. I'd rather be here in this office than anywhere else," he said.

The new producer lives in Titusville, N.J., but is currently house-hunting in Cohasset.

In November, just after the Music Circus season closes, Kasses will be married in Cohasset. It was time, he said, to think about settling down. "I like to think this will be my home. There is nowhere more beautiful than Cohasset in the summer," Kasses stated. "It was time to stop the travelling and to stay home with a wife and kids. What better place than in Cohasset?"

His career began while a graduate student at Ryder College in New Jersey. He was working toward a master's degree in not-for-profit business administration, organizing concerts during his free time. After graduation, Kasses worked for the state of New Jersey, once again prganizing concerts which led to his position as general manager of the Westbury Music Fair in New York.

That is a theatre-in-the-round, featuring performers and plays similar to those in Cohasset.

Soon after he was named Cohasset's executive producer, Kasses began the busy off-season work of booking talent for the coming season.

"What I have to remember is, number one, there is a basic audience for the South Shore Music Circus. I am looking to please that audience - -people who are accustomed to seeing certain performers here. But second," he continued, "I am working to bring performers here that will bring in a new audience. So, we have some events aimed toward the younger crowd - like Expose, Lisa Lisa and Cult Jam, Joe

Officials approve override 'minor miracle'

Town officials are breathing easier this week - the result of a "minor miracle" last weekend when residents approved six of seven override questions.

Approval of the Proposition 2 1/2 overrides will add about $1.58 to the tax rate. Voters denied a $50,000 front end loader for the highway department, a purchase that would have added about two cents to the tax rate.

Although Town Clerk Frances Marks expected a higher turnout, about 41 percent of the registered voters cast ballots in the May 14 special election.

Among the issues decided by the voters was final approval of the Ward sewer plan. By a slim 104-vote margin, the design and construction of a sewer pipeline into Hull was approved - the final hurdle for the plan which has been studied and debated for the past four years.

It was essential to gain approval of the plan in time for a June design deadline and a funding cutoff date of September.

The $6.2 million school budget will remain intact as a result of Saturday's override approval. School officials feared that a defeat of article one, calling for a $659,911 tax levy override, would mean a reduction of $330,000 from the school's operating budget. Such a drastic reduction, Supt. Stephen Hart stated, could have resulted in the layoff of 17 teachers.

Approval of ballot question one also meant no town employee layoffs and continued operation of the town's general budget.

As Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said, "I was dreading the thought of coming in here Monday morning and beginning a list of layoffs."

Instead, Andrew was feeling "very happy" this week. "I think it shows that people are concerned," he said. "And through the education process by the Parent School Organization (PSO), the League of Women Voters and selectmen, it showed that people did listen."

Regarding the defeat of question three, Andrew said there may still be a way to purchase the front end loader. "It only means the amount ($50,000) can't be excluded from the tax levy. Selectmen may want to go to a special town meeting for the

No summer meeting

Because of the successful override election May 14, selectmen voted Monday to rescind a special town meeting scheduled for this summer.

A special town meeting was scheduled for June 13. It was scheduled before the May 14 election, because selectmen needed adequate time to have a warrant printed and publicly posted.

The special town meeting would have been necessary if voters defeated articles within the override election ballot. But because six of the seven questions were approved, selectmen decided the special town meeting was not necessary.

Hingham included

Selectmen voted Monday night to communicate with Hingham selectmen about any developments and information pertaining to the town's legal situation with Cohasset Heights Ltd.

Selectmen in Hingham last week requested that all information regarding the issue be forwarded to Hingham selectmen. Their concern with possible leachate contamination into the Weir River prompted the request.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said matters discussed in closed, executive sessions will also be forwarded to the Hingham board.

Landfill supervision

After a lengthy discussion, selectmen agreed the board of health should continue to supervise town landfill operations and the future operation of the transfer station.

Board of health members said they were concerned with the dilemma, and recommended they continue to supervise the sanitary landfill operations, as well as the design and construction of the transfer station.

Selectmen also agreed that members of the disposal area study committee and the newly-formed recycling committee report directly to the health board. That board will keep selectmen informed of any decisions or progress in the matters.

The recycling committee, which now includes Merle Brown and Arthur Lehr, is looking for four additional members. Anyone interested in sitting on the new committee, should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

In a related matter, selectmen agreed with a suggestion made by the health board that special days be designated each month during which residents may burn brush.

Selectman Pratt will discuss getting the wood chipper machine from the tree and park department down to the town landfill on those designated days. Selectmen suggested the days be combined into one weekend.

Yard brush materials may be burned by residents who have obtained a permit. But the bulk of the problem is, according to Health Agent Joseph Godzik, the large pile of tree limbs and leaves left over from Hurricane Gloria at the landfill.

Selectman Pratt said he will discuss with Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle the possibility of using the chipper on that material during designated days.

The household hazardous waste collection day held in Hingham last weekend was a 'great success' according to local officials. (Kym Marcella)

Communication grant

Selectmen recommended a $1,000 transfer so the government structure committee can apply for a grant designed to "streamline and update" town committees and boards.

John O'Donnell, chairman of the government structure committee, said results of a recent survey indicated a need for greater communication between the 50 town departments and committees.

The $9,000 Incentive Aid Grant will provide the town with a comprehenisve study of town departments and boards. The study will indicate how better communication can be achieved to make town government a "coherent operation," ODonell said.

New director to lead Music Circus season

Piscopo and Joe Walsh.

In addition, we'll have favorites like Paul Anka, Tom Jones, the Broadway show, 'Evita'."

Together with the general managers of other seasonal theatres such as the Cape Cod Melody Tent and the North Shore Music Circus, Kasses worked throughout the winter trying to attract big-name performers into Cohasset. It was there that he faced the "real crunch" - the economics of entertainment.

The price of entertainment throughout the country is astronomical, he admitted. Big-name performers cost a lot to book, and turning a profit in a 3,000-seat theatre is difficult. "Theatres everywhere are no way near as profitable as they once were because of the price of the acts. The most profitable side of our business is from our auxiliary services - our concessions and souvenir sales," Kasses explained.

The other side of this ledger is that the Music Circus, under the parent corporation of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, is a not-for-profit business. Thus, income raised by the business is directed to area charitable organizations by the board of directors.

Although the Music Circus may not be large enough to return hefty profits every night, this is the producer's favorite theatre. "The nicest thing about this venue is its shape. It's actually an oval shape," he explained. "The furthest seat from the stage is only 50 feet away. That's a big part of its charm. People come here because of that intimacy. They pay the price of a ticket because they want to be near, to see and hear that performer. They don't want to be in a stadium and have to look on some television screen to see the performance. Our size is a large part of our success."

He continued, "People want a nice night out for the money, and that's what we give them. They are part of one of the nicest theatres in the country, and they are actually doing something good because the profits go toward charity."

Kasses said he already feels comfortable and settled into the South Shore Music Circus family. He is tall and thin - his most prominent feature is a dark, thick mustache. He laughs and smiles easily with his staff and with visitors to the small office building.

"We're trying to keep the price of tickets as low as possible," he explained, flipping through a schedule of performance dates. "There has been a slight rise, about five to ten percent this year."

Looking through the directory, he notices that Joe Piscopo tickets are $20, Jane Powell, a first-time Music Circus performer is $18.50, and Kenny Rodgers, with his only area performance, is the highest-priced performer at $36. Because Rodgers is an expensive act to book, Kasses figured it would take four sold-out shows for the theatre to make a seven-percent profit.

He is satisfied that this season's schedule covers a broad spectrum of entertainers for a variety of tastes. Although he has no solid goals for the future of the Music Circus, Kasses would love to book a 'real catch' - someone like Lisa Minelli. "I tried really hard to get her this year," he admitted.

"My job," Kasses said, "is more than putting people up on stage. What I try to do is to get performers who will make the night enjoyable for everyone. That is why people come here - they want a special night out. That's what I have to try to give them."
to give them."

For many years, it has been a struggle for the commercial Music Circus to exist peacefully within the residential area. This year, the new executive producer made it one of his priorities to meet with some neighbors, listen to their concerns, and try to settle their differences. As a result, Kasses has moved shows to an earlier starting time, particularly on Saturday and Sunday nights.

"There's very little I want to change around here," he added, "because Ron Rawson did such a great job. Basically, I'm just continuing in his footsteps."

The new executive producer has instituted an open-door policy. He wants to hear from the Music circus patrons - their compliments and criticisms. "I want to make this the best theatre. So my door is always open. I want people to write, call or to come see me with their comments. If something should be improved, I want to make those changes," he said.

"We're part of this community, and we want to be good neighbors," he added. "After all, I'm going to be here for a while."

Police continue cult investigation . . .

Guy, there was a princess and archers."

There was a man wearing a coyote head, as police stated last week. However, according to mother of the group member, it was a professionally-made costume and not the skin of an executed animal.

"These kids never, ever killed any animal. They all have pets. They never touched an animal," she stated.

According to police, there was an skull of an undetermined animal resting upon a "makeshift altar." The kids contend it was not an altar, but a "piece of art" they created from broken glass and metal in the bunker, she noted. The animal skull was something they had found in the woods.

Tests on the skull have not yet determined the type of animal.

The youths met, according to the mother, at King Richard's Faire last summer. Since that time, they have attended several medieval events and concerts, including one harp concert last weekend, she said.

The writings on the wall of the bunker, she noted, were artistic paintings of medieval characters such as Melian, Queen of the Elves, and the letters were a combination of old English and Anglo Saxon.

"The police also found skateboards and a skateboard ramp," she said. "Does that sound like the activity of devil worshippers? It was simply a place for the kids to gather in the cold weather.

"There was absolutely no devil worshipping involved here," she continued. "They were devastated that someone would think they murdered animals or worshipped the devil. The truth has been so twisted.

"I can understand the incorrect assumptions made by police, but they never asked the kids any questions, and have never attempted to ask the parents any questions."

She explained the weapons found by police in the bunker were from a private collection owned by one of the members. He allowed them out of his house, she said, for the photographic session only.

Sam Ameen, chief of the environmental law enforcement division for the Dept. of Fisheries and Marine, said the investigation into last week's incident is continuing.

Officer John Comeau is leading that investigation. Officer Comeau is away on vacation this week, he added. "We're still investigating and considering what kind of violations took place there," Ameen stated.

Hingham police are assisting in the investigation.

"What we found there were weapons. We can't stop our investigation there. We got a call and we investigated. We found kids dresssed as witches, and animals and we found weapons. We have to ask some questions and check out the situation. We found double-edged weapons. That's illegal," Hingham police Det. Gerry McInnis said. He will be assisting the Dept. of Fisheries and Marine in the investigation.

"That discovery in itself is enough to go further," he continued. "There were drawings on the wall of the bunker, there was a life-sized crucifix and chalices. What do we do, just take these kids at their word, or should we investigate a little more and worry about the community at large?"

Det. McInnis said although he did not see any blood in the bunker, samples have been taken and are being tested "in an area (in the bunker) that might contain blood."

Hingham Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy will be meeting with the Cohasset and Scituate animal control officers to review their log entries for the past several months.

Although Officer Murphy said there seemed to be an increase in the number of reports of missing animals in the last five months, it could be attributed to a long, harsh winter.

"There is no evidence that anything wrong has occurred," he said, "but I want to make sure about that. I'm going to check this out very carefully. If anything is wrong, people in these communities should be aware."

In Scituate, Police Sgt. Patricia McGlone recently returned from a three-dav seminar on religious cults sponsored by the Warwick, R.I. police department. Sgt. McGlone attended the seminar prior to last week's incident.

According to Det. McInnis, Sgt. McGlone will be supplying the investigating officers with information she obtained at the seminar. Sgt. McGlone did not return several telephone calls from the Mariner.

Cohasset Jimmy Fund

Again this summer, an opportunity exists for local businesses and residents to sponsor a town official for this season's Jimmy Fund Softball games between area towns.

Sponsorships are $30 each, and will sponsor a Cohasset town official for play in a five or six-game softball series between local area towns which will raise money for the Jimmy Fund. Last year, the program generated $2,100 which was donated to the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute.

If you wish to be a sponsor for the 1988 season, please call Jack Worley at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 383-6791. Team shirt orders will be placed June 3, so please call before Thursday June 2.

Voters approve override . . .

appropriation - we'll have to wait and see how much money we have in free cash. We could ask to take it from there," he explained.

As to the future, Andrew said it will likely contain levy overrides and debt exclusions in the years to come. A contract with the firefighters will have to be funded as soon as it is ratified, he explained. "I'm not sure how that will be funded, but it could possibly take a levy override, or perhaps with free cash if we have the necessary amount," he stated. "Realistically, we may be looking at a levy override as soon as the fall."

The debt exclusion items approved in Saturday's election will not impact the town's tax rate until fiscal 1990. The money for the various items, including $70,000 for science lab renovations, $32,000 for a school bus, and $550,000 for construction of a transfer station at the landfill, will be borrowed in fiscal 1989, but the first payment and interest on the loans will not be due until fiscal 1990.

Only question one for the levy override, and the capital outlay exclusions in question two, will affect the following fiscal year.

Question two includes $220,890 for: the town's revaluation at $70,000; $16,000 for a school department truck; $20,000 for Osgood School roof repairs; $15,000 for a five-town ambulance; $8,800 for fire department rescue equipment; $68,290 for a leachate control study at the town landfill; $18,000 for engineering fees at Cohasset Heights Ltd., and $4,800 for Milliken Field engineering work.

The passage of the first two ballot questions will raise the town's tax rate from $12.98 to $14.56 per $1,000 valuation.

"I can certainly see capital outlay or debt exclusion overrides in the future," Andrew stated. "In the harbor, we need retaining walls within the next year or two. There are fire department requests that were postponed this year, but we can't delay them forever.

Among those requests were $40,000 to refurbish Ladder 1 and $10,000 for refurbishing the department's forestry truck.

"I hope we won't be looking at many levy overrides in the future. Unless there are drastic changes, such as a tremendous increase in the town's fixed costs, or drastic cutbacks in net state aid or a serious decline in local revenue, I can't see levy overrides constantly in our future," Andrew added.

Supt. Hart, who had stated a 15 percent reduction would mean teacher layoffs, said he was "obviously pleased" with Saturday's outcome.

"I think it was a vote of confidence by the people about what is happening in their school system. There is a need to work hard to communicate to them that what is happening in education has a greater impact on the community." he noted, adding that the ballot victory demonstrated the "support for the Cohasset schools by parents and the greater community."

Supt. Hart said he was also "very pleased at the amount of work done by the PSO to inform the people of Cohasset. Their efforts were very well done, not sensational literature." The PSO mailed an information sheet to all Cohasset voters, outlining the reasons for an override and the effects of its defeat.

At their meeting Monday night, Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt praised voters for their "minor miracle." He noted that through the efforts of the press, cable television, the PSO and the League of Women Voters, "the public understood all the questions."

But Selectman James Gallagher noted, "I hope this isn't a trend. Because if it is, it's going to kick the little person out of Cohasset."

Selectman Pratt recommended that beginning next fiscal year, the entire budget review process should begin 30 days earlier in the year.

Plenty of activity in after school program

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It is a place where about a dozen children feel comfortable. They are among friends.

And rather than sitting at home watching television, they are busy enjoying their afternoons away from the classroom - quite an accomplishment, since they are only steps away from that classroom.

This is the afterschool program sponsored by the Cohasset public schools. Monday through Friday, from the end of the school day until 6 p.m., these children are supervised while they proceed through a schedule of exercise, arts and crafts and organized activities at the Osgood School.

Jane McGuinness is the director of the afterschool program. A certified teacher with several years experience, she has been in charge of the program since it began in September, 1986.

"I saw a couple of years ago that the League of Women Voters had done a study saying afterschool child care was needed in Cohasset. I was director of the religious education program At the First Parish Church at the time. I decided this type of program would fit into my schedule (she has two small children), and I called and applied for the position," McGuinness explained.

"This is a tremendously worthwhile program," McGuinness said last week as she observed a high spirited and impromptu game of basketball. "The kids are in a familiar surrounding, they are getting plenty of exercise and activity, and they are with their friends - not home watching television."

Each day is different for the 16 children who regularly attend the program. One day they may be tie-dying tee-shirts. The next day they will take a walk to the duck pond, with a brief excursion to the store for a popsicle, and the following rainy day will be spent in the Paul Pratt library.

"And the amazing thing is, I haven't lost one yet," McGuinness said with a laugh.

Along with her aide, Margo Nedrow, who is a certified senior lifesaver, McGuinness plans to make several trips to the beach in June. With parental permission, the children will be allowed to swim at Sandy Beach on hot afternoons. The school bus which makes regular runs along Atlantic Avenue will also accommodate the afterschool kids on those occasions.

"We concentrate on activities that all these kids will enjoy," the director stated, explaining that children from the first through the fifth grade are invited to join the program. Her goal is to have two programs that will separate the younger children and older students.

Tie-dying tee-shirts was the special activity one afternoon last week at the afterschool program. Participating in the endeavor were: (l to r) Jodi Colwill, Lindsay Laidlaw, Ian Matthews, Loni Colwill, teacher Jane McGuinness, Jeremiah Sargent and Sarah MacDonald. (Kym Marcella)

"In that way," McGuinness explained, "they can all do activities that really interest them. Once in a while, we have to do something now that will interest the younger kids, but not the older, and vice versa." Children in grades one through three comprise the bulk of her program at this time.

"We do a lot of activities," she stated. "We go to the community center to bowl. We walk to the library, and occasionally we watch videos in our school library - only when it's raining."

The children are allowed to bring bikes, scooters and other favorite toys with them. The children from Deer Hill are transported down to the Osgood School and parents are responsible for picking up their child at 6 p.m. "My one wish is to have a program at Deer Hill, too," she said. "That would be a natural way to have a program geared specifically for those older kids. It will be interesting to see two programs in the future."

The program, according to McGuinness, is more than child care. It is a structured environment where children are in a comfortable surrounding. They are among friends and peers, participating in interesting and varied activities throughout the afternoon.

"The kids are being watched while mom and dad are working. They are cared for, and they are getting a few hours of enrichment activities five days a week," she stated, adding that an aide is always there to assist with the children.

In addition to their physical activities and games, the children often help McGuinness bake cookies and brownies. Each afternoon they are given a nutritious snack which may include a carton of milk or juice and a piece of fruit or some popcorn.

The cost is another attraction of the afterschool program. According to the director, the cost is $100 a month or $25 per week, for five afternoons a week. The afterschool program

Neighbors protest valet parking proposal

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Government Island neighbors voiced their overwhelming objections to a proposal by Hugo's to lease the Edwin A. Young lot for valet parking.

Selectmen invited the neighbors to a hearing Monday night to discuss the proposal made by Hugo's owner Paul Logue. About 20 residents attended the meeting to voice their disapproval, citing increased noise and traffic problems along Border Street and Government Island.

One resident, Connie Parker of 36 Parker Avenue, had earlier advised selectmen she was in favor of the plan.

Logue requested permission last week to lease the parking lot at Government Island at night from May until September. He would use the lot to valet park 30 cars until 11 p.m. He would have the area supervised until that time, and lock the gate to the lot at 11 each night. A priority would be to accomodate residents. If boat trailers needed parking space there, he would provide the area, Logue said.

Selectmen closed the hearing after a long discussion about the project, but they did not make a decision.

Among the suggestions made by residents during the hearing was that Logue consider valet parking for his restaurant at the downtown commercial parking area. Residents said two-way radios would provide communication between the parking attendant and the restaurant. Such an arrangement would not impinge on a residential neighborhood, while utilizing an area designated for that purpose.

Logue said that was a possibility he would consider.

Richard Barrow of King Street said according to a 1983 ruling from town counsel, the town may only lease public property if the real estate is not needed for a public purpose. Many residents launch their boats from Parker Avenue, and the Edwin Young parking lot is the only place they can park their cars and trailers, he stated. As many as 15 cars have been parked there on a weekend, Barrow said.

But Selectman Burt Pratt noted that town counsel ruled last week that selectmen may enter into a lease for the property, as long as residents are not prohibited from using the lot.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she would like the area to be better utilized with the green area developed into a public park. The Hugo's proposal, she said, would "cut off the area to the town. Residents on Parker Avenue and Border Street will be affected by the noise."

Susan Cox of Parker Avenue objected to use of the public property by private enterprise. Residents on Parker Avenue have endured increased traffic and noise on that street. This proprosal, she said, "would be an undue burden. You're asking us to put up with too much."

"If you're considering leasing this property, and you think it's in the best interest of the town. maybe you'd be interested in renting Wheelwright Park to the Stop and Shop for additional parking," Elm Street resident Paul Pattison said. "You will be setting a precedent that is not good for this town."

Harbor Study Committee member Hamilton Tewksbury suggested a proposal be written out by Hugo's owner, outlining what he plans to do and what the lease arrangement will be. The harbor committee would like to review the proposal once it is submitted, he added. "I don't think you should do it, but we'd like to see the proposal before a decision is made," Tewksbury added.

Logue told selectmen he would be using the lot only during the peak evening business hours. He suggested that by ahving an attendant at the lot, it would eliminate the vandalism, at least until 11 p.m.

He said as a neighbor, he would consider all alternatives for additional parking. Logue said he would consider a proposal to use the downtown commercial parking area.

In other business Monday night, selectmen met with a principal and the planning consultant of Oaks Realty Trust, owners of the former Cox estate. The new owners who purchased the property from Yankee Oil, have not yet decided what they will do with the building. They met with selectmen to discuss their suggestions on the future use of the property.

James Miller, planning consultant for Oaks Realty Trust, asked selectmen to discuss their "priorities and concerns" regarding future use of the 58-room mansion. "We have not zeroed in on any options," he told them. "We're asking for an opportunity to meet with the planning board, the harbor study committee, and the conservation commission," Miller said, noting they had previously held discussions with the zoning board.

When asked if they were considering commercial or residential development there, Miller replied, "We are evaluating a range of opportunities." They included continued commercial use, although there are restrictions on the number of employees, parking spaces and . Reverting the property to single-family use "is unlikely to happen," he stated.

Miller said the trust, which includes partners Michael and James Palmer, Tim Shanahan, Steve Green, and Joe Dempsey, is also considering the property as an executive conference space or a yacht club "and a range (of ideas) in between." He noted there are also restrictions on the waterfront useage of the property.

Selectman Gjesteby asked Miller if the property owners were considering joining their property with Kimball's By The Sea to form a "whole conference project" on the waterfront.

Miller replied they had talked with the hotel owners "as neighbors at this point."

He explained that no formal plans have been developed and discussions with town boards at this point are preliminary. "We are allowing two or three months to get acquainted with the town

Despite that defeat, the Bruins captured the Eastern Sprints Championship last weekend competing against nearly 20 of the top North eastern teams. The team is now preparing for the Nationals scheduled for next month in Pennsylvania. Word has it that they are thinking "gold," we'll be anxious to hear how they fare. A challenging time

It seems a little quiet in town now. That's just the way it should be as summer appraoches this coastal community.

Late spring and summer always seems to be a bit slower, and more subdued than the busy fall and winter months. But with the economic turmoil experienced by the town this spring, our hectic seasons extended a little longer than usual.

As we look back on the last few months, it may all seem like a blur. We were approaching town meeting as usual, and town budgets were being prepared. Our local candidates were gearing up for the annual campaign, aand everything seemed in order.

Then, out of the blue, the quiet stopped and we were told we didn't have enough money to operate town government. It would take an override of Proposition 2 1/2 to get the necessary money. This was a thought foreign to most of us - Cohasset had existed for eight years without a serious consideration of an override.

Things became confused at this point, but they were never desperate. We all learned quickly, perhaps too quickly, just what it would take to get the town budgets back to a decent operating level. It would take an override that would hurt, but we listened to the reasons for it, and we took the necessary action.

Not that there weren't some anxious moments. Many town officials and town employees were not sure how this override would turn out. Neighbors questioning neighbors had no clear prediction as to how voters would react to a deficit within the privacy of the polling booth.

It was indeed a toss-up, but the override won. The vote tally clearly indicated that people were knowledgeable about their town government, that they cared about the town and its schools, and that the education process initiated by town departments and civic organizations worked well.

We learned that overrides are a necessary and vital part of the Proposition 2 1/2 legislation. They were built into the law to ensure local control over this state legislation.

It was a strange time. Town officials were learning, step by step, about the override process - a new lesson for them all. And step by hesitant step, the media was trying its best to keep up with the constantly changing flow of information. We too were part of this education process - learning about a new facet of the budget deficit each week while trying to report on the override process as it changed each day.

It was a hectic, challenging time for everyone. But everyone in Cohasset should take at least a moment to pat themselves on the back for a job well done. We came through this latest challenge and we have succeeded.

Selectman James Gallagher made an interesting comment this week. Loooking at a future filled with possible overrides, he said he hoped the 'little man' is not being pushed out of this town.

That is a serious consideration - one that needs some thought as we begin a new fiscal year.

A bill allowing state takeover of animal control from towns surfaces again in legislature. Bill 3596 is practically word-for-word as rejected in last session. Some features: color-coded collars for degrees of 'dangerous dog' designations. Tattoo ID's. Fines starting at $250 for violations contained in 10-page bill. A 7-member Animal Control Commission with total power over all animal laws and home rule. $100,000 pet owners liability insurance. Area animal groups oppose $250,000 bureaucracy

Beach association donations needed

To the Editor:

In a few days, the Sandy Beach Association will be mailing letters to each of the 2600 homes in Cohasset asking for their financial support of the Beach in 1988. When townspeople buy parking and dump stickers each year, none of this money goes to the Sandy Beach Association which relies almost entirely on private support.

Last year about 17 percent of Cohasset households provided such support which was also 30% of those who obtained car stickers. For 1988, the Association hopes to increase these percentages significantly as well as the dollar amounts of donations.

The cost of operating the Beach is substantial — about $33,000 last year. This included six guards who cover each day of the ten weeks season — ten hours per day, plus three beach cleaning workers. Last year the Association received many favorable comments about the way the Beach was managed and mantained.

Beach cleaning to repair winter storm damage is another big expense — between $6,000 - $8,000 each year, while insurance, payroll taxes, utilities and supplies are other key items.

Letters

The Association hopes that each Cohasset family which uses and values our beautiful beach will make tax-deductible contribution this Spring to the support of this invaluable resource. With enough financial support, we can continue to have a clean, safe and pleasant Beach where we and our families can have another enjoyable summer in Cohasset.

Recently the Cub Scouts performed a very useful service by cleaning debris from the Beach. Also the VFW and Mr. Austin Ahearn have volunteered to build and install some warning buoys in front of the Beach to warn off boats which approach too closely. These two contributions to the Beach are most helpful and much appreciated.

Resident takes issue with budget letter

To the editor:

I must take issue with several statements from Dee De Santis' letter of last week.

It is most unfortunate that Mrs. De Santis "was afraid to stand up at town meeting and put forth her doubts." At that public forum each side would have had a voice. To choose, instead, to raise these inquiries on the editorial page of the local newspaper at the eleventh hour before a crucial vote was, in my opinion, irresponsible.

To address the assertion that "the advisory committee did not review the school budget this year because it was submitted too late," members of the advisory committee, the school committee, the school administration and the PSO all assured me that two members of the advisory committee participated in those school committee meetings involving the budget. These are open meetings.

The school budget is part of the town budget. There was no reason to consider it as separate. To infer that this was in any way underhanded is an insult to the people involved.

The statistics requested by Mrs. De Santis concerning class size, student to teacher ratios, S.A.T. scores, college acceptances, etc., are all available. Data of this sort has its uses, but these issues are politically charged and highly debatable. Combining Deer Hill and the Osgood School falls under the same category.

To the question, "Do we really need the breadth of the current academic curriculum?" the high school has combined smaller sections of classes and not all subjects offer 4-5 levels. It is a rare moment when a parent thinks a school offers her children too much.

Mrs. De Santis' "fear that a lack of candor may result in a real disservice to the town, and ultimately to our children" was unfounded. There was never any lack of candor.

I am grateful that the children of Cohasset will suffer no consequences from such uninformed rhetoric.

Sincerely,
Patricia Murphy

Is there lead in your water . . . what to do

A Special Message From Your Cohasset Water Officials

You probably know that lead can be a threat to your health. How much of a threat depends on how much lead gets into your body and how much your body retains.

Sources of lead in the enviromnent include old paint, contaminated soil, leaded gasoline and, to a lesser yet significant degree, drinking water.

Knowing how lead gets into your tap water and what you can do to avoid it will minimize your risk.

Harmful levels of led in drinking water are almost never found at the water source. Whether you drink water that comes from a reservoir, lake, river, or well, the amount of naturally occuring lead seldom poses a problem. But in between the source of your water and your faucet is a series of pipes and connections, including the plumbing in your home, and it is here that you could find a problem.

The age of your home will tell you a lot. Homes built before 1940 may have lead pipes. Lead pipes in service connections and in plumbing were last used in the 1930s. So if your home is more than 50 years old, there's a good chance there are lead pipes within the building. If you aren't sure, have a plumber inspect it.

Lead solder was also used to joint pipes, until it was banned in Massachusetts in 1986. Soft water and acidic water are especially corrosive. The more corrosive the water, the more lead it can dissolve as it passes through the pipes.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidney, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- If your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- If your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and
  - If the home is less than five years old, or
  - if you have soft, corrosive or acidic water, or
  - if water sits in the pipes for several hours.

Some good news is that after five years or so lead from solder no longer poses a risk of contamination to standing water. In now common copper pipes, not only is most lead solder dissolved out within about five years, but also a coating of lime builds up inside the pipe and seals in some of the lead in these joints; the older the plumbing, the lower the probability of excessive lead from solder. So, as a general rule, original plumbing more than five and less than 50 years old poses a lower risk.

If you have high-risk plumbing, whether or not you have had your water tested for lead, you can make a few simple changes in your habits at home to reduce lead-related risk to your health.

Draw drinking water in the morning (including the water for juices, coffee, and so on) only after using water for other things, such as a shower.

If water has been sitting in your pipes for six hours or more, use that water for things other than drinking.

Do not use hot tap water for cooking, drinking and preparing baby formula or foods.

Beware of commercially available devices for the home whose manufacturers claim they purify water. None of the following are effective against lead.

- Carbon filters, sand filters, cartridge filters: While these products do filter out certain contaminants, they do not remove lead nor reduce corrosivity.
- Water softeners, iron removal systems, and ion exchange units all soften water, and soft water usually increases corrosion.

Certain highly technical treatment processes can be used to reduce lead, but because of their sophistication the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering recommends their use only with the services of state-certified drinking water facility operator.

The drinking water delivered to your home's service connection by the Cohasset Water Department consistently meets existing and proposed EPA standards for lead and the Cohasset Water Department has been treating water delivered to consumers to control corrosivity since May 1978.

Art center receives funding for summer festival

Two major Massachusetts arts foundations have awarded funding to the South Shore Art Center. The funds are earmarked for a new concept "Artist in the Gallery" and for the Center's 33rd annual summer arts festival.

Both the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and the Massachusetts Arts Lottery council have designated the Center, at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset to receive funding from their agencies. The grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities covers general programming and the arts education at the Center. This agency recently awarded the Center a technical assistance grant for the purpose of conducting a market research survey to identify current and potential audiences and to provide the Center with marketing information for its programming.

The Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council funding (pending approval) is administered through its local South Shore councils in Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Stoughton.

The Hingham Arts Lottery Council has designated funding for "Artist in the Gallery," a program which will bring together audiences and artists for dicussions of artwork on display in the Center's Bancroft Invitational Gallery. The idea is to generate educational discussions of the various art media with the artists involved in exhibiting at the Center.

The "Artist in the Gallery" program will be launched during the Center's June Exhibit, "3 Photographers" featuring works by Amy Whorf, David Saul and Krisanne Carnovale. Whorf will lead a discussion for Hingham students, and for a senior citizens group.

The remainder of the funding from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council is to be applied to the South Shore Arts Festival sponsored by the Center and held each year on the Cohasset Common.

Historical museums open for summer season

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museum buildings at Cohasset Center will open for the summer season Saturday, June 18. The Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime Museum are scheduled to be open through Sept. 30 each afternoon except Mondays, from 1:30 to 4:30. Admission for adults will be $1.50 per building, with the exception of opening day, June 18, which will be Open House day with free admission.

As a special feature on opening day, members of His Majesty's 47th Regiment of Foot, an authentically-reconstituted British Army unit of Revolutionary time, commanded by Cohasset's Col. Bruce D. Collins, will be present in full uniform to greet visitors, to guard the portals of the museums and to demonstrate the original manual-of-arms of the British Army used in the latter 1700's. The original Royal 47th Regiment of Foot served at the Battle of Concord, Bunker Hill and Saratoga, where they formed part of Gen. Burgoyne's Army.

The Historical Society's two buildings on Elm Street at the village are an important source of information relating the history of this small New England village. The Capt. John Wilson House, an 1810 Sea Captain's home, today houses an extensive collection of artifacts, home furnishings, artworks, toys and dolls from the old homes of the town, in the ambience of an early 19th century setting.

The Maritime Museum, dating from the latter 1700's, originally was Samuel Bates' Ship Chandlery and Counting House. Today it houses the Society's collections relating to Cohasset's maritime history. Artifacts, relics of shipwrecks along our shores, models of sailing vessels, 19th century equipment from the town's mackerel schooner fleets, and the story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse just off our shores can be seen in this historic building.

Also on view in the Maritime Museum is a general exhibit of artifacts from the early years of the town. These range from shipwright's and housewright's tools to stone tools of the Amerindians, from a 19th century cordwainer's desk with its equipment to an early apothecary, and from old school desks to a "fisherman's country store." Maps, documents and artwork of an earlier era in Cohasset abound in the Maritime Museum.

Plan to visit the Cohasset Historicl Society's Open House day Saturday, June 18, to see the 47th Regiment of Foot and to view the unique and fascinating exhibits preserved by the Society in its unusual and historic museums on Elm Street at Cohasset Center.

Cohasset Little League - week two results

The Mets continued to roll in week two at the expense of the pitching poor Red Sox and ran their record to 4-0. The Sox dipped to 0-5 but showed definite improvement. The Braves improved to 2-2 with a tie as they took a Monday night game from the Yanks and then tied the Yankees on Thursday night. As a result, the Yanks are now 2 and 1 with one tie.

Mon. May 9 Braves 8 - Yankees 5

In a tightly contested ballgame, Chris Kondrat, pitching for the Braves, got the better of Mike Reynolds and his Yankee mates. Chris allowed four hits and five runs to notch his second win of the year. Brian Pattison keyed the Braves offense with two hits and two rbi's. Charlie Endris reached base three times for the Yankees on a hit and two free passes.

Tues., May 10 Mets 21 - Red Sox 5

This one was tight for one inning. Nicky Welz opened on the mound for the Sox and set the side down in order. In the home half of the inning the Sox jumped to their first lead of the year on a walk to Brendan King, a single by Chris Stevens, and an infield grounder by Jim Magner.

Sox spirit quickly deflated when Nicky came up with a strained elbow and could not continue. Much to his surprise, first-year player Jeff Littlehale was selected by Coach Fahey to take the mound. Jeff threw very well, but couldn't find the strike zone as often as he'd like. Jim Magner finished up for the Sox and when it was over the Mets had amassed 17 base-on-balls, banged out seven hits and accumulated twenty-one runs.

Scott Theriault breezed through his four innings for the Mets. Scott nailed 6 strikeouts while allowing only 2 free passes and 4 base hits. Spencer Henderson, playing third base for the Mets, had a great night offensively. Spencer had 3 base hits in 4 at-bats, scored three runs and had 4 rbis. In addition to his first pitching assignment Littlehale got his first Little League hit with a solid line drive to left in the second inning.

Thurs. May 12 Yankees 10-Braves 10

This one was an extra-inning thriller. The Braves seized control of the game in the top-half of the sixth as they pushed acorss four runs off Jim Brister "on the hill" for the Yankees. Jim Conroy and Chris Kondrat were the nucleus of the Braves' assault. Between them they had five hits, scored five runs, and drove in five runs.

The Yanks, not to be denied, came back with three in their half of the sixth to knot the game at 10. Charlie Endris, Chris Goodman, and Mike Reynolds keyed the Yankee comeback. Each player had two hits including one extra-base hit. Goodman had a total of five rbis, and his effort did not end there.

Chris came on in relief in the bottom of the seventh and struck out the side to give his team the upper hand, but his mates foiled to counter and lift the score even. The game will be continued prior to their next regularly scheduled meeting.Friday, May 13 boards," Miller stated.

Timothy Shanahan told the board they were looking into the legal, politicial and social aspects of possible plans for the property - "how it will fit in with the town and our economic options. It's a pretty intensive study," he said.

"If I bought the land, I would not invest $2.6 million and not have an idea. I would have some firm ground," Selectman James Gallagher said.

But Miller replied that because of the financial standing of the partners and the predicament of the previous owner, purchase of the property was an "exceptional investment. It was an opportunity with specific plans to develop the property," he said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle told the partners that until a specific plan is proposed, there was no need for further discussions with the board.

Guide to taxes at library

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is distributing to the Hingham and Cohasset libraries a very informative booklet titled, "A Guide to Estate Taxes' published by the Massachusetts Department of Revenue.

The guide helps taxpayers understand their legal obligations.

"The threshold at which a gross estate becomes taxable, for example, was increased to $200,000 from $60,000 by the legislature — a change that cut by two-thirds the number of estates that are now liable for State taxes." said Rep. Murray.

Pape earns leadership award

Two Explorer youth leaders were honored May 1 at an awards ceremony in Cohasset.

For the first time in the Old Colony Council, the Explorer Leadership Award has been presented. The two youth leaders were Paul Kearney of Explorer Post 11 in Abington, and John Pape of Post 28 in Cohasset.

Exploring is the co-ed division of the Boy Scouts of America. Exploring serves young men and women between the ages of 14 and 21. High Adventure and Emergency Medical Service are just some of the highlights of Exploring. Both young men have been the presidents of the Explorer Officers Association, which organizes all Exploring Posts in the council. The council serves 41 towns on the South Shore. Summer wind ensemble classes

The South Shore Conservatory music day camp program for high school musicians, the Summer Wind Ensemble, will give its final concert at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset August 5.

"This is an exciting finale for the students after their weeks of musical study," said Jim Simpson, director of the Conservatory. "We are very grateful to the Music Circus for permitting us to use the tent for our final performance."

The 16th season of the school's summer program will begin July 5. Students are auditioning now for placement in intermediate and advanced groups. Brass, woodwind and percussion players in grades 7 through 12 are eligible. Between 65 and 75 students will be chosen from many towns, mostly south of Boston. They will come to Cedar Hill in Hingham Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., intermediate students for three weeks and advanced for five weeks, to work with some of the most respected music educators in New England.

Malcolm W. Rowell, director of Wind and Symphonic Bands at U. Mass. in Amherst, will return for his fourth season as Music Director and Conductor of the Advanced Ensemble. Assisting him, as conductor of the new three week Intermediate Ensemble, will be Sally Tucker, who is a music educator in the Scituate public schools. Stephen Massey, Chairman of the Music Dept. in the Foxboro public school system, and well known jazz educator, will head up the jazz program, a popular part of the curriculum.

Daily band practice, theory, chamber music, practicing and listening skills, along with individualized attention and commitment to a high artistic level of performance, challenge the student and help him conquer his musical weaknesses.

The daily schedule is interspersed with master classes, faculty concerts and recreational activities such as a trip to Great Woods, a beach picnic and boat trip, which are in the works for this summer.

The 1988 concert schedule will include performances at Cranberry World in Plymouth, Faneuil Hall Market in Boston, the Hingham Bandstand on Hingham Harbor, the First Parish Church in Duxbury and the final program at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

Students may still apply to the Conservatory for admission to the Wind Ensemble by contacting the school, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham. The South Shore Conservatory is a non profit community school of the arts and is funded in part by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Art center sponsors Tom Rush at Music Circus

Tom Rush will be performing on June 24 at the South Shore Music Circus, as part of the 33rd annual South Shore Arts Festival.

This year's three-day pageant of arts, crafts and special performances, to be held June 24 through June 26, promises to showcase a wide variety of new and exciting creative efforts of New England talent.

The annual Festival is a major community outreach and fundraising event designed to help generate broad-based support for the South Shore Art Center.

The center is a nonprofit organization chartered to bring the highest calibre art and art education to the general public, and to serve artists by providing a place for them to display their works and talents.

"We've tailored the Festival's schedule of events to that it offers something for everyone," said Joel Conrad, executive director of the South Shore Art Center. "All of the events are accessible to the handicapped and are free or require minimal admission fees. Our main goal is to bring the arts to as many people as possible — regardless of age or artistic ability."

In addition to the Rush concert, the Festival will also feature performances by a number of groups including: Mobius Performing Group, one of the leading interdisciplinary companies in Massachusetts; Stephen Baird, streetsinger; City Lights, a break dancing, rap singing group from Boston; and Puppet Projects, one of the first puppet theatre companies on the East Coast.

Traditionally, the South Shore Arts Festival attracts upwards of 2,000 people from the South Shore, Cape Cod and the Greater Boston area. This year, however, Festival sponsors project a 50 percent increase — the result of a substantially expanded program.

The South Shore Art Center is funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, interested parties are invited to call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Murray will run

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) of Cohasset announced her candidacy for re-election as state representative at her kickoff fund raiser May 15 at South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

She is seeking her seventh term as a legislator.

Rep. Murray, whose district includes the communities of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, is the ranking minority member of the Joint Legislative Committees on Counties and the Local Affairs Committee.

She also serves as Chairperson of the Special House Commission on Oversight of Construction at the University of Massachusetts-Harbor Campus.

Rep. Murray has resolved many district problems through her efforts together with state departments and agencies.

Rep. Muray has also brought hundreds of students to the state house to learn how their state government works.

Afterschool . . .

begins about noon and ends at the regularly-scheduled closing time fo 6 p.m.

"That ends up to less than $2 an hour. You couldn't get babysitting for less than that," McGuinness said. "And we are much more than a babysitter here."

All Cohasset school children, including special needs students, will be accepted into the program.

Registrations must be made through the superintendent's office. It's important to consider registration for next year as early as possible, McGuinness warned.

Thanks for your attention. We simply want to tell you about dirty chimneys. In one year more than 60,000 chimney fires burned in the United States with deaths from these fires increasing at a rate of 69%.

Dirty chimneys can burn — and take human lives. That's why you should give us a call for an inspection of your solid fuel heating system. The inspection could reveal a dangerous chimney.

Pops Concert

CHS' annual Pops Concert is being held this Thursday, May 19, at 7:30 p.m. The $2 admission fee benefits the performing arts at the high school. A little of everything to dazzle and entertain the audience including Show Choir and Jazz Ensemble is what you can expect to find at the high school's cafeteria tonight!

Heritage Music Festival

The senior chorus at CHS is attending the Heritage Music Festival May 20-21 in Newport, RI. Mr. Marks, the director of the chorus, says "we participated two years ago and received four trophies, including best overall. We'll compete in Madrigal, Swing and Show Choir categories. We look forward to another good showing!"

Guest speaker at high school

Janet Lahive was a recent guest speaker of the Marchandising class at the high school.

Mrs. Lahive is also serving as a member of the Advisory Board for the new Merchandising Program, which has been coordinated by Mrs. Wool of the Business Department.

Discussion topics included the target market of the Appleseed's stores, types of merchandise offered, and development and layout of the catalog. Two different catalogs were distributed to the students. Typical clients for each catalog were described, and relevant products and services particular to each one were discussed.

The class enjoyed this informative presentation given by a local business manager.

A special thank you

Deer Hill students create quilt

The Deer Hill school students spent the 1987 and 1988 school year researching and creating a school quilt. Students from the fourth, fifth and sixth grades designed, cut and sewed a 8 foot by 11 foot square each depicting a Cohasset scene. Local artist and quiltmaker, Carolyn Sammon worked each week with the students to create the Deer Hill quilt. The quilt will hang at the Deer Hill school.

Quiltmaker Carolyn Sammon assisted students in creating a Cohasset quilt.

Several CHS bands and choirs will perform May 19 at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

"Save Energy" contest

Ruth Stetson, a representative of the Eastern Electric Company, distributed certificates to the sixth grade talent pool class for their entries in the "Save Energy" commercial contest.

Courtney Schultz, Liz Devaney, Sara Kirk and Megan Burns were given tee shirts and certificates for receiving Honorable Mention in the 4-6 grade division.

The students entered the contest while they were studying the problem of acid rain in the Thursday Talent Pool Class.

Ninth grade Humanities

Monday, May 2, a presentation of "Road to the Renaissance" was given in the auditorium to all ninth graders. This production was part of an outreach program sponsored by the Higgins Armory Museum and funded by the P.S.O. Dressed as a nobleman and a lady of the manor two characters demonstrated what it was like to live in Elizabethan England during the Renaissance. Through the use of authentic costumes including armor, role-playing techniques and student participation, the characters allowed everyone to participate imaginatively and creatively.

Leadership council

As an alumni school which has sent scholars to the Congressional Youth Leadership Council, Cohasset High School has been invited to send one student to Washington to witness the swearing-in of the President of the United States at the U.S. Capital and to attend the Inaugural Ball.

Melissa Nothnagle will represent Cohasset High School during the four days of activities surrounding the Presidential Inauguration. Melissa will meet with members of Congress, historians, academicians and leading American journalists to gain a deeper understanding of the history, tradition and significance of the American electoral process and the inauguration.

National Science Contest

The sixth grade students at Deer Hill recently participated in a National Science Contest.

The results were quite good. The top ten scorers deserve recognition for the fine scores they achieved. The top scorer Ann Lindgren had one question wrong and she changed her mind after having it correct originally! The remaining nine highest scorers in order were: Ann Senechal, Brendan Mulligan, Bonnie Krueger, Bethany Maciel, Lara Martin, Tim Bristen, Gerht Lubitz, Spencer Henderson, Larissa Huskins.

Award-winning story

By Brett MacQuarrie
Deer Hill School

Once upon a time Ryan the Hippo came barging into the dentist's office, and the secretary asked, " Do you have an appointment with Dr. Cane?"

"Yes, I do," said Ryan. "O.K. you can pass," said the secretary.

So Ryan walked into the teeth cleaning room.

Dr. Cane asked, "What is your name?"

"Ryan," said Ryan.

"Now open up" said Dr. Cane. "Mmmmmmm, looks like you haven't been brushing lately."

"Well, I don't have to brush. I just open wide and birds come flying and they clean my teeth." said Ryan.

"Well, brushing is important, too" said Dr. Cane. "You must brush in and out of the gums. Watch out for cavities. Cavities are caused by not brushing and flossing and by eating too much junkfood," said Dr. Cane.

"Well, I've got to go now. I've got some brushing to do." said Ryan.

Cohasset victim to W-H slump-breaker

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

What a way for the visiting Whitman-Hanson baseball team to break out of their hitting doldrums as they banged out a season-high 10 hits en route to a 6-3 victory over Cohasset (5-8 overall and 3-6 in the Small Schools division) last Thursday.

In addition to the solid offensive production from Mike Casey, Jeff Cashman and Tim Byron, all turning in a two-hit game, the Panthers (5-6) received an outstanding performance from junior Derek Lavangie (3-0 on the year). He pitched a complete game by issuing only two hits while fanning six Cohasset batter.

Levangie set the tone early for the Panthers. He retired the first nine Cohasset batters before surrendering a leadoff walk to Craig Mulcahy in the fourth. Pete Sandblom followed one out later with a bad-hop single to the right of second base, Mulcahy scored on a botcher tag at second on Jim Maquire's fielder's choice, and Mike Ellinger's liner to center was misplayed to temporarily tie the score at 2-2. While there weren't many other bright spots for the loosey-goosey Skippers, the one-man performance by Sandblom stands out the most.

As the starting catcher, he threw out two would-be Panther base-stealers. After relieveing starting pitcher Eric Daniels, a freshman, after Cashman's homer in the fourth, Sandblom's sidearm deliveries blanked the Panthers over the last 2 2/3 innings on only one hit, one walk and one strikeout.

David Shultz and Maquire each collected a run batted in for the Skippers in the losing cause.

Things did not get any better for Cohasset on Monday as they lost a heartwrenching decision to Scituate, 9-6.

After sporting Scituate a 1-0 lead through the first inning, Cohasset encourtered with two runs in their top-half of the second. Fitzpartick and Maquire each walked to open the frame. Daniels reached base on an error, loading the bases for the next batter, third baseman Mark Corkey. He responded with a run-producing single, scoring two Cohasset runners and giving his team a 2-1 lead.

Cohasset then surrendered three runs in the bottom-half of the second for Scituate.

However, the Skippers tied the game (4-4) on their next turn at the plate. Shultz lined a leadoff triple down the left field corner. Seconds later, Sandblom also unleased a triple, scoring Shultz and cutting the deficit to one, 4-3. From there, Sandblom crossed home plate on Fitzpatrick's grounder.

Eric Daniels is a star hurler this season for the Skippers. (Kym Marcella)

The Sailors regained the lead with two more runs in the third, 6-4.

But the see saw battle did not cease as the Skippers added two runs in the fourth to tie the game again, 6-6. Daniels reached base on an error, but was forced out at second on Corkey's fielder's choice. Jeff Bryant and Mulcahy each walked to fill the bases for Cohasset. Then, Schultz drilled a double, his third hit of the game, to plate two runs.

Mulcahy then blanked Scituate over then next two innings as Cohasset put together a rally in the top of the sixth. With the bases loaded and one out (two singles and a walk), Fitzpartick hit a fly ball to right field which was deep enough to score Bryant from third base. But, in a controversial call, the home plate umpire declared that the runner left the base too early on the sacrafice-fly tag play. The inning-ending double wiped out a potential game-winning rally for Cohasset.

Scituate added three runs in the bottom half on two walks and two hits. The big blow was a two-run double by Paul Reidy. In the seventh, Rich Kelley, the league's best hurler, retired Cohasset in order to pick up his seventh win of the season against no losses. The senior southpaw, who fanned 16 Duxbury batters in his last outing, faced only four Cohasset players.

"The walks and errors really hurt us this afternoon. We played some sloppy baseball," said coach Bill Fallon, whose club belted out six hits to Scituate's five.

Fallon did praise the performance of Sandblom (batting .351), LF Jim Maguire, SS Fitzpatrick (.526 before the Scituate contest) and Daniels for their every-day contribution throughout the season.

"As a freshman, (Eric) Daniels is holding his own. He is going to be a terrific player in the future."

Mulcahy (4-3) was tagged with the loss for the Skipppers.

Youth soccer results

Cohasset youth soccer's Under 19 boys' team avenged an early-season loss to Marshfield by beating the visitors 5-2 Sunday at Milliken Field.

The victory for Cohasset's senior Coastal League entry highlighted the seventh week of youth soccer play, a week that also saw the Under 10-1 girls' team storm by Kingston, 5-1.

Leading the Under 19 boys was South Shore League all-star striker Jim Reidy, who scored three goals, and Jay Staunton and David Shultz, each clicking for a goal apiece. Ned Chase and John Linsley led the Under 19 defense, which has improved each week.

"We all played much better than our first match against them," reported team member Brian Shultz.

Two Under 10-1 girls — Erin Devine and Jen Cullivan — scored a pair of goals each for Sandy Theriault's squad. Jen Ripley added a fifth score, and Christine Burns, at midfield, led the defense.

Under 12-1 and Under 10-1 boys continued their winning ways, too. Under 12-1 used a stifling defense to beat Kingston, 2-0. "Brian Duffy, Chris Rolandelli and Wes DeSantis were outstanding," said coach Steve Endris, noting this was his team's third shutout of the season. Chris Kondrat and Tim Brister got the goals.

Goalkeeper Kevin McKenna's diving save with five minutes left preserved Under 10-1's 3-2 victory over Pembroke. Three strikers — Ely Kahn (his third goal), Brian Riley and Robbie Buckley — scored for Terry Kahn's team. "We got great games from midfielder Sean Norris and back Doug Cameron," Kahn added. "And Brian and Robbie scored their first goal of the season, which was terrific."

In other girls' play, Jack O'Brien's Under 14-2 squad found the scoring tough, beating the Pembroke netminder three times, but still came up short, losing 4-3. Kathleen O'Brien scored twice, and Lisa Coates once. Meka-Mari Laugelle also played well, O'Brien said.

Under 10-2 was beaten by Hanover 5-0, and Under 12-1 also got shut out, 2-0, by Sacred Heart. In that game, backs Bonnie Krueger and Sara Belson, and midfielder Sheryl Saef turned in strong efforts. Playing well for Under 10-2 were Andrea Grew, Loren DeVito and Jen Cellucci.

Under 12-2 girls turned in an exceptional effort against a strong Scituate team, losing 2-1 despite Melinda Johanson's fourth goal of the season. "This was their best game ever," reported coach Nino D'Urso. "The girls played their positions for 60 minutes." Halfback Molly Hamill and fullback Jemilah Afshar stood out, D'Urso said.

Boys under 14 Team I

Under 14-1 and Under 16 girls both lost narrowly to powerhouse Plymouth by identical 1-0 totals. 14-1 was led by Heather Brennock and Tracey Reardon. Liz Buckley, Kristin MacQuarrie and goalie Sophie Redfield starred for Under 16.

In other boys' play, Under 14-1 staged a magnificent comeback against Norwell, only to fall short at the end, losing 6-4. "We were down 5-2," said coach John Kinchla, "and scored the next two goals. But it wasn't enough." Patrick Suhrbier led the offense with a pair of tallies, and Brooks Doten and Doug Ellinger each added one. Jim Yess and Jeff Stone led the defense.

Under 10-2 dropped a tough game to Duxbury, 3-0, after holding the visitors off for most of the first half. Coach Paul Cotter praised the play of midfielders Ian Simons and Colin Pyfrom, and striker Ted Reardon.

Under 12-2 lost to Kingston, 6-1. David Nothnagle scored for coach Fran Collins' team. Under 14-2 was beaten by Plymouth 7-1. Chris Brown got the goal, assisted by Tyler Studds. Matt Gromada also turned in a strong effort. Under 16 boys were edged by their Plymouth counterparts, 1-0.

The home schedule for Cohasset youth soccer this weekend:

Saturday at Milliken — Girls Under 10-1 vs. Duxbury, 9 a.m.; Girls Under 12-2 vs. Duxbury, 10:15; girls Under 14-1 vs. Hingham, 11:30; Girls Under 10-2 vs. Kingston, 1 p.m.; Boys Under 12-1 vs. Duxbury, 2:15; Boys Under 14-1 vs. Halifax, 3:30.

School committee praises town for budget success

By Sheila Casey
Mariner correspondent

Although school committee members described themselves as "overjoyed by the override", Supt. Stephen Hart cautioned that the educational fiscal crisis is not over yet.

Supt. Hart commended the citizens of Cohasset for their open mindedness in weighing the value of the override and making the decisions to vote for it. But he added, "I don't want people to assume that everything is now fine."

Committee member Chris Ford said the P.S.O. "Had done a tremendous job in educating the community," and Hart agreed, adding that the letter sent townwide by the P.S.O. was "very rational and not sensational in its tone." Chairman Diana Kornet suggested the school committee send a letter of thanks to the P.S.O. "I would also like to thank the town for supporting our schools," added vice chairman Barbara Bliss.

Supt. Hart had received letters and calls from concerned citizens asking for information "in order to make an intelligent decision regarding the vote to override proposition 2½." Chairman Kornet said it was unfortunate that more citizens did not avail themselves of this information by attending school committee meetings.

In reference to a letter in the Mariner by Dee DeSantis, Kornet said that "there was a lot of misinformation there which would have been clarified if she had only asked us. We have open school committee meetings and the people who want to be involved and informed attend. To imply that we have never considered alternatives is silly, and I believe that it isn't appropriate to put eveything in the Mariner or Ledger. Concerned citizens have a duty to come to meetings and inform themselves. It is unfortunate that people who have not attended our meetings think that issues have not been discussed, when in fact, sometimes they have been discussed ad nauseam. We have been discussing many of these issues since proposition 2½ first began. Hart agreed, saying that "we are open to the people in the community, and welcome them to our meetings.

Another related agenda item that commands the boards' attention, was Supt. Hart's report of a meeting on "School Finance and Improving our Schools," which was recently held in Duxbury.

Keynote speaker was Sen. Krause, who according to Supt. Hart is one of only four U.S. senators who holds a PHD (in economics.)

"I was pleased to hear that some of the things he said were also some of the things we have been saying." Supt. Hart said. "It was a very appropriate discussion of financial problems in education today. At the time Prop. 2½ was considered, there was declining enrollment across the state. About 80 percent of our budget is tied up in salaries and special education costs. With mandated programs taking money from our regular programs plus prop. 2½, its not going to last, it just cannot be. It is becoming more difficult to raise the money at the local level and more federal money is needed.

"We are suffering from the old Taxachusetts Syndrome," He pointed out the reality is that the average tax burden per capita income across the country is 16 percent and in Massachusetts it is 13 percent.

"We are not one of the highest taxed states," he noted, "yet there are only 14 other states that provide lower state support to the education system. We are lagging behind and this presents a problem because the financial difficulties will not evaporate, as I said earlier, we may have escaped this year, but may have problems next year. The senator's staff is looking into it, and there are a number of bills presented to relieve the ever increasing expense of special education, there has to be some type of relief. More communities will be faced with this (the question of overriding 2½) and the voters may turn it down, then the real crisis will emerge. Not to be dramatic, but this is a real threat to our society, according to Sen. Krause," Hart stated. "How do we compete with countries like Japan? It is an economic problem, and we are falling behind." Kornet concurred that this is a problem that ultimately affect all of us, "not just those of us with children."

In other business, the committee received a report from Jane McGuinness on the afterschool child care program. McGuinness said she was pleased with the acceptance of the program in the Osgood School, and sees a need for an additional program at the Deer Hill School. "Many of the 4th and 5th graders do not want to be with the 1st graders, but they need to be some where." she said. Deer Hill principal Kenneth Ekberg replied that there could be a problem, as many afterschool activities do not end until 3:20 p.m. Chairman Kornet said she would "find it hard to believe that we could not find space at Deer Hill for the program." She suggested that the P.S.O. be asked to take a poll among Deer Hill students and parents to find out if a separate program is needed.

In addition the board voted to:

- award contract for science room renovations in the amount of $113,090 to Harvard Construction Co. of West Roxbury.
- approve submission of title II Science Grant in the amount of $500.
- Instruct Superindendent to make available the annual teacher evaluations for school committee review by next meeting on June 6.

One man to be charged in state park incident

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Following a two-week investigation, environmental law enforcement officials are seeking a criminal complaint against one individual involved in an alleged "medieval witch cult" at Wompatuck State Park.

Sam Ameen, chief of Environmental Law Enforcement for the Department of Marine Fisheries, said a hearing is being sought at Quincy District Court June 10 at 10 a.m. Law enforcement officials are seeking a charge of possession of illegal weapons against one individual involved in the May 7 incident.

According to Chief Ameen, the case is now officially closed.

The one person to be charged by police will not be identified unless the complaint is issued against him. He was in possession of four double-edged knives, Chief Ameen said.

When Hingham, Cohasset and environmental police officers raided a bunker at the state park May 7, they found 11 individuals dressed in what appeared to be medieval witch costumes. Although police originally thought the group may have been a "witch cult," they now believe the group was innocent of any wrong doing.

Members and friends of the group have come to their defense, saying they were dressed in costume that day as part of an advertising project for school.

"After investigating this," Chief Ameen said, "we decided they were doing nothing illegal. After deliberating on this, we decided to charge only one man." That man, police said, transported a personal weapons collection into the state park specifically for the school project. Included in the collection were machetes, swords and double-edged knives.

Police decided not to charge the 11 group members with trespassing. Entry by motor vehicle into that area of the park, where several World War II bunkers are located, is prohibited. However, Chief Ameen explained, the group members, ranging in age from 17 to 41 years, will not be charged because the area was not properly posted.

"Our objective is not to bring cases into court; it's to enforce the rules," he stated. "But in all fairness to those people, this area was not properly posted. They will not be charged."

The investigation into the May 7 incident will be closed once the single criminal complaint is sought, according to Ameen.

Robert McKenzie, head of the Wampatuck State Park patrol staff, said the only noticeable decline in visitors to the park this spring has been caused by bad weather, not adverse publicity.

"I can't say we've been affected by

Memorial parade at 9 a.m.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray will be the speaker at Memorial Day ceremonies Monday, May 30, at Veteran's Memorial Park, Cohasset Harbor.

According to Lawrence Sousa, commander of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post which sponsors the ceremonies, the noontime observance will be preceded by visits to cemeteries.

Marchers will assemble at 8 a.m. at the post home, 38 Summer St., and proceed to the library where they will board buses for the North Cohasset Cemetery. The honor roll will be read at 9 a.m.

The group will then travel to the Woodside Cemetery at 9:30 a.m., and to the Beechwood Cemetery at 9:45 a.m.

Parade marchers will assemble on Sohier Street at 10:30 a.m. and proceed to the Central Cemetery at 11 a.m. and to the center of town at 11:30 a.m.

Marchers will include members of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Firemen's Squad and honor guard.

The Deer Hill School Band will also take part as will bagpipers.

A restored fire engine driven by Glenn Pratt will also be part of the parade.

Prior to Memorial Day, some 600 American flags will be placed on the graves of deceased Cohasset veterans, Sousa noted.

For the first time, the Cohasset Community Center will host an old Fashioned Family Picnic on the side yard after the parade. In case of rain, it will be held in the gym.

Families are invited to spread out blankets and enjoy a picnic.

The community center will sell hot dogs, hamburgers and drinks, according to Judy Volungis, community center director.

"Memorial Day is sort of a family day," said Volungis.

"Most of the kids will be marching in the parade.

"We're hoping for a good crowd at the picnic."

DA supports plans to refurbish Curtis Estate

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The Norfolk County District Attorney has given his strong support to plans to convert the former Curtis Estate to housing for the needy, the elderly and the mentally retarded.

In a letter to Asst. Attorney General Gwen O'Sullivan, District Attorney William Delahunt urged the state to approve a plan recently submitted by the Curtis Estate Action Committee, which calls for the conversion of the main Jerusalem Road home to community housing for eight handicapped or retarded persons.

According to the plan filed with the state April 1 by the action committee, the existing barn will be renovated into a residence for a caretaker/custodian, a family life advocate, and other personnel. Additional outbuildings will provide transitional shelter for affordable needy.

Atty. Delahunt urged the state attorney general to oppose a complaint for Cy Pres which was filed last winter by the Curtis Estate Board of Trustees. The ten trustees, who have maintained the home and about $1.8 million in stocks and bonds since Goerge Curtis' death in 1931, filed the complaint in order to sell the 55-acre property. The property is valued at about $1.7 million.

Since that time, neighbors and concerned residents have formed the Curtis Estate Action Committee. They are determined to stop the sale of the home for private development, and have

Mooring fees due

Harbormaster Steve Osborne reminds boaters that 1988 mooring user fees are due and payable by the close of business, June 1.

The fees may be paid at the treasurer-collector's office at town hall.

The harbormaster also noted that the mooring waiting list renewals must be completed by the close of business, June 1. Boaters may stop by the harbor department to fill out their renewal forms.

No leased parking

After an outpouring of opposition by local residents at last week's meeting, Cohasset selectmen voted 2 to 1 Monday night against leasing the Edwin Young parking lot on Government Island to Hugo's Restaurant for additional parking.

Selectmen James Gallagher and Burt Pratt, chairman, said they voted against the proposal in deference to the neighbors.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was in favor of a 30-day trial period.

"If the residents felt that it wasn't working, then we would reverse the decision," said Laugelle.

Before the vote, Hugo's owner Paul Logue proposed renting the space for $2,500 a year.

Logue also said he wouldn't mind cleaning up the land of debris.

"I think I can demonstrate that I can make it work," said Logue.

"But the only way I can do that is if I have a chance to prove it," he said.

"I'm opposed because of the Parker Ave. people," said Gallagher.

"I'm not opposed to your business. But I can't forget the residents."

"Seventy-five percent of the neighbors are against this."

In other action, Selectmen:

- Approved reserve fund transfer of $9,000 to the Cohasset Police Department.
- Granted a one-day all alcoholic beverage license to the Catholic Charities for July 23, 5:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. at the Oaks to raise funds for Sunset House Vacation House, Hull.
- Granted a one day alcoholic beverage license and live entertainment license to Stephen Roy of Jerusalem Road for a 20th year reunion for Harvard University graduates at his home June 11, 11 a.m. to midnight.
- Granted a one day alcoholic beverage license to the Cohasset Community Center for May 28, 6:30 p.m. to midnight.

Pier dumpster

A local fisherman has asked selectmen to place a dumpster at the town landing so that trash and plastic containers will not be dumped into the harbor.

Matthew Marr wrote to selectmen last week, asking that a dumpster be placed on the landing for the fishermen who load and unload their gear and catch.

He noted that harbormaster Steven Osborne had requested the dumpster in his annual department budget, but the request was denied by the advisory committee. According to Marr, there are not enough facilities at the landing to accommodate the 20 fishermen who use the pier. A few trash barrels are located on the grass by the Lawrence Wharf, but they are not enough, Marr noted.

"The barrels are always overflowing with trash and as a result the trash ends up on the grass and in the harbor. Hundreds of pounds of trash and plastics are dumped into the harbor and surrounding ocean daily," he stated in his letter. "The placement of a dumpster at that location would go a long way in alleviating this problem for a minimum cost."

Marr said selectmen should consider the dumpster an investment in the preservation of "our oceans and harbors."

DA supports Curtis Estate plan . . .

recommended that about eight acres of the land be used to house the elderly, retarded and needy as the former owner specified in his will.

George Curtis specifically requested that upon the death of his wife, the "Curtis Home" was to be used "as a home and refuge for feeble, deformed, or invalid women who are without means and are unable to provide for their own living."

"Where at a critical junction in the process," action committee member Joseph McElroy explained.

Although the action committee filed its plan April 1, town officials requested a deadline extension of May 31 during which they will review and comment on the plan.

After that time, a hearing will be scheduled on the Cy Pres petition. That petition is a legal manuever by the trustees to break the will in order to sell the property for private development.

It has been action committee's contention that the Cy Pres petition should not be approved. "Unless they prove that a home for needy is not possible," McElroy said, adding, "It's our understanding that the attorney general has asked the trustees to prove that the Curtis Estate is impractical as a home for the needy. To the best of our knowledge, that information has not been forthcoming."

In the letter sent by Atty. Delahunt to the attorney general, he reaffirmed the intent of the Curtis will. The district attorney stated, "The Attorney General should make every possible effort to insure that the land and trust assets be used to provide 'at Cohasset' the maximum number of living units for physically or mentally disabled people who lack the financial means to provide for their own living."

He continued, "I am not at all convinced that it is 'impossible or impractical or illegal to carry out the particular (charitable) purpose' of the trust. . . . every effort should be made to explore ways to create and maintain at the Cohasset site the maximum possible number of new housing units for mentally or physically handicapped."

As Atty. Delahunt noted in his letter, the Cohasset Housing Authority is willing to act as the prime agency which will carry out the charitable purpose of the will, "the creation and maintenance of housing in Cohasset for low income, disabled people."

According to the plan for the development and operation of the Curtis home as designed by the action committee, the Cohasset Housing Authority is willing to accept the funds of the Curtis Trust to use for the establishment and maintenance of the home. The authority has filed motion to intervene in the Cy Pres complaint.

The action committee's plan calls for a residential facility serving South shore residents who are elderly, handicapped, deformed or invalid, and who are needy and without sufficient means for their own support regardless of race or religion.

The main house is to be refurbished for community housing for either eight elderly handicapped or eight retarded persons. The barn will be converted into a residence for the property caretaker, custodian, a family life advocate, and other personnel needed to operate the Curtis Home.

Additional buildings will be used to provide transitional shelter for afffordable needy "and/or units of housing for others within the Executive Office of Community Development (EOCD) and Welfare Department guidelines," according to the plan.

Approximately five additional acres will be reseved specifically for housing purposes to be defined as future need arises, the action committee plan states.

It is proposed that the balance of the real estate on Jerusalem Road (about 42 acres), identified as conservation land, be sold to the Cohasset Conservation Trust for about $200,000.

The plan also proposes that an advisory committee be formed, known as the Curtis Home Advisory Committee. Members will include representatives of a Cohasset church, the fair houisn committee, the housing partnership, the South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens, the Hingham Interfaith Shelter, a Curtis Home Director, and a representative of the abuttors.

According to a specific cost analysis of the Curtis Home plan, the committee believes the project "represents an improvment in the value of the trust by approximately one million dollars. In addition to which at least six families will have homes or temporary shelter, and at least six new jobs will have been created. Most importantly, the wishes of George Curtis will have been fulfilled, and greater benefits will have been realized by the needy."

Using two alternative plans to refurbish the land with state grants, taking into the consideration the cost of maintaining and operating the homes, the committee believes their plan will net more money for the trustees of the property, and net income for the property will far exceed the current income generated there.

Since the action committee was formed last winter, they have gathered more than 1,100 signatures supporting their opposition to the private development of the property.

Since that time, committee members have spent more than 200 hours formulating this plan for the Curtis Estate. Architect Chia-Ming Sze has offered his services to the committee without

Coalition charts South Shore historical trail

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Historians from 11 South Shore towns have charted an historical trail through the region, and the map is going to press.

The trail winds through Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Pembroke, Hanover, Norwell and Rockland.

Entitled "Hidden New England: Old Colonial Trails," the brochure charts a course along the scenic coast and riverways, past colonial and Victorian houses, through a myriad of historic sites.

In addition to naming historic sites in each town, the brochure highlights activities, events and other attractions.

State Senator William Golden conceived the idea of an historic trail in December 1987, saying tourists should know there is a wealth of history between Quincy and Plymouth.

The South Shore Coalition marshalled together historical society members from the 11 towns, and that group set about designing a brochure to promote attractions between the city of presidents and the home of the pilgrims.

Continental Cablevision is sponsoring the project.

Carol Knox of Duxbury, who designed the brochure, said about 5,000 will be printed initially. They should be ready for circulation by June 6.

They will be printed in black and white, she said. There are six panels inside and six outside, and it will fold so as to fit inside a business-size envelope.

Each panel will include text, photographs and a map.

Kathleen Laidlaw of Scituate, who organized the project, commended members of local historical societies for their enthusiasm in participating.

"It takes a dedicated group of people to do something like this," she said. "I think the historical societies are doing a super job, and I think this brochure will prove that statement.

Here is a rundown of what the brochure will include:

• Sites in Cohasset include the town common with its meetinghouse, town hall and sea captains' homes, and its frog pond.

The Captain John Wilson House and Maritime Museum highlight the village center.

On Summer Street, the Caleb Lothrop House holds historic artworks, library and archives of local and regional history.

Other attractions to be mentioned in the brochure include the South Shore Art Center, the South Shore Music Circus, Whitney and Thayer woods and Wheelwright Park.

Visitors will be encouraged to travel the Jerusalem Road and Country Way trails.

Events include the Road Race by the Sea, South Shore Art Festival, Greek Taverna, Carillion Concerts, Cohasset Dramatic Club and Christmas on the Common.

• Visitors to Duxbury will be encouraged to see the Captain Gershom Bradford House, the King Caesar House and the John Alden House.

Other attractions include the Myles Standish Monument, Myles Standish Reservation, Duxbury Art Complex and Duxbury Beach.

Tourists will be encouraged to travel St. George Street to the Powder Point Bridge, and along Shore Road through picturesque Snug Harbor.

• The brochure will encourage guests to Hanover to visit the Stetson House and Museum, the john Curtis Library, Town Hall and Hanover Four Corners.

Other attractions include Luddams Crossing and historic Assinippi Village.

The old trail through Hanover runs along Elm Street and West Elm Street.

The Hanover Historical Society holds several dinner meetings and field trips.

• Visitors to Hingham will be persuaded to tour Hingham Square and see the Old Ordinary, Old Derby Academy and Old Ship Church.

Other attractions include the South Shore Conservatory of Music, New England Wildlife Center, World's End Reservation, Wompatuck State Park and Boston Harbor State Park.

Tourists will be encouraged to ride down Main Street to Hingham Square and to take the Island ferry and Boston commuter boats.

The Fourth of July parade, Hingham Civic Orchestra and Hingham Civic Theater also are highlights.

• Sights to see in Hull include Hull Village with Hull Town Hall, Fort Revere-Fort Independence Park, the Hull Lifesaving Museum and the Carousel Under-the-Clock.

While in Hull, tourists also should stop at Nantasket Beach and ride the ferry, according to the brochure.

Annual events include the Nantasket Beach Road Race, concerts at Metroparks Nantasket Beach Pavilion, concerts at Fort Revere and Kids Fest.

Other events include the Head-of-the-Weir Race, Nantasket Bike Race, Historical Tour, Holiday Fair-by-the-Sea, Snow Row and Sea Lover's Film Fest.

• In Marshfield, tourists can view the Marshfield Historic Complex including the Winslow House, Webster Law Office, Carriage Shed and Blacksmith Shop.

They also can visit the site of the Fessenden Tower and Winslow Cemetery.

Other attractions include the mouth of the North and South rivers and the site of the Daniel Webster Home.

Visitors will be encouraged to travel Ocean Street through Fieldston, Ocean Bluff and Brant Rock. Annual events include the Marshfield Fair and Yesterday.

• In Norwell, visitors could see the Jacobs Farmhouse, Norwell Center with its Kent House, James Library First Parish Church and Old Town Hall.

Other attractions include the Norris Reservation and South Shore Natural Science Center.

Old trails through Norwell are Main Street and the North River.

• Visitors to Pembroke will be encouraged to explore Pembroke Center, the Pembroke Historical Society Museum, Adah Hall House and Friends Meeting House.

Old coach roads through Pembroke are routes 14, 53 and 139.

Annual events include open houses, Christmas festivities, workshops, fish fry and herring run.

• In Rockland, tourists can visit Lower Union Street, the 1745 house and Rockland Memorial Library.

If they visit at the right time, they might be able to see the Rockland Art Association Show.

Coalition looks for two area 'special places'

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition wants the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs to name two South Shore locations "special places."

Two years ago, the state began to recognize places of scenic or historic significance.

Of the 14 sites designated special places that year, the Back River was the only South Shore site selected.

With the designation any proposed development along the Back River's banks is screened carefully by the state.

Last year, five sites were designated as special places. They are the Nantucket Moorlands, the view from the French King Bridge in Erving, the Lampson Brook Agricultural Reserve—a working farm in Belchertown, Maudsley State Park in Newburyport, and the Emerald Necklace—a system of parks stretching from north of Boston through the Back Bay, designed by Frederick Law Olmsted.

Now the coalition is suggesting that the North River and Hull's Fort Revere Tower be added to the list.

The 10-town organization intended to narrow its list of suggestions from eight sites to one.

The coalition originally was considering the following sites: Myles Standish Monument Reservation in Duxbury, World's End in Hingham, Fort Revere Tower and Hull Village in Hull, the Black Pond Nature Preserve, Norris Reservation and Jacobs Farm Homestead all in Norwell, and Great Hill in Weymouth.

But Marshfield selectman Richard Levin pushed for consideration of the area where the North and South rivers converge.

Hanover selectman Janet O'Brien then suggested that the entire North River corridor be considered, including the mouth of the North and South rivers.

O'Brien said the North River served as an inland waterway for the native American tribes of the region. On the North River, they were able to travel from Massachusetts Bay to Narragansett Bay.

"It is also the site of many Colonial homes that belonged to ship captains and builders," she said, "and the topography varies from salt marshes at the mouth to rocky gorges upriver. There is a variety of unique attributes."

In the mouth, she added, there are many species of fish and shellfish, a boon to commercial fishermen.

The representatives from Norwell and Duxbury agreed to drop their sites from in the list in favor of suggesting the North River corridor.

The river flows through Hanson, Pembroke, Hanover, Norwell, Marshfield and Scituate.

Duxbury selectman Patricia Dowd agreed that the South River, which flows through Duxbury, might benefit from the special designation of its mouth at the convergence with the North River.

Because the Weymouth Back River already had been named a special place by the state, Weymouth selectman Brian McDonald demurred with regard to Great Hill.

Selectman Edward Lewiecki of Hingham noted that World's End has limited access and parking, and since public accessibility is important to selection, he agreed to drop that site from the list.

Hull's town planner Romin Koebel and selectman Kathy Zaccheo persistently pushed for the Fort Revere Tower.

"You get a 360-degree panoramic view of the harbor and bay," Koebel said. "It's an undiscovered gem."

He said Hull may receive a grant from the Massachusetts Historical Commission for supportive construction and the Metropolitan District Commission probably will take the surrounding land to make a park.

The French fought off the British in Hull during the American Revolution, and during World War I the tower was used as a lookout for German U-boats.

"It really is a potential tourist focal point," Koebel said. "In the summer concerts are held there, and they are comparable to the Newport Jazz Festival."

Zaccheo noted that the boats and ferries from Boston land about a quarter-mile from the site.

Koebel suggested that tourists could visit Hull and then bike through the South Shore.

Demographer illustrates area change

Planning board and selectmen representatives to the South Shore Coalition got a new view of growth and change on the South Shore last week.

Douglas Carnahan, a demographer with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, presented a report illustrating projected changes in housing, population and land use.

The document was used recently as a basis for the MAPC's employment and population forecast for the region.

Carnahan chose last week to concentrate on "a few of the more interesting trends."

There is a high concentration of families with children under 18 on the South Shore.

There will be a peak this year in the number of births as the baby boom generation has babies, and there will be a gradual decline in fertility over time.

Most communities on the South Shore can handle the strain of the increased number of baby boom babies, but Marshfield and Duxbury may have to add to their school systems, Carnahan said.

In other trends, the number of families with multiple means of income is relatively low, he said.

The concentration of manufacturing also is relatively low, he noted, as is the density of population and racial diversity.

Although the population increase for the region has been relatively small, according to the report, Marshfield and Duxbury are growing at a "significant" rate.

The greatest increases in per capita income, Carnahan said, are in Hingham, Cohasset and, because of some gentrification there, Hull.

Job growth has been especially sharp in towns directly along Route 3, he added.

There has been a great increase in the number of multi-family dwellings constructed in Weymouth and Hull, while the greatest increase in the number of single-family homes was in Marshfield and Duxbury.

"The potential for demographic change," Carnahan said, "was based on the number of projects proposed. It gave us a look four years or so into the future.

"The outlook for employment growth was based on the amount of vacant industrial and commercial sites."

Based on that factor, Carnahan said the greatest employment growth in the region will occur in Rockland, Norwell and Hingham.

There are a number of large vacant sites for industrial and commercial development in those towns, he noted.

Land available for the development of retail space is greatest in Weymouth and Hanover.

The coalition can use this demographic plan, Carnahan said, to plan for such growth, growth that will have implications on traffic flow, hydrology, land use and other factors that affect the quality of life on the South Shore.

Cohasset Chamber proposes village parking changes

By Nancy McLaughlin
Mariner staff

Cohasset selectmen referred a proposal made by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce regarding parking in Cohasset Village to the safety officer.

According to Richard Straley of the chamber, it was the consensus at a recent meeting that parking spaces in the village should be reserved for short-term parkers "so that the general public would be best served."

"Therefore, it was suggested that all the business owners strongly request that their employees park in the town parking lot and thereby make the spaces in the village available for short term parking," he stated in a letter to business owners in Cohasset Village.

"The board of directors of the chamber of commerce feels that this is essential and we will be requesting that the Cohasset Police Department make every effort possible to monitor the parking situation in the village and to ticket long-term parkers."

Straley told selectmen Monday night that the village is being congested by delivery trucks.

"Therefore, we would ask that each business owner do everything possible to have deliveries made in the early morning, to have trucks park parallel so that they do not extend out into the lane of traffic. This is most important if a trailer truck is involved.

"...The facts of the matter are that there is no justification for a delivery truck obstructing the free flow of traffic through the village and therefore, something must be done.

"Once again the board of directors will request the Cohasset Police Department to ticket the offenders.

"The parking and traffic situation in the village is not very good...however, it certainly would be very pleasant if people coming into the village had an opportunity to park easily and were able to drive through the village without dodging around delivery trucks.

"We feel that we can make an immediate impact in the two areas listed and thereby display to the town officials that we can be of assistance in curing some of the problems," Straley stated.

No smoking to be enforced

The health agent has informed town hall officials that smoking should be prohibited throughout all town buildings as regulated by a 1987 state law.

The health agent is responsible for enforcing the law in restaurants, supermarkets and retail food outlets. The town's building inspector, Dr. Joseph Godzik noted, is responsible for enforcing the law in all other public buildings.

According to Dr. Godzik, the legislation prohibits smoking in any public building unless an area has been specifically designated as a smoking area. He suggested that some area, perhaps in the basement of the town hall addition, be designated as the smoking area within town hall.

Cohasset Garden Club dedicates historical gardens

Wednesday, May 18, the Historic House Gardens which are maintained by the Cohasset Garden Club, were dedicated to their cherished and dedicated member, Virginia Whitney Knowles.

The dedication of this garden to Mrs. Knowles celebrated the Club's great affection and gratitude to her and her family for all things beautiful as expressed in this little garden in the center of the village.

In June, 1983, Mrs. Knowles gave a history of the garden at the Historic House and here are some excerps from that talk:

"It all began twenty-four years ago. The Maritime Museum which Jessie Cox had given was in its place. Marjorie Gutterson was the president of our club and Ross Sherbrooke was president of the Historical Society. It was 1959; and that year Marjorie received a letter from the society asking if our club would draw a garden plan for the two buildings.

"It begins with the difficult spot between the two buildings; the ledge, rampant with Honeysuckle and Wild Cherry, and the hill of rock-filled earth left there when the Museum site was excavated.

"The next step was to cover the cement blocks with old creosoted wood, erect steps and terminal posts of old timber, and to cut heavy planking into squares to use as 'stepping stones' in the walk.

"At last we had a level area at the top of our wall, and a bank on which to plant. We sowed grass seed on the level spot and planted Mylle on the bank. Hollyhocks and Chrysanthemums were put against the Museum and Iris and Lavender in front of the Historic House. Creeping Thyme went in among the blocks of the walk and Iberis and Dienthus at the edge. A trellis and grapevine went upon the side of the Historic House wall and across the way Peonies were tucked in.

"Along the top of the wall we planted small Box bushes and on either side of the steps were placed two larger Boxwoods, the handsome gift of Mr. and Mrs. Coulter. Mrs. Warren, always on hand either in planting, weeding or bringing touches from her own garden, was a constant source of strength as were Mrs. Cumner and Mrs. Ketchum, who gave generously of their time—and when the first heavy planting and weeding started; new recruits; Mrs. Coulton, Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Heath, Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Hutson came to help.

The historical museum gardens, maintained by the Cohasset Garden Club, were dedicated to Virginia Knowles last week. Participating in the ceremonies were: Charles Fink, president of the historical society and Barbara Power, president of the garden club. (Dave Sullivan)

"The interest and approval by all who have passed by and the presentation of the giant anchor by Mr. Jason and Mr. Butman have created a rare link. We are grateful for this treasure from the sea and also for the beautiful carved fragments belonging to the Museum, which adorn the posts and frame our garden.

"From time to time, sons, husbands and once a brother arrived to give a helping hand, and this is how it came about that Mr. Ketchum, observing the need of proper access to the front door of the Museum, presented the granite stones and installed new steps.

"As soon as these were in place, we planted an Ilex Glabra and now we have pushed beyond the steps, and have men working again to finish the clearing at the right of the Museum. When this is done, cobblestones, which were recently a part of an old Cambridge street, will be □ A special salute goes to Betty Ann Soule! She walked for hunger in Boston recently, and raised $725.00 for her efforts. That meant she walked 20 miles! Isn't that wonderful? So many will benefit from that walk . . . we'll bet that Betty Ann may need a new pair of walking sneakers after all of that!

Mary Ahearn, one of our ambitious seniors, also participated in the walk for hunger, she walked 11 miles! Good work!

Had a nice note from Kaye Hanlon, who loves the life on Marco Island, but can't wait for their summer in Cohasset. She and George will be flying up for Jenifer's graduation from Boston College on May 23. She will be receiving her degree from the Business School as a marketing major. Then they have to hop on the plane again to see their daughter Gigi's graduation from St. John Neumann High School in Naples, Florida May 25. Kaye and George's grandson, Patrick, also celebrates his 2nd birthday on that day. Wow, if you think your May schedule is a hectic one. . . .

□ John Larkin Thompson of Cohasset, President of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts, Inc., will be awarded an honorary degree from Emmanuel College as an outstanding member of the Boston business community.

Emmanuel College Commencement Day begins with a Baccalaureate Liturgy at 10:30 a.m. concelebrated by Reverend Jerry Hogan, Emmanuel Campus Minister, and Reverend Micheal F. Groden, Emmanuel Trustee.

□ Diana Kornet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Kornet, Jr., will play the role of The Boy's Mother (Mrs. Hucklebee) in Milton Academy's production of "The Fantasticks."

The play will be performed May 19, 20, and 21 at Milton Academy where Diana is currently enrolled as a junior.

□ Diana has also been chosen to be part of an exchange program between Milton Academy and the James Allen's Girls' School in England.

She will leave Milton Academy, where she is currently enrolled as a junior, in the middle of May, and return at the end of June, spending the time attending classes and participating in school life at the all-girls school in London. In return, the London school has sent a group of six girls for the balance of the school year who are participating in all facets of campus life at Milton Academy.

□ I had a nice phone call from Ellery Clark last week, and is he ever excited! His father, Ellery H. Clark Sr., Harvard '96, was an outstanding athlete who participated in the Olympics in Athens Greece in 1986. He won his two events, and is known as a field event "wonder." Last Tuesday, "USA Today" ran an article naming Mr. Clark Sr. the most prominent name to be nominated for National Track and Field Hall of Fame. "USA Today" went on to say that Mr. Clark was one of the most prominent in the 18th century much less the 19th century! There are 11 nominees, Olympians, and second favored is Mr. Liquori, for his distance running. The announcement will come soon, and we hope that Mr. Clark will be in Cohasset when it does so we can all congratulate him. It's an honor indeed to be nominated to such a prestigious spot!

□ Here's hoping that "Benjy" Watson is home from South Shore Hospital as he reads this! Ben had to undergo emergency appendix surgery! The good news is he waited until after hockey to have his attack. What would Dennis and the boys have done without him?

Two year-old Andrew Busk escapes from his mother, Joan, during a recent jaunt about the Joy Street cemetery.

The purpose of the council is to foster referral business among the 49 members in the Northeast Region and to serve as a welcoming committee at the All-Points National Convention to be held in Boston in July.

□ This is a special week for the Veterans of Foreign Wars; it is their annual Poppy Drive. The Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9416 will conduct their sales outside several businesses and canisters will be in several locations. If you wish to volunteer, contact Bob Hall or Ralph Perroncello. The proceeds from this drive benefit veterans and their families by supporting the VFW National Home and the Veterans Administration Hospital Program. The poppies are made by disabled veterans, and are especially nice this year. It seemed funny not to see them made out of plastic; it's a nice soft fabric. Support our veterans—buy a poppy.

□ There is a special gathering in San Antonio Texas. Dick and Bonnie (Edmonds) Ritter's youngest son Eric is graduating from High School. He will be going to Southwestern University in the fall. Bonnie's sisters, Sheila Long and Joan Lawrence will be present. Rick and Mark, Eric's older brothers and students at Texas A&M University will also be there for the gala. Joan and Paul Lawrence's son David will be in Cohasset for the summer to work and live with his grandparents, Dutchie and Adelle Lawrence. His other grandparents are Bruce and Mary Edmonds. While David is here in Cohasset, Paul, Joan and Peter will be biking the Rockies, six days and 387 miles. One of the passes they'll bike over will be Berthoud Pass, the Continental Divide, 11,315 feet! And that won't be the biggest pass! Have fun, everyone!

□ We also want to mention Vi Tuthill, who is still feeling under the weather (maybe it is the weather). Hope you are up and about real soon.

□ Phil Smith certainly has done an admirable job with his new complex . . . now that the flowers and shrubs are outside the building (for sale by Creative Landscape), it really looks like a quaint side-street in Nantucket or somewhere. If you haven't seen it, go by—it's lovely.

□ Be sure to go to the Memorial Day Parade next week, and take the time to think of the veterans that died for what we have today. And, when you are at the harbor, be sure to look and see the Memorial with all of the flags flying. it's enough to give one goose-bumps!

□ Have a nice holiday, and remember what happened that was newsworthy; then call me and share it with everyone.

Freedom of choice

Prom time is approaching for our students, and that can only mean graduation is days away.

It is a special time for our young students, one that will be lovingly remembered for many years. It is a time for magic and romance - one of their last opportunities to spend together as members of one group. For the next few weeks, there will be no popularity contests, no struggle for acceptance. Everyone in this class is a valued member - one who has shared love and knowledge with others who eagerly accepted that gift.

For many years, they have struggled through this educational process together, learning their alphabets and simple rules of arithmetic. They expanded their visions as they continued through the grades, learning larger vocabularies along with the evils and goodness of life.

Growing is never an easy process. We never feel sure of ourselves. We analyze our judgments, our responses and our inabilities to respond.

But they are grown now. For better or for worse, they are able to make their own decisions based on the values and judgments made for them in the past. The groundwork has been laid, and now they are free to accept or reject it.

Prom time and graduation is a time of great freedom for our children - a time when they are accepted as young adults into a world filled with happiness and sorrow. It is their responsibility now to accept the right path, to learn from mistakes and to keep struggling for that happiness.

The prom is a time of great responsibility. Our children must decide for themselves how they will behave, how they will react. It is one of their first tests of freedom, and we always hope they will succeed.

There are so many new challenges for our children to face. We hope the prom and graduation time is one of the easier challenges they will meet. This taste of freedom should be enjoyed, but certainly not abused.

This is their time - a time to salute the youth of our town. They should be applauded for their fine accomplishments throughout the years - be it athletic, academic, artistic or dramatic. Our students have won many honors, which only serves to further distinguish the entire community.

They should be proud of the time they have spent in this town, as they look forward to a future that may take them far away.

They can look back on this community with pride - the place where a foundation of wisdom and goodness began.

East coast tank is filled

Letters

To the Editor:

It's difficult to create an environment.

There are chemicals you can use. And you can throw in a rock or two, gravel, floating plants. And for awhile everything's fine. Then something happens . . . nothing you're aware of. It's just wrong . . . and all of a sudden your fish have the wasting disease. Ick. Salt treatments might work. Change the water. Try to decide who's sick, who's recovering.

Everybody has laughed at my first experience with fish (only some golds, cats and two moors . . . and one little gold I rescued from a torture cylinder). I actually TOOK that fish and its torture cylinder from its owner . . . the owner was appalled when I told him his fish was in a death chamber.

Kids are like fish. I let my younger son go camping in Whitney Woods, thinking it was safe. Who would be in the woods last month? The Witch Cult, that's who.

The environment is very delicate. When you keep one fish you understand these things better. It's all temporary. One little wrong thing happens, too much urine, benzine in the water, a leak . . . the Globe Science Page recently reported that 80 percent of the fish in Boston harbor have cancerous tumors. And then our South Look restaurant reviewer wonders why local restaurants don't serve more local fish, shellfish.

When you keep fish you start getting scared about the environment. You understand it can't be created by anybody but you know who.

The water pipes to Hull aren't perfect. Sewerage pipes would have taken all of it to the Hull Plant. But somebody has to deal with the sludge on either end. A big sewer plant would have meant cramming more of us into Cohasset . . . and I'm not sure, environmentally, how many more of us Cohasset can handle. Maybe Cohasset should have cut off growth 13 years ago, right before I arrived, like Jean says. But we bought an old house (1800's) with a broken beam nobody wanted. We bought it because we pitied it. So we didn't add to the growth. We inhabited a house built in the 1800's when there were probably only 50 families living in the town.

I've learned that a 10 gallon tank is just about right for three cats and three golds. Two black moors are too many. Six can survive, if I do the one-third water change every two weeks, add one or two teaspoons of rock salt to the tank . . . replace the plants . . . and check the ammonia, the Ph. And watch the slime.

Nope. The Ward Plan isn't perfect. Our tank was probably too full 20 years ago. "Ward" will only deal with our ph., our ammonia . . . we'll still have to carefully watch our slime.

Congratulations to the Sewer Commissioners for seeing this thing through. And congratulations to the CHS class of 1988. Go West young men and women. The East coast tank is crowded.

Mariner continues witch hunting

To the Editor:

The spirit of the Salem "Witch Hunt" is alive and well, and living in . . . Cohasset, Hingham, Quincy and Boston! This time, it has taken the form of "Cult" hysteria.

At least, so it appears to the many people who know what really has been going on in Wompatuk State Park at the so-called "devil-worship" bunker discovered last week by local police.

Area media have had a marvelous time weaving an imaginative tale of "devil cults" and theorizing about "animal sacrifice' and assorted other juicily sensational tidbits. People who know the facts have been falling down laughing at the gullibility of reporters who apparently learned nothing from the VietNam era, and still think that a police report can be considered "fact" rather than "allegation."

I am not laughing. Some people are so simple that they actually believe that "if it's in the paper it must be true." They, too, are catching this cult hysteria and it is causing a great deal of distress to harmless and innocent people.

I suppose we have made progress of sorts. We don't (yet) hang, stone or burn as they did 200 years ago. (Some of us would, if we could get away with it, but fortunately today's laws do get in the way.) Today we use harassment, rumor and gossip in print. We destroy reputations rather than bodies. We feel very superior to those superstitious Salemites of ages past, while we in 1988 simultaneously swallow tall tales about alleged "cults" without question or doubt.

The real story of the Wompatuk Park bunker is very simple. A year and a half ago, a few young people found one of several empty, abandoned and open WWII-era ammuntion bunkers in a fairly popular and travelled (not isolated) area of the park.

Over the course of several months, they cleaned out debris and junk, brought in some amenities (wax candles and a couple of oil lamps for light, a couple of old auto seats for "chairs," etc.) They salvaged trashed sheet metal and broken glass blocks and built a table for the candles and lamps. (That was the "blood-stained altar" reported in some rather lurid accounts: the "blood" was actually red wax from the candles!) They also managed to build a fireplace from salvaged materials.

They decorated the bunker walls with chalk and charcoal portraits of characters from "The Hobbit" and "Lord of the Rings," and elfin "runes" lettering from the same popular J.R.R. Tolkien fantasy books. One girl in the group is a talented artist and costume-designer/seamstress. She chalked a life-size Tolkien elf-queen (the so-called "witch") on one wall. Some drew the logos of favorite rock and "heavy metal" groups and albums such as the "Grateful Dead" and "Hell-Hammer." (Many of the group stongly dislike heavy metal music, but their feeling is "different strokes for different folks." Not all are Tolkien fans either.) Another person has an eagle silhouette belt buckle he likes, so he duplicated it on the wall—large size. Yet another is a PeeWee Herman fan. He drew a "PeeWee's Window to the Universe," complete with curtains.

Last fall, they gathered enough salvaged trashed materials to construct two skateboard ramps at either end of the large smooth bunker floor, so the skateboarders among them could use it, protected from the elements and away from interfering party poopers (they

Stone carving class

Boston sculptor Judith Shah returns to the South Shore Art Center for a two-day stone carving workshop Saturday, June 4 and June 18.

The Center, at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, introduced Shah's stone carving workshop during its fall 1987 term and since the course proved to be so popular, an expanded two-day version is being offered in June. The course will meet both Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and advanced registration is required.

The two-day workshop will allow participants to work on finishing the details of a stone carved piece. Shah will emphasize the thought process which goes into stone carving because "the substractive method of carving requires thought so as not to remove too much stone in any one area," she said. In describing her workshop, she contends, "some people prefer direct carving because they can control each stage of the work they design. The permanence of stone, its varieties of grain and color as well as its tactile quality make it a choice for some sculptors," she added. She will demonstrate how the chisel marks can be left intentionally to give texture or how a smooth surface can be obtained.

Shah's own work is characterized by an assemblage of natural objects which are cast in bronze and welded celebrating nature, process and symbolism from ancient cultures. Her works have been included in juried exhibits at the Rose Art Museum, the Art Institute of Boston, the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, the Silvermine Gallery in New Canaan, Ct., Longfellow House Park at Harvard University, George Sherman Union Gallery at Boston University and others. She received a first prize at the Cambridge Art Association 1987 Springfest, "Tree Tier and Sticks Can Break Bones."

Cohasset Scouts honored by Old Mills District

Son's of Italy Hall in Rockland once again hosted the 1988 Old Mills District Awards Dinner May 6.

District Chairman John Clarkeson opened the evening along with Order of the Arrow Officers Scott Philie of Troop 57 Rockland, Joe Yuska of Troop 4 Hingham, and Michael Lunn of Troop 66 Norwell.

District Commissioner Ron Hopkins from Whitman introduced the recipients of the Unit Awards for Boy Scouting. Receiving awards were:

George Parker, Troop 1, Hingham; Robert J. O'Brien, Troop 34, Hanson; C. Hazel Mitchell, Troop 59, Whitman; John Bryant, Troop 28, Cohasset; William and Ruthelyn Desmond, Troop 57, Rockland; Bernie Gregoire, Troop 4, Hingham; Jim Fahey, Troop 22, Whitman.

Ken Riel of Rockland introduced the recipients of the Unit Awards for Cub Scouting:

Robert Pratt, Pack 41, Abington; Kathy Costa, Pack 78, Norwell; Tony Salerna, Pack 41, Hingham; Sue Buonopane, Pack 42, Rockland; Linda Farrag, Pack 38, Cohasset.

Exploring President Paul Kearney presented the Unit Award for Exploring to Roberta Lehr of Cohasset.

Each year the Old Mills District Awards Committee selected the Cub Leader, Scout Leader, and Explorer Leader of the Year. District Commissioner Hopkins assisted District Chairman Clarkeson in presenting these awards to:

Kathy Costa of Norwell. Mrs. Costa is an Assistant Cub Leader in Pack 78 chartered to St. Helens Church.

Paul Stokinger of Whitman. Mr. Stokinger serves as Scouting Coordinator of Pack and Troop 22 chartered to Holy Ghost Church.

Explorer Leader of the Year was awarded to Paul Kearney who is presently serving as President of the Old Colony Council Exploring Offices Association and is a member of Post 11, Abington.

Several members of Old Mills District were cited for their work in the past year. Among them were:

Steve Nolan of Norwell for his involvement with Dinizulu, Merle Brown of Cohasset for the Klondike Derby, Earle Bestick of Cohasset for the Webelos Weekend, Chrisanne Gregoire for Bowl-arama, Ted Thibodeau of Scituate for Boy Scout Swim and Kevin Maroney for Akela Training.

Chrisanne Gregoire was also recognized as the District's newest recipient of the Silver Beaver Award.

Two members of Old Mills District were recently honored by the National Organization of the Boy Scouts. Arthur Lehr of Cohasset was chosen to receive the William H. Spurgeon award for his work in Exploring. Al Taylorof Hanover was honored with the Torch of Bold Award for his outstanding work with and for special needs scouts.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the District Award of Merit. This award is presented to Scouters for their accomplishments not only with the Scouting program, but their complete involvement with the youth in their community.

The District Award of Merit for Cub Scouting was presented to Hazel Edmonds of Hull. Mrs. Edmonds started her service to scouting as a Den Leader in Pack 21 Hull. As her role in the Scouting Community grew and changed, she has never lost sight of the importance of that position.

thought). Oddly enough, these ramps were not mentioned in any of the "cult" stories. I wonder why??

Anyway, so it went for over a year. They bothered nobody. They harmed nothing. They frequently had pleasant passing conversations with other park visitors (and the occasional ranger) in the same vicinity, as it is an active corner of the park and not at all "remote." They had an adopted " clubhouse" for a while—a place to go to enjoy each other's company without hassles, to sometimes perhaps camp out in, to skate board without outraging or disturbing anyone, and to escape the pressures and concerns of day to day "real life." (Gee—it almost sounds like some of the purposes of a public park! Fancy that!) So it was—until last weekend.

Last Saturday (May 7) some of the group of friends were asked for help with an advertising class assignment by another friend from out of town. He is a student at a Boston-area university. He was assigned to do a layout ad for a "Medieval Fair," similar to King Richard's Fair, which is an annual event in Carver, Mass.

Many in the group are medieval history and legend "buffs." Some are members of the Society for Creative Anachronism, a world-wide organization of people deeply interested in medieval culture and history and its re-enactment, complete with costumes, arms and artifacts suitable to the period.

For this day's outing, a dozen people assembled. They brought handsewn costumes and hand-crafted replica weapons with them to use as props. Most of these were about as sharp as a butter knife. One of the group, a medieval weapons collector, brought along a few extra collector's items, some sharp—to be sure of having enough props for the planned photos. An older man, a good photographer, came along to take the pictures, and brought his daughter with him.

The day went well until, on their way back to their cars, they were accosted and detained by several

Letter

Cohasset and Hingham police officers, along with two Environmental Police. Some people were searched. Some vehicles were also searched. (No one in the group is a drug user, so of course as reported, "no drugs were found.") Some insulting remarks were made by members of the raiding party. The group was finally allowed to leave, after over $2,000.00 worth of prop weapons, being transported in a small cart, were confiscated by the Cohasset police—along with a bolt-cutter tool from one of the vehicles.

Now, for reasons known only to themselves, the "authorities" seem to have transformed the above innocent activities into a "devil cult" conspiracy, with perhaps multiple groups participating. Whether this bizarre interpretation of the facts might be at all related to the rash of self-styled "cult experts" on the scene, and recent classes on the subject attended by local police (as reported in the media), is open to question. The rather "creative" descriptions of the bunker wall decorations and furnishings, and of the group's costumes, makes one wonder. How "Robin Hood," the "Sheriff of Nottingham," several medieval soldiers, a fur and leather-clad "Barbarian," and a green-gowned "Princess" can be mistaken for witches and black-cloaked devil worshipers is beyond me. But then I'm just an ordinary citizen, without benefit of "cult classes." I've never even met a cult.

BUT—I do know most of the people in the Wompatuk group personally. Among them are three vegetarians, at least two deeply committed Christians (once also regarded as a lunatic cult by the Romans of the time), some college students, some folks with "normal jobs," and at least two talented artists. Several are computer whizzes. One is an uncommonly talented costume designer and seamstress with her own business.

They are all unusually gentle, non-violent , caring, relatively normal pepole. They have all been guests in my house at various times. They are as far from "devil-worshiping cultists" as one could get (unless sitting around my living room floor sewing on leather costumes and guzzling orange soda is now a cult activity!)

The bottom line of all this is that inferences have been made which have no basis in fact. An error in judgment by whoever instigated this silly "raid" has been compounded by subsequent press coverage. The result has been distress, dismay and anger at such misrepresentation and distortion of the facts by people in authority who had been trusted as being objective and reasonably intelligent.

The hysteria has also proven to be contagious. Most parents and friends of the young people in the group know them well enough to dismiss these allegations of "devil worship" as the poppycock they are. Unfortunately, at least one set of parents has such little faith in the strength of the values they have taught their child that they have forbidden her (at age 21) from seeing her friends, and have even talked of hiring security guards to escort her to and from work! These well-meaning and otherwise intelligent people have been made crazy by untrue stories.

What can be learned from this mess??? Purveyors of paranoia, no matter how pure their motives, would be well-advised to consider carefully the ramifications of their actions before they climb up into their pulpits to preach. The Reverend Cotton Mather's well-intentioned rantings on "witchcraft" led otherwise rational and normal Salem citizens to kill dozens of harmless people. What might this anti-cult nonsense lead to today?

CANOE THE NORTH RIVER

Once again — a chance to take part in the Center's ever-popular canoe trips! Though close to Boston, the North River remains largely undeveloped. Join in a summer look at the river by registering for the June 5, June 26 or July 17 trips.

(Raindates are June 11, July 10 and July 23, respectively.) Each trip runs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., so bring a picnic lunch. Participants will search for wildflowers, waterfowl, old shipyards, and colorful vistas. Canoes and preservers are supplied. Canoes are limited to three adults or two adults and two children under 12 years. Group size is limited, so register early. Some ability to canoe is necessary. Pre-paid registration required (members/adult $18, kids under 12 years $15; non-members/adult $24, kids under 12 years $20.) Call 659-2559 for registration information.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Join a staff naturalist on an informal, leisurely exploration of Monahan Reservation Wednesday, June 8, from 10 a.m. to noon. Once a salt marsh, this SSNSC property is gradually evolving to a freshwater marsh. Look for both freshwater and saltwater life and note how the effects of the storm of 1898 are still being seen today. Meet at SSNSC and register at the main desk. Pre-register by calling 659-2559. these stories," he said this week. "We've had such bad weather, I don't think anything else mattered."

Despite the media coverage of the bunker raid by area police, McKenzie said no one has called to cancel outings at the park. Boy Scout troops have continued to hold overnight camp-outs at the park and senior center walkers and other outdoor enthusiasts continue to meet there, he said.

"I think it would take a holocaust for people to stop coming to the spring," McKenzie said, referring to the popular Mount Blue spring water available to the public. About 350 cars travel to the spring each day, he estimated.

"We've had no one call to cancell any of their camping plans," McKenzie explained. "If anything, the bad weather has affected us more than any publicity."

Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers Announces National Weight Loss Winners

"I Lost 290½ pounds!"

Before

After

"When I began the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program, I had a 71" bust, a 71" waist, 72" hips and weighed 444 pounds. It was an exciting day when it no longer took two people and two tape measures to measure me! I was thrilled to give away my size 52 clothes and 13 months later to be wearing a size 13!"

Rebecca Troxler
Burlington, NC

"Losing 147½ Lbs Changed My Life!"

Before

After

"I went from weighing 368½ pounds to 221 pounds after joining the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program. When I was overweight I had high blood pressure and I was always tired. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers put me on the road to better nutrition and health, and I never once felt tired or hungry on the diet!"

Mike Schott
Anderson, IN

"I Lost 185¾ Lbs and 134½ Inches!"

Before

After

"My doctor told me to lose weight or my life span would be shortened. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers provided me with a sound nutritional program, constant monitoring of my progress and the support I needed to make a total commitment to controlling my weight."

Brad Smallwood
St. Petersburg, FL

After months of anticipation, the finalists of the National "Slim to Win" Testimonial Contest were announced at the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers National Convention, held in Cincinnati, Ohio. The three finalists were selected from over 650 entrants submitted by centers throughout the country. The judges based their choices on before and after photos, total pounds and inches lost, average pounds lost per week on the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program, and a written testimonial describing how losing weight has changed the client's life.

The finalists were Michael Schott of Anderson, Indiana, Brad Smallwood of St. Petersburg, Florida, and Rebecca Troxler of Burlington, North Carolina. They presented their stories to an audience of 1200 Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers franchise owners and staff members!

Michael Schott told the attentive crowd how losing 147½ pounds in 22 weeks changed his life. Mike described how the staff at the center not only supported and encouraged him, they also gave him — an inexperienced cook — directions on preparing his meals! Since losing weight, Mike has gotten a raise, has more energy than ever, and a more active social life. "My only regret," said Mike, "is that I didn't know about the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Center in Muncie three years ago."

The diet has also changed Brad Smallwood's life. Brad's doctor had told him to lose weight or his life span would be shortened. Since his father had died at an early age, Brad knew this advice was not to be taken lightly. At Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, Brad found a combination of encouragement and constant monitoring which enabled him to lose 185¼ pounds. "I attribute my success to the support I received from the staff," said Brad. "I know I'll never be heavy again. The Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program is the best thing I've ever done!"

For Rebecca Troxler, the change has been more than one of 290½ pounds and 228½ inches. "I am a new person," Rebecca said. "I like myself now, and I never did before. I hid my true feelings from everyone. I don't have to hide anymore. I am a happy person now."

When the testimonials were finished, the audience and finalists anxiously awaited the announcement of the winners. Rebecca Troxler was named the winner of the Grand Prize, a trip for two to Hawaii! Michael Schott was First Runner-up, winning a vacation in the Bahamas for two, and Brad Smallwood won the Second Runner-up's trip for two to Washington, D.C.!

Rebecca, Michael and Brad are just three of the hundreds of thousands of people who have lost weight on the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers clients lose an average of up to four pounds per week. Every client's progress is closely monitored — attention that Rebecca, Michael and Brad each greatly appreciated.

To celebrate the success of all their clients, but most especially the National Weight Loss Winners, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers is offering a very special opportunity. Alternative school happenings

CHS Alternative School raised and donated a total of $563 to Oxfam America. Oxfam is a non-profit organization working in developing countries to combat disease, poverty and natural disasters.

This year we conducted two fundraisers. The first, a Hunger Banquet, took place November 19 in which students paid $1 for a chance lunch.

The second fundraiser was a "Balloons for Child Survival" campaign. We sold helium balloons that were delivered to a friend of the donors choice.

It will be conducted by Normandie Nigh and Patricia Messing, Directors of 'Fit for Success,' a fitness consulting company based in Cohasset. The hours are from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The purpose of the 'Body Check' is to help people find the appropriate exercise program for their bodies, to reduce potential injuries, and to give people the tools they need to get the most from their workout. It is for those who currently exercise on a regular basis as well as those who are just beginning or considering an exercise program.

Museums to open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums at Elm St., Cohasset center, will open for the summer season Saturday, June 18.

Opening day will feature an Open House at the Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime Museum, with special attraction offered by members of His Majesty's 47th Regiment of Foot, a reconstructed British Army unit of Revolutionary times. The two museums will be open from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. On Open House day admission to the two historic buildings is free.

The Historical Society's museums at Cohasset center are scheduled to be open for their summer season from then through the end of September. Regular hours are 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. except Mondays. Admission for adults will be $1.50 for each of the two buildings. Society members and their guests enjoy free admission. The Capt. Adjacent to the house is the Maritime Museum, an 18th century ship's chandlery built by Cohasset shipowner Samuel Bates.

Today the Maritime Museum holds an extensive collection of artifacts, relics, ship models, carvings, documents, artworks and prints relating to Cohasset's unique maritime history as a fishing and mercantile village during the town's long "Age of Sail." "Ross Sherbrooke was pleased with our initial efforts and it was he who found the granite slab and had it placed in front of the double doors of the Museum. It was also he who made and placed the little sign which says, 'This garden given and maintained by the Cohasset Garden Club.'

"The small Millwheel at the foot of the center steps was the delightful gift of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nilsson. It was brought from an old Mill in upper New York State—which they once owned.

Looking back, I am reminded of a spring morning when I was standing in the garden and Irving Blossom (our local house painter) went by and, leaning out of his truck, he shouted, 'This is the prettiest spot in town,' and I thought, 'That's good enough for me.' I hope it is for you, too."

CHS merchandising class honored

The Merchandising Program at Cohasset High School was recently recognized in an awards program marking the first year of the Industry-Education Partnership Program sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Education.

The project coordinator is Joan M. Wool, who has been a member of the Business Department since 1976. In 1985, she was awarded a Horace Mann Grant by the Cohasset Public Schools and the Department of Education to research and develop a new course in Merchandising. In 1987, the Industry-Education Partnership Recognition program was established as a vehicle for recognizing strong school-business initiatives throughout Massachusetts and for encouraging more organizations to develop similar programs.

Entries in the Industry-Education Partnership Recognition Program were judged on the basis of commitment, innovation and results by an Award Committee including representatives of the Massachusetts Board of Education; its advisory council, the Extended Committee for Industry-Education Partnerships; and statewide business and education organizations.

Partnerships consist of teams of representatives from schools, businesses and community agencies that identify mutual needs and develop programs to meet these needs. Partnerships range from one-school/one business to regional programs that involve several schools and companies.

Even though Cohasset's program is new this year, the fact that the program received recognition is important in continuing to establish programs that have a link to the community.

According to the U.S. Department of Education, there were 3,123 such partnerships in Massachusetts in 1985, more than any other state except California.

The Cohasset Merchandising Program is listed and described in a publication, "Innovation with Impact" which describes the work currently being done in Massachusetts in community education. This book will be disseminated to educators and business people across the state and to colleagues across the country.

Co-sponsoring the Industry-Education Partnership Recognition Program is a statewide steering committee including the Massachusetts Department of Education, Associated Industries of Massachusetts, Massachusetts Business Roundtable, Smaller Business Association of New England, Massachusetts Association of School Committees, Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents, Massachusetts Board of Regents and the Governor's Office for Educational Affairs.

Students who participated in the new Merchandising Program for the academic year 1987-1988 are as follows:

Betsy Andrade, Julie Anstead, Daniel Bickerstaff, Melinda Bonnano, Stephen Carroll, Christopher Conley, Keri Cullinane, Glen Froio, Ed Hayes, Kiersten Henry, Sue Kecskemety, Jen Lyons, Matthew Maloney, Jen McAuliffe, Michelle Migliaccio, Craig Mulcahy, Elizabeth Muncey, Christian Richard, Jennfier Salerno, Michael Smith, Melissa Wetzel, Jennifer Winn and Kimberly Wolfe.

Artist of the Month field trips

To conclude the Artist of the Month program this year, all classes participated in field trips during the week of May 16.

The kindergarten, first and second graders walked to the South Shore Art Center where they were given a tour of the center, participated in a hands-on clay workshop and were given a treat after the program.

The third graders were given a guided tour of the Museum of Fine Arts Wednesday, May 18. In order for the children to be more knowledgeable about the many famous paintings that they would be viewing, volunteers came into the classroom to show the students various art prints.

Many thanks to Lee Jenkins, Monica McKenney, Barbara Meehan, Debbie Niessink, Susan Cameron, and Donna O'Donnell for sharing and discussing the art prints. The students found the experience at the museum to be much more exciting when they were able to recognize many of the paintings that were discussed previously in their classrooms.

All the students, faculty and volunteers who participated in the Artist of the Month program this year would like to send a big thank you to Retta Dwyer and Olga Nohe for their time and energy. Without them, this program would not have achieved the great success that it did this year.

Business management lecture

Maureen Rogers, manager of Community Development of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, recently spoke to the Business Management class at the high school.

She explained the multitude of activities that are carried out by the Chamber of Commerce.

Some of the key issues being discussed at the present time involve transportation, the environment, and community development. The Chamber of Commerce assists 39 cities and towns. They are involved in town issues and often send representation to public hearings and zoning board meetings.

Issues currently under investigation are bills and legislation involving day care, government affairs, health care, hazardous waste, and affordable housing.

Students were involved in a lively discussion in regard to their opinion about transportation issues. Restoration of old rail transportation, use of the commuter boats from Hingham, and other transportation support services were discussed. Advantages and disadvantages to both the consumer and communities involved were presented.

Mrs. Wool would like to thank the Chamber of Commerce for this excellent presentation.

Thanks for your attention. We simply want to tell you about dirty chimneys. In one year more than 60,000 chimney fires burned in the United States with deaths from these fires increasing at a rate of 69%.

Dirty chimneys can burn — and take human lives. That's why you should give us a call for an inspection of your solid fuel heating system. The inspection could reveal a dangerous chimney.

If it does, we'll sweep that chimney with precise brushes and our powerful "SootSweeper" Dust Collector. Cleanliness guaranteed!

Cohasset Little League scores

No team has yet been able to derail the Mets. With two victories over the Yankees this week, the Mets are off to a perfect 6-0 start. The Yanks as a result have dropped to 2-3 and 1. In the only other tilt this week, the Braves beat the much-improved Red Sox and improved their record to 3-2 and 1. The Sox have dropped now to 0-6.

Monday, May 16—Mets 10 - Yankess 3

David Leahy and Chris Rolandelli led the Mets to their fifth win of the year with two hits apiece. David had an RBI double on the first to jump-start the Met's offense and added a mammoth home-run to left-center in the fifth. Rolandelli hit his fourth round-tripper of the season in the sixth, a three-run blast, to cap the scoring.

On the mound "Rollie" was again much the best as he notched his fourth win of the campaign. He gave up only three hits. Tim Brister and Mike Reynolds of the Yanks both hit triples, but their three-baggers couldn't match the Met's long-ball game.

Tuesday, May 17—Braves 9 - Red Sox 2

The Braves managed only two hits off Sox starter Nicky Welz. His brave counterpart, Doug Ellinger, who victimized Welz for the two hits (and three RBIs), yielded only two hits to the Sox. Both teams played superbly in the field (errorless, I think) as both teams cut down several lead runners. Second-basemen Steve Harrington of the Braves and Kevin McKenna of the Sox were especially slick defensively.

"So what was the difference?" you ask. Fourteen walks, a manager's nightmare, is the answer. To be more detailed, six consecutive free passes capped by an Ellinger double in the third resulted in five Braves' runs, and Ellinger did the rest. Come on, Red Sox! Find the strike zone and the results will tighten and the game will be even more fun.

Friday, May 20—Mets 8 - Yankees 5

This was a good one, tightly contested throughout. The Yankees got the jump 1-0 in the top half of the first before the Mets got control briefly in the second 3-1. But the Yanks came back 4-3 in the top of third until the Mets tied it at 4 in the bottom half of the inning. The Mets again gained control 5-4 an inning later, but the Yankees surged

Principals spring track meet a highlight

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

In the spring, the most important social events of the school year appear — the junior prom and graduation. Also included in this package is the South Shore Principals Track Meet.

This year's event, consisting of 50 schools from five area league conferences (South Shore, Old Colony, Mayflower, Hockomock and the Catholics), took place at Norwell High School last Saturday. Like every other meet prior, this event, the longest running high school competition in the state, lived up to its advanced billing.

Moreover, it was especially rewarding for Nancy Riley who walked away with a first-place victory (discus, 107'5") at the meet. On the whole, Cohasset placed fourth overall as a team with 46 points.

Other athletes who provided Cohasset with a solid representation were Jen Coley, who finished second in the long jump and fourth in the 330 hurdles, and Liz O'Leary, capturing second place in the 880.

Kerry Kirkendall scored in two events (fifth in the two-mile and fourth in the javelin) for Cohasset, while teammate Tisha Wallace placed fifth in the shot put.

GIRLS' TRACK

Jen Coley won four events (high and low hurdles and long and triple jumps) for the sixth time this season, remaining undefeated in the long jump and triple jump, as Cohasset (6-1) won a battle of South Shore League once-beatens at home, a 78-58 win over East Bridgewater last Monday.

RESULTS:

100: 1. Liz O'Leary (C); 2. Alyson James (C); Rhonda Mello (EB). Winning time: 12.3.

220: 1. Sonya Butler (C); 2. Cathy Doherty (EB); 3. Michelle Hartley (C). Time: 28.1.

440: 1. Butler (C); 2. Sarah Dykes (EB); 3. Amy Crafts (C). Time: 1:02.7.

880: 1. O'Leary (C); 2. Sandy Tirrell (EB); 3. Lisa Coats (C). Time: 2:32.

Mile: 1. Kerry Kirkendall (C); 2. Lynn Slowey (EB); 3. Katie Dennehy (EB). Time: 6:08.

Two-mile: 1. Kirkendall (C); 2. Slowey (EB); 3. Sharon Flemming (EB). Time: 13:20.

100 Hurdles: 1. Coley (C); 2. tie, Shelly Solari (EB), April Schwartz (EB). Time: 17.9.

330 hurdles: 1. Coley (C); 2. Schwartz (EB); 3. Colleen McLaughlin (EB). Time: 51.2.

High jump: 1. Doherty (EB); 2. Hartley (C); 3. tie, Michelle Woodland (C), Maria Keirce (C). Height: 4' 6".

Long jump: 1. Coley (C); 2. James (C); 3. Dykes (EB). Distance: 15' 2".

Shot put: 1. Tisha Wallace (C); 2. Heather Sherman (EB); 3. Wendy Wilbur (EB). Distance: 28' 11¾".

Discus: 1. Nancy Riley (C); 2. Brenda Lee (EB); 3. Wallace (C). Distance: 94' 11".

Javelin: 1. Sherman (EB); 2. Kristine Usowicz (EB); 3. Kirkendall (C). Distance: 90' 11".

4x110 relay: 1. East Bridgewater. Time: 55.4.

4x440 relay: 1. East Bridgewater. Time 4:49.

Later in the week, the Lady Skippers ran into the best team in the South Shore Small Schools Division, Norwell, and like everybody else in the conference, Cohasset fell victim to the Clippers, 92.5 to 42.5. Norwell finishes league play undefeated (8-0), its fifth straight unbeaten season in the SSL. The Clippers have won 54 straight dual meets.

The bright spots for Cohasset were Alyson James, who was victorious in the 220 in 28.1, Liz O'Leary (first in the one-mile, 5:36), Kerry Kirkendall (first in the two-mile in 13:09), Tisha Wallace (first in the shot put, 28' 6") and Nancy Riley (first in the discus, 97' 8").

Cohasset's all-everything Jen Coley watched her consecutive victory streak in the long jump and the triple jump come to a close when she placed second behind Norwell's Karen Phillips in those events.

BOYS' TRACK

Things did not get any better for the boys' track team as they lost a league meet to Norwell (8-1) last Wednesday, 100-36. Peter Fitzsimmons won twice for the Skippers. He captured the long jump event with a leap of 19' 1", then outdueled two Norwell javelin throwers with a toss of 127' 6" for the double win.

Other first-place winners for Cohasset were John Chase (high jump in 5' 8" and the discus, 110' and John Lindsley, who took the triple jump with a winning leap of 36' 1".

BASEBALL

Pitcher Craig Mulcahy helped himself to a three-run cushion in the top of the second inning and Cohasset (6-8) went on to a South Shore League victory, 8-6, at Hanover.

The Skippers trailed, 3-1, before Mike Ellinger walked, Scott Flaherty singled and Mulcahy tied it with a two-run double. Dave Shultz plated the go-ahead run with a single and when Peter Sandblom tripled and Todd Fitzpatrick singled, Cohasset had a 6-3 lead.

BOYS' TENNIS

Rich Redick and Fred Willshire led Cohasset (11-2) to a league victory over Scituate, 5-0, last Monday at Scituate.

RESULT:

Singles: Rich Redick (C) defeated Mark Brandon (S), 7-6, 6-2; Fred Willshire (C) defeated Dave Beecher (S), 6-0, 6-0; Derek Lacks (C) defeated Matt Gilligan (S), 6-1, 7-6.

Doubles: Steve Myers and Jason Marsac (C) defeated Rob Bechtold and Mike Gilligan (S), 6-2, 6-3; Joel Reidy and Frank Willshire (C) defeated Steve Backus and Matt Keefe (S), 6-3, 6-2.

GIRLS' TENNIS

After taking two out of three singles' matches for a 2-1 lead, the Cohasset girls lost both doubles' matches as Scituate pulled out a decisive 3-2 victory over the Skippers.

RESULTS:

Singles: Kristen Gotter (S) defeated Katie Ryan (C), 6-0, 6-1. Michelle Massa (C) defeated Heather McDonnell (S), 6-4, 6-1. Amanda Church (C) defeated Marcella Gillis (S), 6-4, 7-5.

Doubles: Katy Mayo and Kristen Rivard (S) defeated Katie Murphy and Katie Lord (C), 6-0, 6-1. Hillary Gilligan and Lynn McGovern (S) defeated Ellen Schramm and Sophie Redfield (C), 6-4, 6-2.

BOYS' TENNIS

Last Friday, Redick's victory in the first singles' match clinched the contest for Cohasset as the Skipper (12-2) won a tough battle over Norwell, 3-2. With the win, Cohasset moves into second place alone, ahead of Norwell, who is 11-4 on the year.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

Norwell completed the trifecta last Wednesday when they defeated the Lady Skippers, 17-7, at Cohasset. Norwell (10-2) pushed home five runs in the top of the fifth to break open a 6-6 tie.

Cohasset's Lori Manion tied the game at six on a three-run double in the fourth, but the Skippers could not retire the first seven Norwell batters in the fifth (double, four singles and two walks) as the lead grew to 11-6 and the Clippers were never in danger thereafter.

back in the top of the fifth to knot the game at 5. The Mets finally seized command in the home half of the fifth, scoring three runs to make it 8-5.

Scott Theriault bore down in the sixth and struck out the side after the first two men had reached safety. Offensively, Scott helped his own cause with a two-run triple. David Leahy pitched in with a couple of hits and two runs batted in, and pesky Brendan Kinchla had two hits and two runs scored.

Charlie Endris and Tim Brister had perfect nights at the plate for the Yanks. Each player had three hits in as many at-bats with Brister producing four runs batted in. The Mets, by the way, executed a picture perfect 6-4-3 double play (Kamataris to Henry to Rolandelli) to snuff a fourth inning Yank rally. And that, my friends, may have been the key to the sixth Mets' win of the season!
